BIGGEST BALKAN BATTLE RAGES

ELECTION SET NEW RECORDS IN MANY WAYS

All Precedents Are Broken in the Victory of Democrats.

G. O. P. SPLIT IS CAUSE.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Altogether it was a record breaking election—perhaps a turning point in American history. Political traditions were upset, precedents nullified, and signs and portents discredited.

For the first time since Andrew Jackson a Democratic president has been reëlected in succession. For the first time a president has been elected without the vote of New York. For the first time Maine went Republican in September and the country Democratic in November.

Jackson won the presidency by a combination of the south and the new west. Wilson has been reëlected by a combination of the solid south, Ohio, and the newer far west.

DEMOCRAT PARTY SOLIDIFIED.

The Democratic party has been solidified and strengthened, abandoning traditional policies such as opposition to a protective tariff. The Republican party, unable to unite completely its liberal and conservative factions and to take a positive stand on the issues raised by the European war, Mexico, the Adamson law, and preparedness, has been shaken and stands in need of reorganization along new and definite nationalistic lines.

"The Progressive party will die first and then the G. O. P.," a Progressive leader of national reputation said to me a fortnight before the election.

"The Republican party is bankrupt, and T. R. will be its receiver in 1920," said another. The progressive Republicans think the election has proved them the logical regenerators of the party, but the Old Guard says it "dies but never surrenders."

PARTY LINES ARE BENT.

Party lines were bent and shattered by the complicated issues of the campaign, but all in favor of the Democrats. The president received tremendous support from Progressives, yet he also carried that citadel of the Old Guard, Utah, one of the two states won by Taft in 1912.

In 1912 Wilson was elected with 1,300,000 fewer votes than the Republican and Progressive poll combined. In 1916 he was elected with 400,000 more votes than the Republicans and reaffiliated Progressives. Bryan in 1896 polled a larger popular vote than any Democratic candidate for the presidency in the history of the country until Wilson in 1916 exceeded that high water mark by more than 2,000,000 votes.

MANY CHANGES SHOWN.

In September a Republican landslide swept Maine, immediately after the passage of the Adamson law. The Republican plurality was 12,000. Two months later the Republican plurality was reduced to less than 6,000. In 1912 Taft and Roosevelt together polled 75,000 votes in Maine. Hughes received 6,000 fewer votes this year, while Wilson was given 13,000 more than in 1912. The recovery of ground by the Democrats after the September election was remarkable.

In New Hampshire a Republican and Progressive strength of 50,000 votes four years ago fell to 42,700 in 1916, while Wilson gained 9,000 over 1912. The rebellion against the Old Guard was pronounced in this state.

THE CASE OF VERMONT.

In Vermont Hughes had 7,000 fewer votes than Taft and Roosevelt, while Wilson polled 6,000 more than in 1912. Massachusetts, where the progressive Republicans were still in revolt against Murray Crane, gave Hughes a plurality of 21,000, compared with the margin of 122,000 Taft and Roosevelt had over Wilson. Hughes lost 80,000, Wilson gained 74,000. In addition to the unrepaired breach between the Republican factions, prosperity and the Adamson law in labor centers contributed to Democratic success.

Wilson in Connecticut gained 25,000 over his 1912 vote, but Hughes had only 4,000 more than Taft and Roosevelt and won the state by less than 7,000. Connecticut with its great munitions factories is a center of war prosperity, and with its workers reinforced from other states, the Adamson law was popular.

Throng of 2,500 Joyful Wilsonites Parades in Loop

GOOD TIME HAD BY ALL

Democracy numbering 2,500 felicitated the loop over the reëlection of President Wilson last night and after paying brief visits to the other newspaper offices decided that after all THE TRIBUNE is the World's Greatest Newspaper, and so gathered en massé at Dearborn and Madison streets and for hours held forth in a clamorous demonstration.

"Wilson" was the chief note of their song, but the throng was good natured and effervescent with the sort of old time political, rally-round-the-flag-boys spirit that awoke the staid echoes of the night time loop.

Lack of Time for Big Parade.

Due perhaps to a lack of time for proper preparation, the Democratic parade and rally was not spectacular for its size nor magnificence. County Chairman James Dailey explained there had been only meager time for arrangements, otherwise there had been a more tempestuous outpouring.

As in cases where a tremendous procession is expected, a squad of motorcycle policemen scurried out in advance to take note of the streets as to right of way. Then came Deputy Chief Schuettler. He scanned the thin chill line of spectators and decided half the policemen on the route of march would be enough. So he ordered every other policeman along the line relieved of duty.

Led by Mounted Police.

The parade was led by a platoon of mounted police. There were 2,500 persons in the parade and it required twelve minutes for the marchers to pass a given point. This does not include a half dozen delivery wagons of the Journal, bearing the information that that paper was the only consistent supporter of the president through the campaign.

This in contradiction of transparencies explaining that the Herald was certainly the winning factor. However, there was no dispute between the rival claimants for the honor of carrying California, Arizona, and New Hampshire, and both joined in the popular trend to pay a good natured, though jestfully critical visit to The World's Greatest Newspaper, leaving Washington street hollow and echoing in the stilly night.

Forms at Karpen Building

The march formed before the Karpen building in Michigan avenue and forged north to Washington street. Immediately behind the mounted police came a band playing patriotic airs. Then, subduing the martial sounds in a violent and valiant tooting of horns, came the first contingent of some 1,000 persons. Behind these came another band and patriots given over to the bearing of banners descriptive of the decisive victory for the Herald.

Then, in order, came another band, musically supporting a pair of lusty fellows who bore aloft a slogan suggesting that the Examiner "cut some mustard" in the late proceedings. In the van came the Journal wagons with other banners, and then a finale of honking automobiles.

Arriving in Washington street the parade formed a genial knot in the center of the street and shouted gleefully in front of the morning newspaper supporter of Wilson while a number of flashlight photographs were taken. Nothing behind in the homage thus displayed were the Examiner and the

FROM CHICKENS TO $80,000, THEN DRAMA—

Then to Bankruptcy, Revealing Woman Poulterer in New Role.

NIP MRS. BLACKSTONE.

BY WALTER NOBLE BURNS.

Miss Annie E. Sharpley, poulterer in chief to high society, failed when her interest veered from the chicken business to the drama.

Her poultry farm in Melrose Park reached its apex of prosperity when 10,000 chickens filled its runways and the Lake Shore drive and Drexel boulevard bought at fancy prices all the eggs and broilers she could supply.

Her career as a playwright touched its highest pinnacle of glory when, with the manuscript of her drama, "Lights Ahead," she went to New York and was assured by a man whom she believed to be no other than the great Belasco that her play would be produced "on Broadway within two weeks."

WELL STAGED, ANYHOW.

The "Belasco" she saw, it is now believed, was a swindler, and the readers, playwrights, secretaries, and undersecretaries by whom he was surrounded were supernumeraries in a confidence game which cost Miss Sharpley thousands of dollars.

The "two weeks" have lengthened out into eight months, but still "Lights Ahead" has never been added to the effulgence of the Great White Way of the metropolis.

The lights ahead were described by those who had read the play as red danger signals, but they did not enable the unfortunate playwright to avoid the financial rocks upon which she now has crashed bows on.

Miss Sharpley, through her attorney, Richard I. Gavin, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the federal court yesterday. She scheduled liabilities of $81,707.97 and assets of $4,109.68.

MRS. BLACKSTONE A LOSER.

Mrs. T. B. Blackstone, 1912 Prairie avenue, widow of the late president of the Chicago and Alton railroad, is the principal sufferer by the failure. Mrs. Blackstone was on two notes totaling $47,000, which, it seems probable, she will have to pay. One note for $40,000, indorsed by Mrs. Blackstone, was discounted by the Continental and Commercial National bank. Another for $7,000 was cashed by the Citizens State bank of Melrose Park.

Among her other creditors, as given by Attorney Gavin, are Mrs. James McNally, $2,000; John Stanton, attorney in the Rand-McNally building, $1,000; William Littlejohn of the Rand-McNally company, $1,000, and W. J. King.

Herman Cohen of the south side was a creditor to the extent of $10,000 until last May, when he took over the land on which the Melrose Park chicken farm was operated. On this property the Illinois State bank advanced him $5,000. So Mr. Cohen, it is believed, stands alone among Miss Sharpley's creditors as having recovered anything on the money loaned.

HOW DID SHE GET IT?

Two mysteries stand out in the affairs of the remarkable woman. One is how she raised so much money without security. The other is how she spent it.

She appeared to raise money as readily as chickens. The facility with which she borrowed large sums might seem to stamp her as a sort of Cassie Chadwick of the poultry yard.

In four years she borrowed more than $80,000. To not a single one of her creditors did she give 5 cents' worth of security.

"How she did it is an enigma to me," said Attorney Gavin. "She was able to go out and borrow $10,000 as easily as I can borrow 50 cents. She talked them out of it. Her ability to raise large sums was uncanny. It suggested hypnotism.

COHEN, FOR INSTANCE.

"Take Herman Cohen, for instance. She got $10,000 out of him. Not a cent of security did she offer. Nor did he ask for any. He just indorsed her note like the rest, and she got the money. Cohen is a business man. Men of his name are usually pretty shrewd. But

Mrs. 'Billy' Mason Choked in Home by Masked Bandit

Slumber wrapped the big stone mansion of Former Senator William E. ("Billy") Mason at 3314 Washington boulevard yesterday.

In a large alcove chamber on the second floor Mrs. Mason, wife of the former senator who recently was elected congressman at large from Illinois, was sleeping. Something awakened her and she sat up to face the business end of a revolver in the hands of a masked burglar.

In one hand he held the shade of the electric drop light, which he had just switched on. With the other he leveled the gun at Mrs. Mason and commanded her to keep quiet. She promised.

"Where's Your Money?"

"Where's your valuables?" the man demanded.

She gave him her purse and her husband's money, which she was compelled to get from the adjoining room, where Mr. Mason slept. Even while in that room, out of reach of the burglar, she feared to make an outcry, for he had threatened to kill her unless she returned with the valuables without raising an alarm.

The loot amounted to $75 in money besides Mr. Mason's watch and gold charm and Mrs. Mason's jewelry.

"Is that all the stuff?" the burglar asked.

"That is all," she answered.

He then stepped forward and grabbed her by the throat. After he had choked her until she was insensible he threw her on the bed and made his escape.

Husband Finds Her.

Some time later she was found by Mr. Mason. He hastily called members of the household and summoned a physician. After an examination it was found that she suffered from a hemorrhage. She was revived.

"A burglar!" she gasped, when able to speak.

The detective bureau was called and Chief of Detectives Charles L. Larkin assigned men on the case.

There were marks on the sill of the pantry window, and on the shade of the drop light in Mrs. Mason's chamber perfect prints of the burglar's left thumb and second and third fingers were found.

HUGHES' MINNESOTA LEAD INCREASED BY GUARDS' VOTE

Two More Regiments to Be Heard from Before Total Ballot Will Be Known.

The electoral vote so far as determined remains as previously announced: Wilson, 276; Hughes, 243. Minnesota's 12 in doubt.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 11.—Charles E. Hughes' plurality was increased today when the first results of the Minnesota guardsmen were announced. The Ramsey county soldiers voted Wilson, 137; Hughes, 116. Hennepin county soldiers, Wilson, 243; Hughes, 293. Washington county soldiers, Wilson, 28; Hughes, 9. Soldiers' total for Wilson, 408; Hughes, 418. This makes the total for the state: Wilson, 178,544; Hughes, 178,792, and the Hughes plurality 248. There are two regiments to hear from.

Few missing precincts remain to be heard from. They are mainly from the north, Wilson territory, but are not strong in votes.

BRITISH WRITER ASSERTS ALLIED COMMANDS FAIL.

Says It Will Cost Millions in Casualties to Repair Mistakes—War Until 1918.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—J. L. Garvin, writing in The Observer, predicts that unless the entente allies come to more vigorous decisions the war will be prolonged far into 1918.

"The allies in the east have perpetrated almost every blunder left to them to commit," writes Editor Garvin, "after a previous record of mismanagement that seemed well nigh exhaustive. The prospect is not disastrous, but is disagreeable, as the fault is reparable only at the cost of several million avoidable casualties and thousands of millions in money, which might have been saved."

Columbian Sunk by a U-Boat; Crew Landed in Spain

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The American steamer Columbian was sunk by a U-boat, according to a Lloyd's dispatch.

The Lloyds dispatch apparently was confirmed in later dispatches from Madrid, which said the crew, half of whom are Americans, had been landed on the Spanish coast, together with the crews of the three steamers which also were torpedoed probably by the same U-boat which attacked the Columbian. The combined crews numbered 163 men.

The Lloyds' dispatch reporting the sinking of the Columbian, an American-Hawaiian freighter, bound from Boston to Brest, via English ports, was the first news of the ship since it wirelessed to the British admiralty on Tuesday an "S. O. S." call that was followed several hours later by another air message saying two U-boats held it up and that one of them shelled it.

No Details of Attack.

No mention is made in any of the dispatches regarding details of the attack. The Madrid message of this afternoon merely stated all members of its crew landed there and said it had been torpedoed. Whether it was torpedoed without warning or whether it was warned, tried to escape, was then shelled, an afterwards destroyed, will only be known from affidavits of the crew.

The Columbian is under American registry but was under charter by a foreign government.

Seven More Ships Sunk.

Three Norwegians, three British, and one Danish ship are reported sunk by German submarines.

The vessels lost were:

TRIPEL (Norwegian).
BALTO (Norwegian).
FORDALEN (Norwegian).
BOGOTA (British).
MURGA (British).
EARL (British).
FREJA (Danish).

Lloyds' reports that seventeen of the crew of the Bogota have been picked up and that two boats are missing. No mention is made of the fate of the crews of the Marga, Earl, or Freja.

Reuters' reports that thirty-six of the crew of the Tripel have been saved and that the crews of the Balto and Fordalen have been landed.

CHICAGO ACTRESS ELOPES.

Kate Pentzer Becomes Wife of Kenneth Stokes, Indiana Theatrical Manager.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 11.—Kate Winifred Pentzer, 22, pretty Chicago actress, and Kenneth M. Stokes, 26, a theatrical manager from Elmwood, Ind., were married here in Justice Doty's court today. They wanted an Episcopal minister to marry them, but the Rev. Henry Tatlock of the Episcopal church here will not perform the marriage ceremony unless a medical certificate accompanies the request.

Woman Killed as Car Hits Auto; Two Men Injured

A woman was killed and two men hurt, one of them seriously, shortly after midnight this morning when an automobile in which they were riding collided head-on with a street car at Thirteenth and South Clark streets.

Mrs. A. R. Wilson, 35 years old, of 827 East Forty-ninth street, was killed. She was thrown from the automobile and her neck was broken.

The injured are: A. R. Wilson, her husband, and Earl Anderson, living at 3900 Cottage Grove avenue, a friend of the Wilsons.

It required the efforts of five policemen to restrain Wilson from doing injury to himself.

Wilson is garage manager for the Robert M. Cutting company, 2635 South Wabash avenue. A half dozen passengers in the street car escaped with a bad shaking up.

OVERTURNED AUTO HOLDS HIM PRISONER ALL NIGHT

John Hodge, Once Head of Antioch Schools, Pinned Down When Car Turns Turtle.

Waukegan, Ill., Nov. 11.—John Hodge, insurance agent and former principal of Antioch schools, had a miraculous escape at 11 o'clock last night when his auto turned turtle within a stone's throw of his home and pinned him under the machine, where he lay a prisoner all night. At 6 o'clock this morning John Jaeger passed and found Hodge. Jaeger ran to a neighboring farm house and rounded up men to lift the car off Hodge.

"The Tribune" this morning presents the first of a series of articles by Miss Madeleine Z. Doty, outlining the real conditions in Germany. Miss Doty made an extended trip in Germany to gather the facts for her articles, which were written after her return to this country, thus escaping both the German and British censors. The first article will be found on page 10, part 1.

VICIOUS FIGHT FOR BIG BRIDGE OVER DANUBE

CONSTANZA IN FLAMES

EUROPEAN WAR SUMMARY

Violent battle raging for giant bridge over Danube in Dobrudja. Fate of Bucharest hangs on outcome of conflict. Cernavoda and Constanza reported burning. Draw battle in Transylvania.

American-Hawaiian steamer Columbian believed sunk by submarine. Crew reported landed at Corunna, Spain. Seven other ships sunk.

Both British and French win new ground in fighting to north of Somme river.

Petrograd reports recapture of part of positions near Baranovichi taken by Germans; Berlin asserts all Russian attempts to regain lost ground were repulsed.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The fate of Bucharest, capital of Roumania, hangs on the result of the terrific battle now raging in the vicinity of Cernavoda in Dobrudja.

Gigantic efforts of Field Marshal von Mackensen to secure control of the bridgehead leading to the twelve mile span across the Danube, which carries the beginning of the direct road to Bucharest, is being opposed tenaciously by a combined Russo-Roumanian army equipped with the latest type of heavy artillery.

WOULD PAVE WAY FOR DRIVE.

Should the Germans gain control of this bridgehead at Cernavoda, they will be in a position to repair the structure, which was partially wrecked by the Roumanians during their retreat before Von Mackensen's drive, and advance on Bucharest.

An unofficial dispatch says the bridge has been repaired and that a small force of Germans has crossed into old Roumania, but this report cannot be confirmed and is not believed in military circles here to be true.

REPORT GERMAN RETREAT.

Advices from Rome say that Von Mackensen is retreating from his positions about Cernavoda and that a great fire is raging in that vicinity, indicating that the German-Bulgar-Turko forces are using the torch. The Bulgarian population of Dobrudja is fleeing to the Bulgarian border.

Directly opposite in nature to this news is a dispatch from Berlin which says Von Mackensen's artillery has forced Russo-Roumanian troops, which had advanced to the left bank of the Danube near Cernavoda, to retire toward the station at Dunarea, which is on the long trestle spanning the marshes to the west. The dispatch also chronicles the repulse of the enemy north of the villages of Rahova, Barak, and Lidschuma.

CONSTANZA IN FLAMES.

Constanza, the biggest seaport which Roumania boasts, and which has been in German hands for some time, is in flames, Petrograd reports.

The city has been under a terrific fire from the Russian Black sea fleet and great damage has been caused. Reservoirs of benzine and naphtha were exploded and the resultant fires, fanned by the wind, spread rapidly and burned for two days. There were no means of controlling the flames, as the Roumanians had removed the fire apparatus when they evacuated the city. Heavy losses were inflicted on the garrison, the dispatch adds.

Digesting news from all sources, military critics here conclude that the Slavonic armies have a temporary advantage in their efforts against von Mackensen.

ROUMANIAN WAR REPORT.

The Bucharest war office was unusually brief in its report on the situation, declaring that it was unchanged. The report on other fronts follows:

Northern and northwestern fronts—We repulsed three enemy attacks in the Slanic valley in Moldavia. In the Buzeu valley, at Table Butzi and at Predius the situation is unchanged.

In the Prahova valley the enemy made several attacks after violent artillery bombardment. He was repulsed and our troops maintained their positions. In the region of Dragoslavie, notwithstanding the enemy's bombardment, we captured a trench.

On the left bank of the Alt violent fighting continues. We made progress toward the north and captured Mount Fruitzile. On the right bank of the Alt we arrested attacks of the enemy at Rigioul and Saracinesti. Fighting is in progress on Moldovis hill, east of the Jiul.

RUSSIAN WAR REPORT.

The Russian war report on Roumanian operations follows:

South of Dorna Watra all enemy attempts to attack our detachments in the region of Belbor, Hollo, and Tolesh were arrested by our fire and counter attacks.

Transylvania front—In the valley of the Argis river enemy preparations for an offensive have been observed. In other sectors nothing of importance has occurred.

On the right bank of the Danube we occupied the villages of Topal and Ghisdarechti. In Dobrudja our detachments made a further advance south.

German War Report.

The German war report on Balkan operations says:

Macedonian front—South of Korca engagements of our detachments against French troops developed.

In the eastern part of Monastir plain and on the heights north of the River Cerna French and Serbian forces attempted several attacks, which failed under losses. Only south of Polog the enemy entered our most advanced position.

Attacks of German and Austro-Hungarian troops on the Transylvanian northeastern front progressed successfully. West of the road from Predeal to Sinaya several intrenched Roumanian lines were taken at the point of the bayonet.

Along the pass roads further west there were only minor engagements yesterday, during which we captured some positions on the heights.

Reports Serbian Victory.

Of the operations in Macedonia, a Reuter dispatch from Saloniki says:

"Serbian troops in a series of attacks on Friday north of the Cerna river entered the village of Polog, three miles north of Skochivir, and captured 600 prisoners. The attacks against the Bulgarian positions met with complete success, and the Serbians captured strongly organized positions on the Chuke range, by assault and occupied the southern half of the village of Polog.

"The Serbians inflicted enormous losses and in addition to the 600 prisoners took ten officers, including a lieutenant colonel, several howitzers and field guns and other material."

The following official communication from the Macedonian front was issued here today:

Enemy bivouacs at Provista have been successfully shelled by naval guns. Our patrols and artillery are continually active on both fronts, notwithstanding bad weather.

French War Report.

The French official report on operations in Macedonia follows:

On the left bank of the Cerna the Serbians, taking the offensive vigorously in the mountainous region of Chuke, north of Skochivir, drove the Bulgarian forces back, notwithstanding fierce resistance from strongly fortified positions. Up to now 500 prisoners, including ten officers, ten guns, and ten machine guns, have fallen into the hands of our allies.

On our left wing a lively artillery duel continues. We repulsed several enemy attempts at different points on our front.

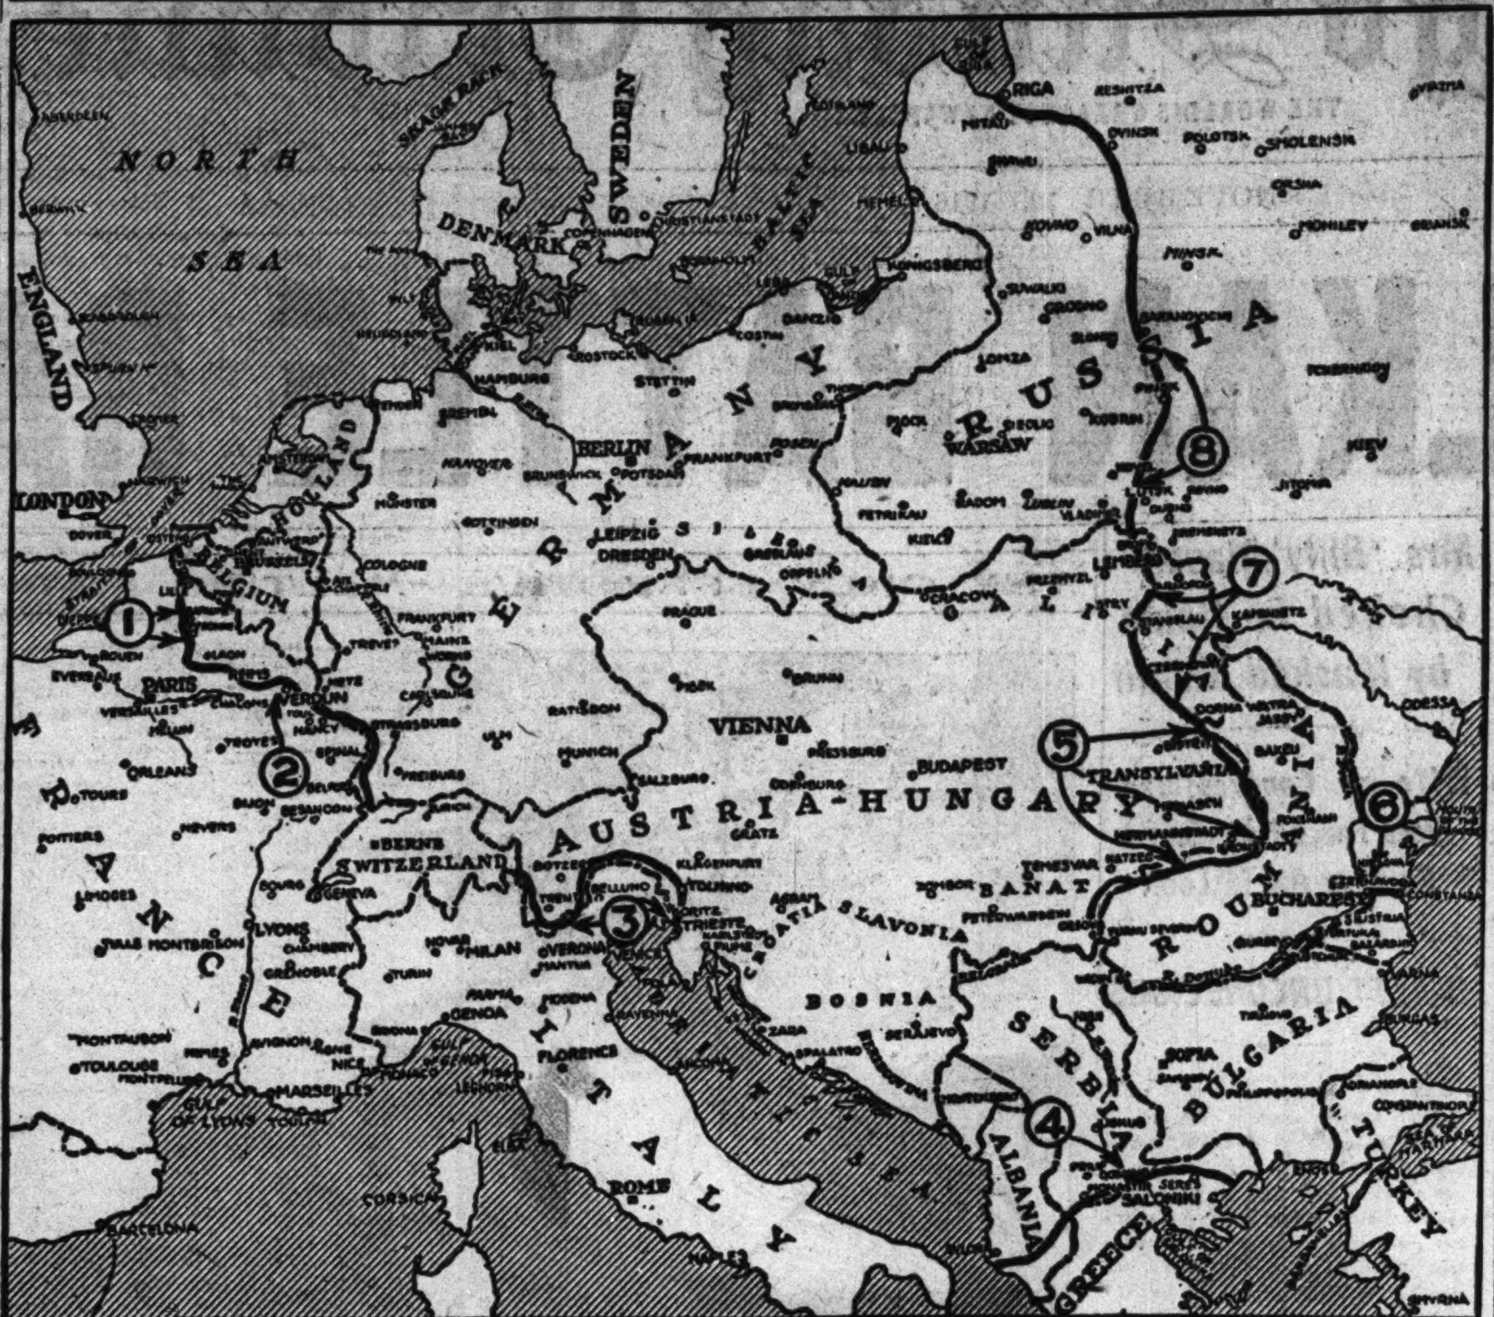
DEVELOPMENTS ON EUROPEAN BATTLE FRONTS



1—Weather conditions on west front prevented extended operations along the Somme. Artillery activity and small trench raids made up for the most part the activities in Picardy. Tuesday the French captured German trenches on a two and one-half mile front south of the Somme from Chaulnes wood to southeast of Ablaincourt.

Friday British captured continuation of Regina trench northeast of Thiepval for a distance of 1,000 yards.

Counter offensives attempted by Germans are reported to have been repulsed.

2—At Verdun heavy artillery activity continued during the week, the French consolidating their recently won positions north of Fort Douaumont, northeast and east of Fort Vaux. Counter attacks by Germans were repulsed and all efforts by the crown prince's forces to recover lost ground were repulsed.

3—Heaviest operations on the Italian fronts were confined to the fighting on the Carso plateau during the week. Heavy snowfalls in the mountains and torrential rains along the lower Isonzo hampered offensive movements and also artillery activities. The pressure towards Triest was continued by Gen. Cadorna, the Italians straightening out their lines with small advances and consolidating positions on the Carso plateau.

4—The arrival of Gen. Roques, French minister of war, at Saloniki early last week was taken to indicate the beginning of a new Macedonian offensive. There was considerable activity during the week along the front facing Monastir. In the Lake Presba region and in the bend of the Cerna river there were attacks by both Bulgarians and Serbs without any decisive result.

5—Along the northern and northwestern fronts the Austro-German forces continued heavy pressure on the Roumanian side of the Transylvanian mountain passes, especially south of Hermannstadt and Kronstadt. To the north, in the region south of Dorna Watra, the Teutonic forces launched a heavy counter offensive with a view to checking a flanking movement by the Russo-Roumanian forces. No progress of importance was reported by either side.

6—Developments in the Dobrudja campaign were rapidly approaching a climax as the week closed. Von Mackensen's forces were gradually withdrawn from advance positions above Hirsova to the south as far as the Constanza-Cernavoda line. Both these Roumanian towns were reported to be in flames. The significance of the Bulgar-German retirement was clouded by conflicting reports. Petrograd and Bucharest reported this movement was forced by pressure of Roumanian and Russian forces. From Teutonic sources it was reported that the Cernavoda bridge had been repaired by German engineers and a decisive battle was in progress to force a crossing into old Roumania. The burning of Constanza was attributed to a bombardment by the Russian Black sea fleet.

7—Southeast of Lemberg and farther south as far as the Carpathians, in the Kirlibaba region, the Austro-Germans attacked. Petrograd reported the repulse of Germans at various points on the Galician and Carpathian fronts.

8—Attacks by the Teuton forces north of the Pinsk marshes, in the region of Baranovichi, during the week indicated the launching of a new offensive by Von Hindenburg against Gen. Brussiloff's right flank to relieve the pressure on Kovel and Lemberg. On a two and a half mile front the Germans took the Russian first line trenches, part of which were retaken by counter attacks. The Germans reported the capture of 3,000 prisoners and a number of guns.

ALLIES SUCCEED AT TWO POINTS NORTH OF SOMME

British and French Both Report Gains—Regina Trench Has Been Captured.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The steady pressure of the allies in France last night and today resulted in further gains. The British last night stormed 1,000 yards of "Regina trench," the important position on the northern end of the Somme front.

The French have taken the greater part of Saillisel village. The fighting continues, according to the bulletin issued by the Paris war office tonight.

British Official Report.

The official statement by the British war office says:

Last night the eastern portion of Regina trench, being a continuation of the trench captured by us in our successful assault of Oct. 21, was stormed and captured on a front of 1,000 yards in spite of a heavy enemy barrage. The new trench has been joined up with the old line and the position secured.

Paris Tells of Success.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The official report issued by the ministry of war tonight said:

We delivered a sharp attack on the village of Saillisel (on the Bapaume-Peronne road), a greater part of which we recaptured. Our troops are occupying the northeastern and southeastern outskirts. The struggle continues in the eastern part of the village.

South of the Somme an attempt by the Germans against our position south of Pressoire was repulsed with bombs.

German Official Report.

ARMENIAN RELIEF BODY SENDS $32,000 TO EAST

The response to the president's proclamation setting aside Oct. 21 and Oct. 22 as Armenian and Syrian relief days has been that Chicago has contributed and forwarded to the New York committee $32,000. This, added to the contribution sent in the spring, makes the total sent in by the Chicago committee direct $51,000.

Large additional amounts have been sent by private citizens of Chicago direct to the general committee.

Contributions are still coming in, as the public has come to understand better the terrible conditions existing among the sufferers.

The American committee is so well organized for distributing relief through American consuls and missionaries that $50,000 contributed by Syrians in Cairo, Egypt, is now on the way to New York to be forwarded and administered from this country.

GERMANS' ENVOY CAUSES ARREST FOR BLACKMAIL

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—Karl Armgaard Graves, self-styled international spy and magazine writer, was arrested today by agents of the department of justice and charged with attempting to extort $3,000 from Countess von Bernstorff, wife of the German ambassador, by threatening to publish letters "alleged to contain matter showing her infirmities and failings."

Officials of the embassy also allege that Graves had in his possession what apparently were confidential coded diplomatic dispatches from the German government to Count von Bernstorff.

Graves told the federal agents he obtained all the documents from persons who smuggled them past the British censors on the steamship Oscar II. The warrant upon which he was arraigned tonight and held on $2,000 bail for a further hearing Wednesday charges him also with bringing into the District of Columbia letters stolen in Hoboken, N. J., where the Oscar II. docks.

Denies Blackmail Plan.

In a statement after his arraignment at which he entered a plea of not guilty. Graves asserted that he had no intention of blackmailing the countess; that he objected to the use of the word blackmail, and that the papers he had in his possession were "purely diplomatic" in character.

The arrest of Graves furnished a dramatic conclusion to negotiations which had been in progress for a week between him and Prince Hatzfeldt, counsellor of the German embassy. Graves is said to have come to Washington last week and called at the embassy.

He was known there as the man who had published widely what he alleged to be important secrets of the German war office and the Hohenzollerns. He also was known as a man who previously had described himself as a member of the German secret service and later as an employé in foreign fields of the British foreign office. "The master spy," he called himself.

Claims Other Letters.

Officials allege that upon entering the office of Prince Hatzfeldt he made it known that he had in his possession the papers which today brought about his arrest. One letter which he exhibited was to the Countess von Bernstorff from her son, an officer in the German army. He said, according to statements made by federal officials tonight, that he had other letters that would prove "embarrassing" for the countess should they be published.

The official dispatches were said to be useless to him for the reason that he could not decipher them. He is alleged to have asked for $3,000 in cash if he delivered the papers. He also is alleged to have asked Prince Hatzfeldt to prepare and sign a statement that the money had been paid for services to the German government.

Embassy officials said Graves threatened to turn over some of the documents to White House officials if the $3,000 was not forthcoming.

Obtained from Messenger.

The letters showed no postmark and officials of the embassy were convinced that they had been obtained in some manner from a confidential messenger. Prince Hatzfeldt promised to take the matter under consideration.

Prince Hatzfeldt communicated with the district attorney's office. Prince Hatzfeldt put $3,000 into an envelope and with two agents of the department of justice went to await Graves. Graves called on Prince Hatzfeldt at his home. Hidden detectives heard their conversation. Leaving the house, Graves walked into the arms of a federal agent and was taken to the department of justice, where he was examined by A. Bruce Bielaski, in charge of the bureau of investigation. All the papers in Graves' possession were taken from him.

"Embarrassing" to Countess.

The letter which Graves is alleged to have said would prove "embarrassing" to Countess von Bernstorff was couched, federal investigators asserted, in "endearing terms" and signed with initials only. It was asserted by the officials that the communication was from a woman cousin of Count von Bernstorff.

When Graves was searched detectives found a small combination knife and pistol. Graves told them it was "just a noise maker," and that the bullet it carried "would not even pierce a man's coat."

Graves, in his widely published so-called exposé of international spying, described many sensational episodes, including purported interviews with the emperor of Germany, and what he claimed to be the whole of the German spy system.

DEUTSCHLAND NOT TO SAIL FROM U. S. FOR A FEW DAYS.

Clearance Papers Will Not Be Issued to Capt. Koenig Before Tomorrow—Mail Taken Aboard.

New London, Conn., Nov. 11.—No clearance papers had been issued to Capt. Paul Koenig of the German commercial submarine Deutschland tonight and none will be issued tomorrow, according to Joseph C. Comstock, deputy collector of customs here. Members of the vessel's crew in the city on shore leave, said also that their vessel would not leave port tonight or Sunday.

Two men were at work on the vessel's engines today, and the delay in sailing is believed to be due to the fact that the machinery has not yet been finally overhauled. However, the Deutschland, it was learned, has already submerged four times and today was again put through a full test by Capt. Koenig, who has not left his vessel since Thursday night.

Eight mail sacks containing, according to Vice President Paul G. Hilken of the Eastern Forwarding company, mail from the German embassy arrived from Washington tonight in charge of two members of the embassy staff and were conveyed to the Deutschland.

Rumors were current tonight that German naval submarines U-57 and U-59 might be expected here at any time to act as convoys for the Deutschland.

BREAKS UP PEACE MEETING HELD IN CARDIFF, WALES.

Crowd of Patriotic Demonstrators Breaks Down Doors and Fist Fight Follows—Women in Melee.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—A conference at Cardiff, Wales, in favor of opening peace negotiations arranged by the National Council of Civil Liberties, was broken up today, a dispatch from Cardiff says. A crowd of patriotic demonstrators broke into the hall and severe fighting resulted. There were no casualties.

The president of the South Wales Miners' federation was in the chair. Speeches were made by James H. Thomas and Ramsay MacDonald, members of the house of commons.

The delegates to the conference appeared to be mostly young men of military age. A number of women also were present. The crowd which broke up the meeting numbered several thousand. It met with stout resistance from within, but eventually the doors were broken down. Fist fighting followed, in which it is reported that women delegates fought fiercely. Some stones thrown from without broke windows.

Mr. Thomas was dragged from the platform and narrowly escaped serious injury. When the demonstrators were in full possession of the hall they waved flags and sang "God Save the King."

STOP MEETING OF WOMEN.

RUSSIANS REGAIN SOME OF GROUND WON BY TEUTONS

Petrograd Reports Lines Near Baranovichi Reoccupied—Berlin Makes Denial.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 11.—Determined counter attacks by the Russians have resulted in the recapture of a portion of the position taken from them yesterday by the Germans near Skrobowa, in the Baranovichi region, the war office announced today, as follows:

> In the region of the Skrobowa farm our troops by stubborn counter attacks recaptured a section of the trench lost yesterday. The battle slackened toward evening.
> East of the Narayuvka river, in Galicia, southeast of Lemberg, in the region of the villages of Lipnicadolna and Svisteiniki, the enemy conducted fierce attacks throughout the day against the ridge we occupied. All attacks were repelled by our fire and by the bayonet. In the afternoon after repeated assaults the enemy succeeded in pushing back portions of one of our regiments, but in the evening the enemy was driven out of the trenches he had occupied and our position was reëstablished.
> In the wooded Carpathians the enemy assumed the offensive against our detachments in the region three miles south of Dzemdron. He was repelled.

German Official Statement.

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—Russian forces yesterday tried in vain by the use of strong new forces to recapture the position stormed by us the day previously at Skrobowa, near Baranovichi. All the attacks broke down under heavy losses, says today's German official statement.

German troops penetrated the main Russian positions southwest of Folv-Krasnolesie and repulsed five violent counter attacks launched at night. The statement follows:

> Front of Prince Leopold—The Russians vainly tried with strong new forces brought there to recapture positions they had lost near Skrobowa. Their attacks broke down with heavy losses. On the Narayuvka, southeast of Lemberg, German troops penetrated the Russian main position southwest of Folv-Krasnolesie and during the night repulsed five violent counter attacks by the enemy.

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—[By wireless to Sayville, N. The proclamation is signed by Gov. Gen. Beseler and Gen. Kuk.

Representatives of the League of the Polish Commonwealth today forwarded to Emperor William through the governor general a telegram expressing thanks for the proclamation of the Polish kingdom, which is described as a guarantee of the fulfillment of the most ardent national ambitions of the Poles.

"We recognize the confidence in us and answer it with equal confidence," says the telegram. PERSHING SCOUT, HELD IN JUAREZ, MAY BE FREED

Andres Garcia Returns from Washington and Takes Up Border Investigation.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 11.—The matter of the release of Benjamin Brahan, one of Gen. Pershing's scouts held in Juarez as a Villa spy, was taken up with Gen. Bell tonight by Andres Garcia, inspector general of Mexican consulate, who arrived here late today from an official trip to Washington and New York.

Mr. Garcia said that he was examining the evidence against Brahan, who is alleged to have held a commission in Villa's army, adding that if no case was found the scout would be released immediately. The same course, he said, would be taken in regard to Joseph Williams, a member of the Mormon colony at Colonia Dublan, accused of having been caught with stolen cattle.

A train arriving tonight at Juarez from Chihuahua City brought 350 passengers, mostly peons, but no American or foreign refugees, as was expected here by government officials. None of the passengers crossed the international bridge tonight.

HIRAM JOHNSON SAYS HIS RIVALS LOST CALIFORNIA

Governor Asserts Otis and Others Caused Hughes' Defeat by Tricking Him.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 11.—Replying to an editorial in the Los Angeles Times blaming him for the defeat of Mr. Hughes for president, Gov. Hiram W. Johnson today issued a statement in which he said the "stand pat" Republicans are responsible.

"If California has been the deciding factor in this election," he said, "W. H. Crocker, Francis V. Keesling, Harrison Gray Otis, and a few others, acting in concert with them, have the distinction of having made a president of the United States, and Woodrow Wilson owes them a debt of gratitude.

Says Hughes Was Misused.

"Californians know what lost this state to Hughes. A few petty politicians, acting with the Los Angeles Times and one or two others, so misused Mr. Hughes and his visit to California that the injury they did we were unable to undo.

"When Mr. Hughes came into our state, Crocker and Keesling, aided and abetted by a small coterie, created a situation in which they made it appear that Mr. Hughes was reactionary and that he was neither in accord with nor sympathetic with California's progress and achievement. Californians looked aghast and believed the situation created by Crocker, Keesling, and the Times revealed the mind of Mr. Hughes, and that the mind thus revealed was what long ago California had passed by and repudiated.

Affronted Many Persons.

"These little politicians, doing their little politics, preferred the gratification of their malice and the momentary triumph of their prejudice to the success of the Republican presidential candidate.

"They not only affronted Progressives and ignored Progressive leaders but in San Francisco, with equal stupidity, they ignored San Francisco's greatest vote getter, Mayor James Rolph Jr., and in Los Angeles treated in like fashion the newly created lieutenant governor, William D. Stevens, both of whom were registered Republicans."

Johnson said that while he was campaigning the state for Hughes the papers which opposed him personally would give no publicity to his meetings.

Says Paper Abused Him.

"I would talk and argue for Hughes at night, and in the morning the Times would be filled with foul billingsgate against me," he said.

"California citizenship is proud, sensitive, discriminating, independent, and educated. No man, or set of men, can deliver it, or any part of it. When Hughes first came to California our people saw first with amazement, then with sadness, then with increasing indignation, that apparently he was wholly in charge of those who represented the old system, and the picture presented to our people was one that Crocker, Keesling, and Otis and the few acting with them so impressed upon the recollection of our electorate that, despite our efforts, it could not be wholly eliminated."

VIEW OF EUROPE UPON ELECTION

Berlin Expects Wilson to Make a Fight for World Peace.

EFFECT UPON TARIFF.

BERLIN, Nov. 11, by wireless to the Associated Press.—The German newspapers received the news of President Wilson's reëlection with skepticism and generally wait for the final announcement before again venturing extensive comment, but appear to feel little need for revising the opinions based on the first reports since at that time they took the standpoint that it made little difference to Germany whether Mr. Hughes or President Wilson was successful.

May Try for Peace.

The Tageblatt points out that Wilson's election, if confirmed, indicates a continuation of present policies, with the possible dropping of such cases as were introduced for campaign reasons.

President Wilson, it adds, probably will now devote himself with increased vigor to the idea of an international peace organization, which, as the debate in the reichstag main committee showed, will be received sympathetically in Germany.

Another favorable aspect of the latest news, the Tageblatt concludes, is that the reëlection of Wilson will prevent a return by the United States to a high tariff system and will be helpful to future German-American commercial relations.

See Vigorous Foreign Policy.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Newspapers in England that rejoiced over President Wilson's defeat when it was prematurely announced here now are silent. Others which awaited definite result of the presidential election in their comment expressed the conviction that a more vigorous foreign policy may be expected from Washington now that the election is over.

The Globe, expressing the opinion that the war, which is the "only real issue before any body of civilized men," hardly entered into the presidential contest, says:

May Be More Independent.

"The mass of the American people ask for nothing more than peace at almost any price with the liberty to gather wealth."

Still, the Globe says, the result has importance for the belligerents and for President Wilson, adding:

"No longer preoccupied with thoughts of votes it would not be surprising if his attitude toward foreign affairs underwent an immediate stiffening."

The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"The mere fact of the election being over is calculated to strengthen American diplomacy."

The Star says:

"The most satisfactory feature of the situation is that while the return of Mr. Wilson is no victory for the entente allies, it is unquestionably a defeat for Germany."

NEW HAMPSHIRE TO WILSON.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 11.—New Hampshire has cast her four electoral votes for Woodrow Wilson. Official returns from all election districts in the eleven counties of the state give: Wilson, 43,787; Hughes, 43,724. Wilson's lead, 63.

PRESS COMMENT AS TO OUTCOME OF THE ELECTION

All Accept Result as Verdict of Majority—Some See Warning to Wilson.

Newspapers over the country comment in varying tenor on the outcome of the presidential election. Regardless of their political faith, all accept the result as a verdict of the majority by which the nation must abide, but some see in the closeness of the vote a warning to President Wilson.

BOSTON GLOBE [Dem.]—The country has indorsed President Wilson. This does not mean that the country failed to recognise that he has made mistakes, for, being human, he has made them. It means something which lies deeper in the hearts of the American people—that they preferred the kind of mistakes President Wilson makes, and the spirit in which they are made, as well as his kind of achievement.

BOSTON HERALD [Rep.]—The one great rebuke which the president gets in this election comes in the almost unprecedented opposition majority in New Jersey. It is, incidentally, interesting that the home states of both Wilson and Marshall went against them, while New York and Indiana cast their electoral votes for Hughes and Fairbanks.

NEW YORK HERALD [Ind.]—What is past is past. Let us rub off the slate and begin all over again, but write on that slate in letters so large that this time they cannot again be overlooked the words "single presidential term." A single term of six or seven years would seem the best solution of the problem.

NEW YORK SUN [Rep.]—The president elected is the president not only for those who supported him, but for every patriotic and devoted American, and good luck to him and wisdom commensurate with the mighty task before him in the next four years.

NEW YORK TIMES [Dem.]—If Mr. Roosevelt had been the Republican candidate nobody can tell what would have happened. But Mr. Roosevelt is a genius, a sort of elemental force. Mr. Hughes can't be blamed for not being a Roosevelt. Besides, one is enough.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE [Rep.]—Tuesday's election demonstrated beyond dispute the nondeliverability of the union labor vote. The vote which reëlected Mr. Wilson came largely from the rural districts, from states in which there is only a trace of highly unionized labor.

NEW YORK WORLD [Dem.]—President Wilson will enter his second term with a clean slate. The old issues are dead. The old political alignments are broken. The president has no friends whom he is under obligations to reward. He owes nothing to any political organization.

NEW YORK STAATS-ZEITUNG—The battle is over for the time being. The people have indorsed Wilson's policies of government. This doesn't mean that we are to cease fighting. But it does mean that, in good, fair American style, we must give to the victor a good chance to show that he, too, has learned something in the course of the struggle—"A new leaf."

PHILADELPHIA PUBLIC LEDGER [Rep.]—There is no present reason to suppose that the recounts that are to be demanded in several states will alter the outstanding fact that the verdict of the nation has been given, not for Mr. Hughes, as was supposed Tuesday night, but for President Wilson. The country as a whole has given its vote of confidence to the president.

PHILADELPHIA RECORD [Dem.]—Aside from its magnificent vindication of President Wilson and his policies, the great outstanding fact of Tuesday's election is that for the first time in over twenty years the Democratic party stands completely rehabilitated as a great political organization. Four years ago, when Mr. Wilson was first elected, he was a minority president.

ST. PAUL DISPATCH (Rep.)—Mr. Wilson has been told by his political opponents and the closeness of the poll that America does not entirely approve of his mistakes. We think this will be a lesson and that his mistakes will be corrected in the future.

ST. PAUL DAILY NEWS (Dem.)—The west did it. The great big, sober, steady, sane west. The west that gives the east its bread and puts the meat upon its table. It did not want war, nor sky high protective tariff walls, nor dollar diplomacy, nor jingoism. Hereafter when a party writes its platform and picks its candidates it will pay less attention to what and who will carry New York and more to what the west wants.

MILWAUKEE SENTINEL (Rep.)—The people apparently have chosen, although by a narrow margin, and have decided to continue Mr. Wilson in office rather than risk the experiment of a change.

MILWAUKEE FREE PRESS (Rep.)—Woodrow Wilson had a warning which he cannot fail to notice. He has been told in unmistakable figures that he has outraged the sentiment and convictions of nearly half of his fellow citizens.

MANN SPEAKS AT DINNER.

Commercial Club of Chicago Holds First of Season's Banquets.

The first of the season's dinners of the Commercial club of Chicago was held last evening at the Blackstone hotel. James B. Forgan, the president, was chairman and introduced the speaker of the evening, Congressman James R. Mann. The subject of Mr. Mann's address was the methods of procedure in congress, particularly in the house. Practically all of the Chicago members of the house were guests at the dinner.

"REDS" RECALL HANGING WITH SOCIAL EVENT

Meeting at East End Hall Attended by Anarchists Big and Little.

Flowing black ties and wavy hair to match were in evidence at East End hall, 635 North Clark street, last night when the anarchists of Chicago met in a social gathering to commemorate the twenty-ninth anniversary of the Haymarket riot which resulted in the hanging of four anarchists. Speakers of nationalist and internationalist renown in anarchist circles told of brethren now in jails in various parts of the country for breaking the capitalists' law.

Four and 5 year old anarchists toddled about the hall claiming fierce eyed men for fathers and mild eyed women for mothers. Sprinkled here and there in the audience were university students gathering material for themes.

Ben Reitman Presides.

Ben Reitman presided, and his heavy voice resounded throughout the hall, despite the many arguments and discussions, in as many different languages, which sometimes discouraged the speechmakers. In turn, Miss Emma Goldman, anarchist; Mrs. Albert J. Parsons, "wife of the anarchist murdered in the county jail"; William Haywood, general organizer for the I. W. W., and Edward J. Morgan, representing the street car workers of San Francisco, were introduced amid handclapping and arguments.

Stenographer on Job.

A stenographer took down every word uttered to forestall the police department, which always has a stenographer present. The hope is that some day the two stenographers will disagree.

Following the announcement of a number of meetings Sunday morning, Ben Reitman said: "Every one of you should attend these meetings. There is no excuse now for any of you to go to church Sunday."

TWO MORE LIFT VICTIMS.

Harry Humbeutel and Isaac Bersky Die as Result of Florsheim Injuries.

Two more deaths have resulted from the elevator accident last Wednesday morning in the plant of the Florsheim Shoe company, bringing the total up to six. The recent deaths are those of Harry Humbeutel of 1858 North Keystone avenue, and Isaac Bersky of 1416 West Twelfth street.

ROOSTER LAYS GOLDEN EGG.

Mr. Ragen Heard Him Crow and Then Placed a Bet on Wilson.

Gary, Ind., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Because he is a bit superstitious, Elm Ragon is $50 ahead. A few minutes after midnight on the morning of election day Ragon, who is a Republican, heard a rooster crow. Taking this as an unfavorable omen for Hughes, he placed a bet on Wilson.

"YOU NEVER PAY MORE AT BERNARDS"

PLAN TO CLEAN THE G. O. P. FROM TOP TO BOTTOM

Biggest Fight for Control of Machinery Party Has Ever Known Impends.

BY PERRY ARNOLD.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

New York, Nov. 11.—The Republican party is to be reorganized. It is to be shaken up thoroughly. The biggest internal fight for control of the party machinery that the G. O. P. has known is impending.

While Republican chieftains publicly are still announcing doubt in Wilson's election, they were counseling today on the basis that for the second time in eight years the party has gone down to defeat. As was the case four years ago, it went into defeat because not enough Progressives could be attracted to its fold.

Four years ago the Old Guard held complete sway. This campaign the Old Guard and the Progressive faction tried a copartnership. The question—why wasn't this partnership successful?—furnishes the basis for the fight for reorganization.

Old Guard Dissatisfied.

It is no secret that such wheelhorses of the Old Guard as former Senator W. Murray Crane of Massachusetts and Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania have felt dissatisfaction with the management of the campaign just past. This dissatisfaction was based:

First—On the fact that Frank H. Hitchcock, whom they regard as neither fish nor fowl, "put over" Hughes at Chicago in June.

Second—Hughes chose William R. Willcox, of whom the rank and file of Republicans had never even heard, and whose standing as a political organizer they regarded as amateurish, as national chairman.

Opposed Choice of Hert.

Third—A. T. Hert, another "unknown," was put in charge of western headquarters at Chicago.

Fourth—Frank H. Hitchcock was called upon for aid.

Fifth—More Progressives were appointed on the national campaign committee than the Old Guard thought justified.

Sixth—Hughes showed his ancient independence of thought and action, mapping out his course without heed to what Old Guardsters wanted.

List of Moose Complaints.

There were other small points. On the other hand, the Progressive faction felt cause for complaint in:

First—Hughes' entire independence of suggestion.

Second—Hughes' failure to come out violently as a partisan of some of the Progressives' favorite ideas.

Third—"Wasting" of Roosevelt as a speaker on some states of small account in the electoral college.

Fourth—Failure of certain Old Guardsters wholeheartedly to coöperate in campaign plans.

Three Cornered Fight Seen.

The prospects today were that there would be no recriminations, but a tremendous lot of underground activity looking to control of the party by one of the other branches.

As it looked today, there will be a three cornered fight for this control—George W. Perkins in one corner, Frank H. Hitchcock in another, and the Old Guard in the third.

It will be a fight of three factions having political brains about evenly matched, and all three clever enough to realize that there must be no surface indications of any fight for control to imperil chances in 1920.

Johnson "Star of the West."

Speaking of four years hence, the Progressives are transferring a little of their fond regard for Roosevelt to the newest political wonder—Hiram Johnson of California—the man who won the senatorship by nearly 300,000 more votes than Hughes, in a state which went Democratic. They think he is bound to be considered in 1920.

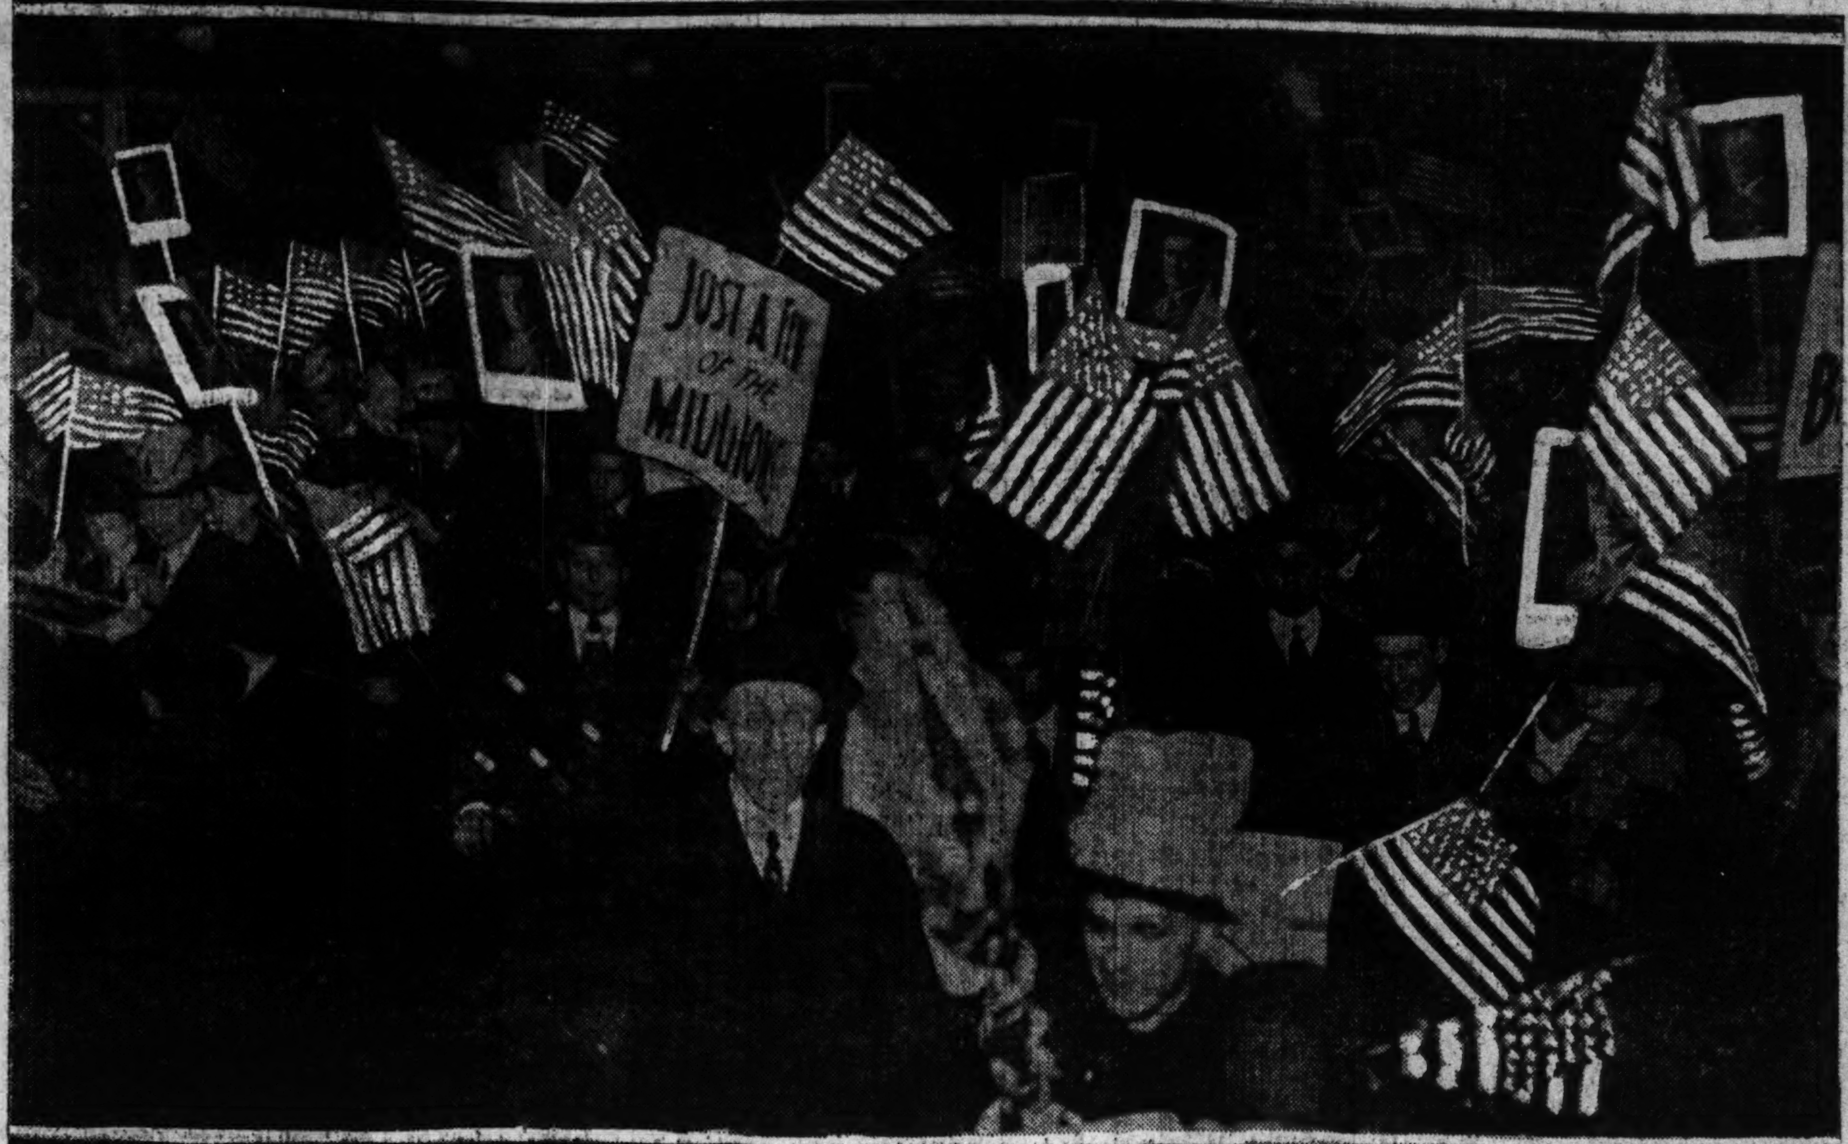
MARSHALL VISITS EVANSTON.

Vice President and Wife Arrive for Rest After Close of Strenuous Campaign.

Vice President Thomas R. Marshall and his wife reached Evanston yesterday to pass a few days with Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McLallen of 939 Sheridan road. Mr. Marshall is seeking a few days of rest after the storm of the campaign.

DEMOCRATS HAVE GAY TIME BEFORE "TRIBUNE" BUILDING

It's a Merry Throng Celebrating Wilson Victory and Chiding the W. G. N.



JUST A FEW OF THE MILLION

WILSON CROWD PARADES LOOP

Some Jestful Banners.

Punctuating the procession were dozens of transparencies carrying jestful allusions to the election. Soon after the march started the ranks fell into a sort of disorder and this lent a more striking mixture to the slogans. For instance, by way of mirthful retort:

THE TRIBUNE DIED ON NOV. 7

This was gayly applauded by those who were delighted with the success of their vote, and then came another:

AND ROOSEVELT WROTE 'THE WINNING OF THE WEST'!

Despite the fact that the delivery wagons of one of the newspapers was painted a bright yellow, there was a slogan on a banner not a long distance from it which read:

WHERE DO THE SISSIES COME FROM? MASSACHUSETTS OR MONTANA?

The climate of California was given a subtle compliment along with its political activities in the transparency which read:

CALIFORNIA IS MOST BEAUTIFUL IN NOVEMBER.

Fakers scampered in advance of the procession selling their wares. One of these wore a sad expression. It was his misfortune to begin opening his box of horns as the parade approached. When he had his wares out and displayed the parade had passed.

Where the Honors Went.

Honors for the largest delegations—at least where the delegations were designated—went to the Thirteenth and Twenty-second ward organizations. Many of the automobiles were decorated with the banners of those wards. Some of the slogans which the automobiles carried were:

Call the next case. Big Bill next.

Give the elephant some Penrose pills.

He was not for New York but for America.

Far into the night the crowds downtown made merry over the Wilson victory and midnight finally saw the streets a hopeless muddle of discarded banners, horns, and flags. It was a great night for the Democrats.

Invades Two Hotels.

A demonstration, continued after the regular one was over, resulted in one of the marchers being taken to the South Clark street police station by the police. A crowd of about 200 men and boys continued around the loop, with a cardboard imitation of President Wilson at the front of the procession.

The leaders turned their steps toward the Congress hotel and began to march through the Michigan-avenue entrance. After a few boys had gone through, hotel employés heard a crash of glass and found that the main door on Michigan avenue had been broken. A horseshoe that had been carried in the parade was thrown through the plate glass.

House Officer Peterson grabbed Edward Bell of 5050 West End avenue, one of the marchers, and turned him over to the police. The paraders then went to the Blackstone and commenced a march through the lobby. The doors were closed on them, but not until the larger part had marched through the hotel, blowing horns and shouting.

CITY HALL MEN TAKE A REST.

Strenuous Campaign Sends Mayor and Aids Away from Offices to Recuperate.

Post-election days in the city hall are quiet ones. City officials after the excitement and late hours incident to a campaign are prone to seek rest in the country.

Mayor Thompson was not in his office yesterday. He was said to be out of the city for a brief rest. Controller Eugene R. Pike; Percy B. Coffin, president of the city civil service commission, and Harry B. Miller, city prosecutor, also were away resting. Commissioner of Public Works William R. Moorhouse went to New York Friday. Samuel A. Ettelson, corporation counsel, spent most of the morning watching the canvass of the votes by the election board.

NEW YORKERS CHEER WILSON ON RETURN TRIP TO CAPITAL.

Crowds Greet Train at Albany and Troy and President Responds—Reaches Washington Tonight.

On Board President Wilson's Special, Albany, N. Y., Nov. 11.—President Wilson, returning to Washington for the first time in two months, tonight witnessed a demonstration at Troy and Albany in celebration of the outcome of the election. Taking for granted that he had been reëlected, crowds at both places cheered him again and again. The president laughed and smiled and thanked them for their congratulations.

Here at Albany a procession, including bands, was arranged in his honor. The railroad station was crowded and many persons rushed forward to shake President Wilson's hand. Former Gov. Glynn of New York, who was temporary chairman of the St. Louis convention that nominated the president, was at the station with other Democratic leaders.

The president is due to arrive in Washington tomorrow night after a trip down the Hudson river from Rhinecliff, N. Y., to New York on the Mayflower.

WILSON, IN NORTH DAKOTA, HOLDS PLURALITY OF 963.

Bismarck, N. D., Nov. 11.—North Dakota is safely Democratic. With fourteen precincts missing, Wilson leads in North Dakota by 963. The vote is: Wilson, 53,806; Hughes, 52,843. Mr. Wilson's plurality probably will be between 1,000 and 1,100.

Chairman William Lemke of the North Dakota Republican state central committee has received reports indicating errors in handling ballots in Burleigh county, as well as other irregularities, and will prosecute inquiry to determine the possibility of a recount of this state's votes.

The Republican national committee has authorized Lemke to place representatives at every county canvassing board meeting next Friday.

WILLCOX WON'T CONCEDE DEFEAT BEFORE A COUNT

G. O. P. Chief Recalls California Result in 1912 Was in Doubt for a Month.

New York, Nov. 11.—A statement showing the fluctuation of the lead between President Wilson and Col. Roosevelt in California in 1912 from day to day for a month after election and how the state finally went in favor of Roosevelt after Wilson was first credited with winning was issued here today by Chairman William R. Willcox of the Republican national committee to "show precisely why the Republican national committee cannot at this time concede the election of Mr. Wilson and must await the official count in this and other states."

"The record shows," Mr. Willcox's statement read, "that Mr. Wilson was first in the lead; that subsequently this lead was taken by Col. Roosevelt and that finally the delegation to the electoral college from California was divided, two electors being for Mr. Wilson and eleven for Col. Roosevelt."

Mr. Willcox had a conference with Charles E. Hughes today, during which the situation was discussed. No announcement came from Mr. Hughes in regard to his own plans. Mr. Willcox said afterward that he and, he thought, Mr. Hughes, would remain here until the first of next week.

He said he did not expect official counts from the doubtful states to begin coming in before then, and that it would be more than a week at least before they were complete. He would not venture a guess on how much longer than that it might take.

DUNNE DOESN'T WANT ANY KIND OF OFFICE.

Wouldn't Accept Postmastership and Won't Run for Mayor, He Announces Informally.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Gov. Dunne denied today that he would accept the postmastership of Chicago or run for mayor. He said that he was not a candidate for any office of any kind.

"At the expiration of my term I shall practice law in Chicago and support my six children," said Gov. Dunne. "I have been circuit judge, mayor of Chicago, and now my career as governor is drawing to a close.

"I hope Col. Lowden will devote some of his time to the lakes to the gulf deep waterway where I left off," said Gov. Dunne. "This project will mean much to the commercial interests of this vast country."

He said he would approve a plan to install a $50,000 merry-go-round in Lincoln park if it was not made a nuisance.

Prof. Dwyer Makes You Physically Fit

Professor Dwyer put the fighting spirit in Theodore Roosevelt. He can do the same thing for you, for $5.00 a month. Don't pay $50.00 for 25 treatments when you can get 12 months' training for $60.00, and come as often as you like.

Professor Dwyer says: "I'll make your brain work faster and produce more than it ever did before. I'll make you feel physically fit. I'll create more energy, vitality and stamina in that body of yours than you ever dreamed of having, and all because I will keep your muscles, vital organs and blood in such wonderful order.

"All I ask of you is to investigate my training quarters before seeing any others. Come up and take a free trial treatment. You will immediately be convinced that I have the finest training quarters in the city. I give my personal attention to each one. All my work is individual. Three instructors on the floor at all times."

Then to Bankruptcy, Revealing Woman Poulterer-Playwright in a New Role.

when she talked to him, he came across as nice as you please. He took over her poultry farm later, but that was purely an afterthought. That was the way she did with them all. They all looked alike to her. They gave her their money and she didn't even make a magic pass.

"If she had been as clever at investing it as she was in getting it, she might have been one of the financial marvels of the century. But sharpers took her money away from her as easily as she took it from other people. I am convinced she has been swindled out of every cent she had."

Never Gambled in Her Life.

"War brides?" Mr. Gavin was asked.

"No. I suspected that. But the woman is deeply religious. She does not speculate. She never gambled a cent in her life."

"Blackmailed?"

"I don't see how she could have been. I don't believe Miss Sharpley ever looked at a man except as a financial prospect. She is verging on 50. She is 5 feet tall, 5 feet in circumference, and weighs 250 pounds. She has a vivid complexion and a pleasant smile, but she makes no pretense at style. Whenever I have seen her she has worn the same cheap brown dress."

Stung by Drama Bug.

"How did she get rid of the $80,000 then?"

"She was stung by the dramatic bug. That happened more than a year ago. How she ever came to think she could write I have no more idea than how she was able to borrow money. She had 10,000 chickens when she began to have dramatic yearnings. Now she has fifty. As she climbed the slopes of Olympus, her chicken business shot down the toboggan slide. There is only one kind of 'chicken' that goes on the stage, and she wasn't that kind of fancier. Well, to make a long story short, she wrote a play.

"She told me about it. I changed the subject deftly. I was afraid she might ask me to read it. She did at last and I couldn't dodge. So she brought a bulky manuscript to my office and left it with me. The play was called "Lights Ahead" and had five acts and a prologue. I read the prologue. That was enough for me.

Typist Also Surrenders.

"Then I tossed the manuscript over to my stenographer. 'You read that and tell me about it,' I suggested. She read the prologue and the first act. Then she gave up, too. So I do not know what the play is about. But I do know it is impossible. If I had thought it was worth 5 cents I would have listed it as an asset. But it wasn't worth that."

"Miss Sharply took her play to New York and tried to interest the producers in it. She finally fell into the hands of sharpers. They could not help but see the play was rot. But they told her it was wonderful, that it would 'go big' if pruned and polished here and there.

"Falls for This Bunk."

"The poor woman fell for this sort of bunk. She paid supposed great playwrights to rewrite her play, to tool it here and tinker it there. After it was perfect, as they told her, they said she must take it to Belasco.

"So she took it to 'Belasco.' She came home with glowing stories of meeting the great dramatist and of his enthusiasm over what he told her was the drama of the decade. Of course this 'Belasco' was a faker running a little 'payoff joint' to trim suckers, and she took the cork under, hook, line, and sinker.

"Her experience with 'Belasco' cost her a pretty penny. He told her he would produce her play within two weeks, and he predicted New York would go crazy over it. She never told me just how much money these theatrical swindlers bled her out of, but it is my opinion they got most everything she had."

Met Through a Pastor.

Mrs. Blackstone said she had been introduced to Miss Sharpley as worthy of financial aid by the Rev. John Balcom Shaw, former pastor of the Second Presbyterian church. Dr. Shaw was one of the distinguished ministers of the city. He is now a resident of San Francisco.

"Miss Sharpley attended the church of which I have been a member for many years," said Mrs. Blackstone. "She seemed a thoroughly good woman. She wanted money to start a poultry farm in Melrose Park, and on the advice of my pastor I advanced her some. She built up a prosperous place. She had a fine trade among our very best people. She sold her eggs and chickens only to private homes. She made personal deliveries and got fancy prices.

"She established her poultry farm four years ago. Since then she has needed more money from time to time and I have let her have it. I have no idea how she got rid of the money. I had thought she was using it in her chicken business. The truth of the matter is, I knew very little about her personally.

"She has been a regular worshiper at church, coming all the way in from Melrose Park to attend Sunday school and morning and evening services on Sunday and the weekday prayer meeting. She organized a Sunday school class in Melrose Park. She seemed very devout.

"I never heard that she had written for the stage. She seemed a very simple, plain woman. If she used hypnotism, I never suspected it. I loaned her money because my minister had introduced her as worthy of any aid I could give her."

Miss Sharpley came from England. She is said to have a brother there in the poultry business. She could not be located yesterday.

And Then Away from the Drama Into Bankruptcy. The Story of a Chicago Woman with Marvelous Money Borrowing Powers.

MISS ANNIE SHARPLEY.

YOUNG HASKINS' SUCCESSOR ARRESTED IN KANSAS CITY.

Fred Howlett Joined Joy Gardner When Her Affair with Harvester Man's Son Was Ended.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Fred Howlett of Chicago, after reading of Frank Haskins' interrupted elopement with Joy Gardner, a cabaret dancer, followed her to Kansas City.

Howlett was arrested yesterday as he and Miss Gardner stood waiting for "his new motor car" in Kansas City. He is being held on the complaint of the Hotel Baltimore that he passed a worthless check for $100.

Howlett's bill for less than a week's stay in Kansas City was $100. There were taxi drives, expensive dinners for Miss Gardner, and a liberal amount for rooms in the hotel.

Miss Gardner could not be seen today. She was said to have left the hotel early this morning.

BRUSHINGHAM TO TAKE JOB IF HE GETS IT, HE ASSERTS.

Pastor Can't See How Being Morals Secretary Will Embarrass His Friend, "Big Bill."

The Rev. J. P. Brushingham said yesterday he will accept the position of secretary to the morals commission—if he passes the examination—despite the reputed "embarrassment" his entry into the field is causing the administration.

Dr. Brushingham averred he could not understand why his friendship for the mayor should deter him from going after the job.

An unnamed member of the mayor's cabinet, however, gave out an interview in which he said Dr. Brushingham had made a mistake in taking the examination because the administration would be accused of favoritism if the clergyman passes at the top of the list.

To the gentleman of yesterday every detail of his equipment was a matter of painstaking interest—when he drove his coach and four—or his coach and twelve.

The mode and appointments of the vehicle—the "cut" and trim of the harness—the number and size of the horses—even the weight and length of the whip—all had to be just right.

The Knabe
Mignonette Grand

THIS dainty little aristocrat of the Piano World, the KNABE MIGNONETTE, has fairly captivated social America. Small enough to grace the drawing room, yet of such marvelous tone-volume and richness that it satisfies the most critical.

The KNABE PIANO is distinctly a KNABE product, each and every component part being made in the KNABE Factory. While made in various styles and sizes to meet the requirements of individual tastes, and governed in fact by these variations, the KNABE PIANO is made in but one grade—THE BEST.

The KNABE MIGNONETTE GRAND is made regularly in mahogany case, highly polished or dull finish, and is 5 feet 2 inches in length.

Mme. ALMA GLUCK speaks of the KNABE MIGNONETTE GRAND in the following glowing terms:

"I wish to express my admiration for your instruments. For many years I have worked with them, but the most delightful one so far is your MIGNONETTE GRAND.

Its diminutive size and the volume and quality of tone are a delight and inspiration, and, as an accompaniment for the human voice, I cannot imagine the existence of an equal.

Sincerely yours,
ALMA GLUCK."

HETTINGER BOY DECLINES PAM'S OFFER OF LIFE

Condemned Murderer Refuses to Plead Guilty to Save Himself.

That the community is at fault for the fact that Edgar Hettinger is a convicted murderer, sentenced to hang, was the plea of Attorney Clarence Darrow and Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton yesterday in pleading for a lesser punishment.

Judge Hugo Pam offered the boy life imprisonment instead of hanging if he would plead guilty.

"I'll plead guilty to save my life," said the youth, "but I will not plead guilty to the crime."

Bound by Statutes.

Judge Pam said he was certain there would be no benefit to the state in hanging the youth convicted of killing Mrs. Agnes Middleton, the modiste, who lived at 3267 Armitage avenue. But he said he was bound by the statutes in a certain degree.

"I can't accept the plea offered," said the court. "I will hear the argument on the motion for a new trial two weeks from today.

"I don't believe it is right to hang this boy because he is not mentally balanced, but that 's a matter now for the governor or the Supreme court to decide. Unless there is material error pointed out in the evidence introduced at the trial I will be forced to let the verdict of the jury stand."

Blame the Community.

Mrs. Britton and Attorney Darrow dwelt at length on the contention that the community was to blame for Hettinger's predicament.

"In no way would we be serving the community by inflicting the extreme punishment 'n this case," said Mrs. Britton. "I feel that if we don't save his life, in ten years from now people will believe that we were not awake to our duty. Why should he pay for the mistakes of the community, the city?

"At the age of 12 years, 14 years, and 16 years he committed acts which show he was not mentally right. We knew it right along. I hope his life will be saved for our mistakes."

"I don't believe any mental defective should be hanged," Attorney Darrow argued. "As far as this boy is concerned, I don't believe it makes any difference to him whether he gets life imprisonment or hangs.

"The trouble lies with the state. It has not provided institutions for such persons as this boy.

Darrow Sees Brutality.

"To hang this boy would leave the community cold. It would be a brutal thing to hang him. He is only 19 years old and his mentality is the most important thing to determine what punishment he should get. I believe the jury overlooked those facts."

"Not only is the responsibility of the community thrown upon this court but also that of this young man," said Judge Pam. "The court would be derelict in its duty if he merely took the letter of the law and did not accept the spirit of the law.

"We are long past the belief that individuals should be punished because a crime has been committed. I do not believe that the mere fact that a person has been convicted is of any benefit to the public."

GRATEFUL TO BARONESS

Violinist, Aided by Woman Who Became Notorious, to Play Several Engagements in Chicago.

Miss Marian Barry

One of the happier traits of the Baroness de Pallandt comes to light with the announcement that Marian Barry, 17 year old violinist, is to play several engagements in Chicago. Miss Barry, the daughter of a business man on the south side, was for several years the protégé of the baroness, whose exploits have been chronicled in detective agencies, and whom William A. Pinkerton portrays as "the most dangerous woman I ever met." Miss Barry plays on a $2,000 violin which the De Pallandt woman purchased for her in Paris. Miss Barry says that whatever the baroness' faults she is grateful for the musical education she acquired through her.

HAAS AND EGAN IN CLASH OVER BALLOT COUNT

Republican Candidate Charges Attempt to Steal Election Victory from Him.

Charges and counter charges of frauds and attempts to steal the Cook county election flew thick and fast last night at the official canvass of the vote cast last Tuesday.

Joseph Haas, successful Republican candidate for recorder by the police returns, started the fur flying by asserting "employés of the board of election commissioners are attempting to steal the election" away from him.

This was denied by Dennis J. Egan, chief clerk of the board, who came back with the charge that the ballot casting in the Second ward was honeycombed with crooked work, judging from discrepancies found in the canvass. He said the United States government hopes to indict several persons as a result of the disclosures of illegal voting, marked ballots, and other irregularities. He predicted a number of arrests will be made within a short time.

Charges Ballots Changed.

In many precincts, he said, "straight" tickets had been changed to "split" votes, and the tally sheets showed impossible results. Federal watchers, he asserted, will be on hand when the canvass is resumed Monday to trace the frauds.

"It is possible," Mr. Egan said, "that the ballot boxes of the Second ward will have to be reopened and recounted. Most of the marked ballots were for Republican candidates and affected the state's attorney and the president."

Mr. Haas' blast came as a result of the claim of watchers for Joseph F. Connery, Democratic candidate for recorder, that he had gained several thousand votes by the count. Mr. Haas said the canvassing clerks gave Connery and other Democrats the benefit of the doubt in the canvass. He termed the "attempt to steal" the "most brazen piece of work" he ever witnessed.

Haas' Charges.

His protest caused Egan to summon Mr. Haas and the clerks involved and later Judge Scully entered the conference. After half an hour Haas emerged and hastened to the office of Corporation Counsel Ettelson, where he dictated a formal statement. In part it follows:

"The claims made by Mr. Connery's friends that returns show a gain of over 5,000 votes for him in the present canvass is absurd. The official canvass does show some changes here and there, some in my favor and some against.

"However, the important thing for the public to know is that there is a disposition on the part of a number of men employed by the election commissioners to tally and call votes for Connery and Rainey that are not on the tally sheets, and notwithstanding that these clerks have been repeatedly stopped and the attention of the chief clerk has been called to their acts, no attempt has been made by him to place more trustworthy men on this important work.

"If the men that commit these repeated miscalculations either by design or poor eyesight would be supplanted there would be no grounds for apprehension. The remarkable fact is nearly all the incorrect tabulated returns are made in favor of Connery and Rainey. It is my opinion they are making their claims of election on what they hope will happen during the official count."

Mr. Egan Explains.

Mr. Egan said he did not believe the clerks had done anything wrong intentionally.

"The situation is easily explained," he said. "The trouble arose when the caller said for instance 'Connery 100, Haas, 145.' Haas claims that the checker would write 100 beside Connery's name and 45 beside his. Now you can readily see how the count was misunderstood.

"The clerks work fast, the numbers are called in quick rotation and in a big canvass as we have on our hands a few mistakes are expected.

"I want to explain about Mr. Connery's statement that he was winning. That statement did not come from this office. Mr. Connery told me he had made an investigation and discovered a number of errors in the police returns.

"The story appeared in the newspapers about Mr. Connery's prediction. Mr. Haas I guess is a little excited and thinks that he is being disfavored."

Claim New Gains.

Watchers for Rainey and Haas said they made new gains during the day.

The lead of Bernard P. Barasa, Republican candidate to fill vacancy of judge of Municipal court, was increased by 19,000 votes over McIntyre, his Democratic opponent, through a revision of the police returns. The new figures are: Barasa, 178,751; McIntyre, 136,259.

Announcement was made by District Attorney Charles F. Clyne that twenty-five subpoenas will be issued by him on Monday for the appearance before the grand jury of politicians in the First, Second, and Eighteenth wards.

STILL HOLD UP ELECTION BETS

Big New York Brokers Roil Bettors by Awaiting Hughes Action.

SMALLER WAGERS PAID.

New York, Nov. 11.—[Special.]—While many of the big commissioners have refused to pay out the money placed in their hands as wagers on the election until Charles E. Hughes finally concedes defeat and sends a telegram of congratulation to President Wilson, the majority of small stakeholders today began paying off bets. It is estimated $2,000,000 was distributed in the financial district.

Great dissatisfaction was expressed at the attitude of the commissioners who are still holding back. Some of the moves attributed to the commissioners are not highly creditable. In addition to the 2 per cent commission they receive from the winners, these commissioners receive interest from the banks in which they have deposited the stakes and on large sums this totals a considerable amount daily.

Some of the indignant bettors today announced their intention of insisting on the commissioners disgorging this money and threatened to make a lively row if they refused.

Moreover there was a good deal of dissatisfaction expressed at the commissions which the stakeholders were asking. In former years they were content with 1 per cent.

The leading curb commissioners are inclined to treat their clients liberally on the matter of interest. At a meeting today, attended by many of the leading commissioners, it was decided that if Mr. Hughes and the Republican national committee do not concede President Wilson's election by next Tuesday they will deposit the stakes in banks and turn over the interest to the winners when all doubt as to Tuesday's result has been finally decided.

Hudson Fine Cars—

Hudson fine closed cars have established a new measure of luxury in motor cars. As a result, Chicago sales have multiplied out of all proportion to our expectations. And now we are telling you a few of the "whys."

Let's start with the fact that the Hudson Super Six chassis was the greatest mechanical success the motor industry ever saw. With that condition, the Hudson factory realized that only ONE kind of closed body could be used—THE BEST.

But—and this didn't scare the Hudson people a bit—the best costs money.

Quality Produced in Quantity

It was believed the market for a few cars costing $4,000 to $5,000 was plentifully supplied. The common sense answer then—keeping the idea of fine quality uppermost—was to produce Hudson fine coaches in quantities; quantities that would allow them to be sold to the consumer around $2,800.

This was done. The body plant building Hudson bodies was doubled in capacity, making it, by the way, the largest producer of fine closed bodies in America.

The best brains money could hire were set to work on designs, materials, color schemes, and styles for Hudson fine cars. The result? Well, we stand on the statement that Hudson closed cars today haven't a peer anywhere, no matter what the price!

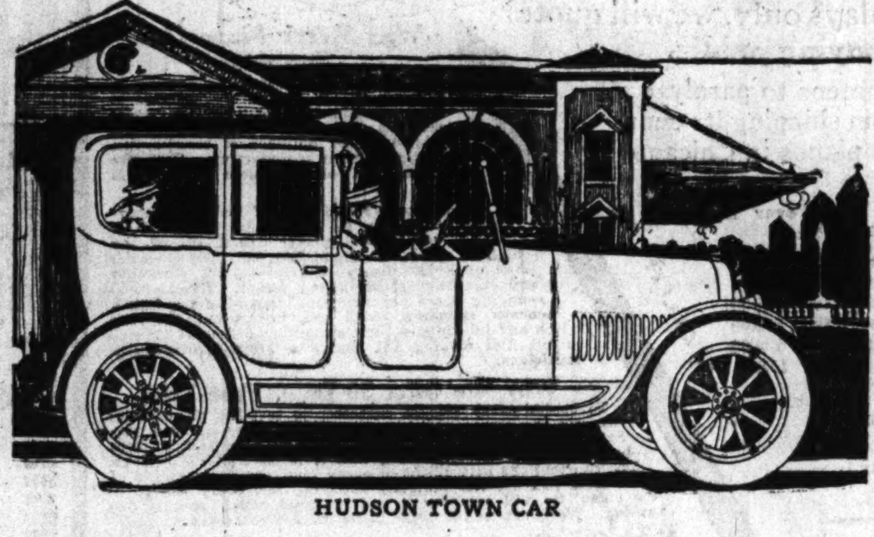
And here's what happened—perhaps you've seen it among some of your friends. Families whose wealth and social position heretofore led them to buy much more expensive closed cars are now buying Hudson fine coaches. Fact!

Just notice them on the street. You've seen them many times, but next time notice the detail, the style, the truly elegant finish.

Other Builders Amazed

Big makers of fine bodies, right here in Chicago, tell us positively that they don't see how Hudson can build such cars for the price. And they are honest and sincere in their statements.

They examine the detail of Hudson closed cars in amazement. The trimmings, the materials, the sumptuous elegance grip them because they are body builders themselves and know what such elegance means.



HUDSON TOWN CAR

Endorsed by Women

Women have responded to the lure of Hudson elegance. They cannot fight it, once they encounter it. And when it comes to a judgment of the beautiful, whether in dress, decorations, closed cars or art, trust women to judge correctly.

All those things which stamp a car a style master are prominent in Hudson fine cars. And women, who are accustomed by experience or fitted by nature to such luxury, know it.

And, Lastly, the Price!

Establishing the fact that these fine cars are the best to be had, and then weighing the price—

$2,750 for Limousine or Town Car—
$2,850 for Limousine or Town Car Landaulet

—and there you have the key to the Hudson situation.

We invite you to see the display of Hudson fine cars on our salesroom floor. Their beauty is compelling.

SENATORS MAP SPEED PROGRAM AND NO FRICTION

Twenty-four Republican Members Caucus on Work in Harmony with Lowden Plans.

The Illinois state senate will be organized by the Republicans without friction and upon a nonfactional basis, disposed to work in entire sympathy with the new state administration.

This was the decision reached at a conference of twenty-four of the thirty-four men who will sit in the upper house at Springfield, held yesterday at the Hamilton club.

It also was made apparent by speeches of the senators that the Chicago city hall crowd is not to have its own way in matters pertaining to legislation for Chicago.

High Lights of Program.

The chief features settled at the conference were these:

Short and economical session of the legislature, ending within four months from Jan. 3 if at all possible.

Entire harmony with Gov. elect Lowden and the incoming Republican state officers. A committee of seven named to confer with Col. Lowden on a legislative program.

Private banks legislation as early in the session as is compatible with investigation of what is involved. A committee of five is named that will consider a measure to be presented as the Republican view.

Working agreement with the Republican majority of the house of representatives so that the efficiency and economy measures that are to be brought forward will be pushed to enactment as quickly as possible.

No actual organization of the senate and no committee slate to be made until there is a full caucus of the Republican senators to be held in Springfield during holiday week.

All Assent to Program.

To the foregoing program all twenty-four senators who were present gave their assent. It was the most harmonious roundup of legislators that has convened in Illinois after an election for many a year.

The senators who were present were:

Curtis,	Hull,	Lantz,
Cornwell,	Austin,	Harding,
Barr,	Cliffe,	Hewitt,
Pervier,	Juoos,	Kessinger,
Landee,	Jewell,	Hamilton,
Bailey,	Turnbaugh,	Swanson,
Dailey,	Miller,	Barbour,
Ettelson,	Swift,	Atwood.

The absentees were Buck of Monmouth, who sent word that he had been called to Montana on business; Dunlap, Baldwin, Wright, Smith, Wood, Abt, Latham, Bardill, and Jones.

The latter appears to have been elected in the Centralia district by the complete returns. His election makes thirty-four Republicans, an even two-thirds of the senate. The election of Senator Swanson as judge of the Municipal courts in Chicago, however, will make a vacancy from the South Chicago district and a special election will be needed to fill the vacancy.

Senator Cornwell Presides.

Senator Cornwell of the Lake View district was made chairman of the conference and Senator Jewell of Lewistown was secretary. Senator Cornwell will name the six members of the committee, headed by himself as chairman, to confer with Gov. Elect Lowden on the administration measures to be presented in January.

The committee of five that will draft a private banks bill will be headed probably by Senator Austin of the Oak Park district, as he made the motion for the appointment of such committee.

Actual organization of the senate goes over until the week preceding the opening of the general assembly, set by the constitution for Jan. 3. This decision was reached in the form of a motion.

Cliffe May Be President Pro Tem.

Indications point somewhat to the election of Senator Adam C. Cliffe of Sycamore as president pro tem. of the senate. Senator Cliffe is known to be one of the close and intimate friends of the governor-elect and a boom for him was started quietly yesterday. There was also some talk about making Senator Morton D. Hull the president pro tem. This post, after the lieutenant governor, is in direct line of succession to the governorship.

Thus far no candidate for speaker of the house has appeared against Speaker David E. Shanahan, and the chances are that there will be no opposition to his reëlection. The conference to be held at the Hotel Sherman Tuesday of Cook county members has nothing to do with the speakership or the organization of the house, it is said, and is purely social in its nature.

"QUACKS" IN COURT

In Which a Tribunal of Justice Is Upset by Pilfered Ducks.

NINE ducks caused a disturbance and nearly disrupted a hearing in the stockyards court yesterday. The cases of Joseph McGrath of 8715 South Halsted street, a teamster, and John D. Perkins of 7913 Emerald avenue, a window trimmer, were called. Louis D. Kraber, a butcher at 7210 South Halsted street, strode forward as the complaining witness. Two policemen carried in a crate in which there were nine ducks and two turkeys.

"The charge is larceny; what have you got to say?" asked Judge Caverly. "What did these men do?"

"They stole my——"

"Quack, quack," put in the "evidence."

"They——" continued the butcher.

Finally the crate of "quacks" was removed to the rear of the room.

McGrath and Perkins declared they bought the birds for $4.50.

"It is absolutely impossible to buy nine ducks and two turkeys for $4.50," remarked the court. "$25 and costs for each defendant."

The crate was returned to the butcher.

MILITARY POMP TO MARK INAUGURAL OF COL. LOWDEN.

Adjt. Gen. Dickson and Staff to Take Prominent Part in Ball Being Planned for Governor Elec

Military features will prevail in the gala inaugural ball which is being planned to usher Gov. Elect Frank O. Lowden and Mrs. Lowden into official life. Col. Lowden has given his consent to the arrangements, it is said, and already his friends have started preparations for the affair to take place in Springfield immediately after the oath is administered the new governor.

Adjt. Gen. Frank S. Dickson of the Illinois National guard arrived in Chicago yesterday for a conference with Col. and Mrs. Lowden and their aids. Gen. Dickson will prepare the military features and in this will be seconded by the gold mounted official staff of the governor.

It is regarded probable that the governor's social inauguration will take place in the armory, which will offer sufficient space for the only real inaugural since Gov. Tanner's.

MORE ASSEMBLY MEMBERS LINE UP FOR REFORM

Additional Replies Favor Constitutional Convention and Private Bank Law.

Fourteen additional replies received yesterday by THE TRIBUNE from members elect of the next Illinois legislature to the query as to how the new senators and representatives feel about the constitutional convention proposition and private bank legislation brought the totals to these figures:

Twenty-two senators for the constitutional convention; three noncommittal.

Nineteen senators for private banks legislation; six noncommittal.

Forty-eight representatives for private banks' legislation; one against; six noncommittal.

These Replies Received.

Replies received yesterday are as follows:

SENATORS

John D. Turnbaugh (Rep.), Mount Carroll—I favor a constitutional convention. I would like to know what private bank legislation is proposed before answering that question.

W. H. Wright (Rep.), McLean—Am in favor of constitutional convention. Am not well enough informed to answer second question.

John J. Boehm (Dem.), Chicago—Last session I did vote for a constitutional convention and last Tuesday I worked at the polls for an amendment of our present bank legislation.

John M. Powell (Dem.), Chicago—I am in favor of the constitutional convention, because I believe that the constitution of 1871, under which we are now operating, is not sufficiently broad to meet present demands. As to private bank legislation I am in favor of any law which will curtail the present powers of private bankers.

Edward C. Curtis (Rep.), Kankakee—I introduced the constitutional convention resolution in the senate at two legislative sessions, and each time it was passed by the senate. Of course I am for it now, and I fully expect that the resolution will be adopted by both houses. I also favor private bank legislation.

REPRESENTATIVES

Fred R. De Young (Rep.), Harvey—Am in favor of a constitutional convention and regulation of private banks by the state.

Harry Wilson (Rep.), Pinckneyville—I favor constitutional convention and private bank regulation.

W. A. Cameron (Rep.), Elliott—I favor constitutional convention and some changes in banking laws.

A. B. Lager (Dem.), Breese—Am in favor of some kind of legislation regulating private banks. Have not decided whether I will vote for or against constitutional convention.

Carl Green (Dem.), Robinson—You will look up my record in present general assembly as to constitutional convention. In view of the fact that we are amply supplied with state, national, and postal savings banks, no person is compelled to deposit money in private banks. If state should dictate methods to cultivate a farmer's crop, it should do same for private banks.

C. M. Turner (Rep.), Varna—Am in favor of both laws.

F. A. Brewer (Rep.), Tampico—I am in favor of a constitutional convention and reasonable bank legislation.

James R. Bentley (Rep.), New Lenox—I am in favor of a constitutional convention and state control of private banks.

Harry F. Hamlin (Rep.), Chicago—I believe a satisfactory bill will be passed at the next session. There is no doubt in my mind about the need of a new constitution.

OLD BASS DRUM IMMORAL? NO, MUSICIANS DECLARE.

It Also Is Suggested That a Young Wife, Alone with Piano, Is in a Very Indiscreet Situation.

With the exposure of the solemn old bass drum as a seductive peril has come such a scandalous revelation of immorality among musical instruments that a young husband hardly knows what tragic night he'll go home and find his wife alone in the flat with the piano.

William Weil, conductor of the Chicago band, testifies:

"The drum, which Miss Marion Talbot, dean of women at the University of Chicago, contends is immoral is a dull old mope compared with other instruments. Take the saxophone. The crescendo and decrescendo of a saxophone is just like the rolling of the eyes, the way it is played in some dance music. If any arousing instrument should be eliminated from dance music it is the saxophone."

"The dean should hear the ukuleel," said Armand F. Hand, son of the late Johnny Hand. "The bass drum is an innocent old dotard compared to the ukulele, moaning of love."

"The saxophone might be spelled with an e, you know," suggested a member of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. "But where does the dean get that 'base' drum stuff?"

LOWDEN GOES TO ARKANSAS TO ESCAPE POLITICIANS.

Governor Elect to Spend Two Weeks on Plantation Recuperating—Wife Remains at Home.

Col. Frank O. Lowden, governor elect of Illinois, departed last night for his Arkansas plantation, there to remain for two weeks, away from all politics and politicians. Mrs. Lowden did not accompany him, as had been arranged earlier.

"My wife found she had too many things on hand, in view of her approaching change of residence, to be leaving home at this particular time," Col. Lowden explained.

None of the Illinois leaders will visit the next governor while he is in Arkansas, Col. Lowden said, and he is to remain entirely separated from political and state affairs while he recuperates from the effects of the campaign.

Already talk has started about a big inaugural ball, but nothing official has been considered. Some folks are boosting a military spectacle that will wind up with an inaugural ball at the state arsenal. The last time the national guard was turned out in a body for an inauguration was in January, 1896, when John R. Tanner was inaugurated with the thermometer at the zero mark.

HOYNE ASSERTS HE WILL HASTEN CASE OF HEALEY

Chicago Aldermen Meet the State's Attorney and Study Subways of New York.

BY PARKE BROWN.

New York, Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Maclay Hoyne, state's attorney reëlect of Cook county, Ill., came to this rustic spot "for a rest," following the stress and strain of the campaign.

As he stepped out of his hotel—the name of which is suppressed at his request—he met John Toman, alderman from the Thirty-fourth ward of the city of Chicago. They took a short walk and talk together and Mr. Hoyne returned to the nameless hotel.

He passed through the door and his hand was seized with congratulatory warmth by Stanley S. Walkowiak, alderman from the Seventeenth ward of the city of Chicago. They talked and walked for a few minutes.

Mr. Hoyne started for the elevator. Striding across the lobby of the hotel mentioned above he bumped, physically and not slangily, into William J. Healy, alderman from the Eighteenth ward of the city of Chicago. And they talked.

Where to Meet Chicagoans.

"You may say for me," said Mr. Hoyne when found later, "that I have nothing to say."

"Yes, but you have been saying something," he was reminded.

"But that wasn't for publication," he almost ejaculated.

He turned on his heel to leave, turned around, came back, and talked.

"If you want to meet anybody from Chicago," he said, "the best place to look for him is on Broadway, where Chicagoans pay prices they would not even consider on State street.

"Mrs. Hoyne and I came down here for a complete change—including changing trains of thought—and everywhere I go I meet some one from Chicago. I'm glad to see them, mighty glad and all that—but it seems that I've hit a through train of thought with no stops."

He Finally Answers Some.

Seventeen questions were fired at the state's attorney reëlect, which he shied at in his well known adroit manner. He was cajoled and he was threatened with suppression of his name from the public prints. Under this pressure he consented to say a few things. Among them were these:

"Yes, I'll hasten the trial of Chief Healey.

"Yes, I'll give the Erbstein-O'Donnell case an immediate hearing.

"Well, possibly the Healey case will come to trial before the first of the year.

"Yes, I'll clean up the black belt of Chicago.

"Yes, I'm going to keep my present staff, with possibly one or two exceptions.

"Yes, Frank Johnston will remain as first assistant.

"Yes, it's a fine day. Thank you, she's well."

Today was a day of subway after subway. The thing that astonished the Chicagoans is the rapidity with which the New York underground system is developing while their "great" city is slumbering through many-stopped long rides on surface and elevated local trains.

"It's mile after mile and mile after mile," said Ald. Healy, "and then when you get back to the street level you find one street after another planked over or broken into with a shaft opening showing that more miles are being built. Instead of digging, we're talking."

Inspect an "Open Cut" Line.

It was Brooklyn this morning and Manhattan this afternoon, and the single engineering feature that hit home with the visitors was the Sea Beach route to Coney Island. This is an "open cut," and there wasn't a member of the party who did not speak or think of the depression of the Illinois Central tracks when he saw the construction. Above the tops of the cars the residence and business property stretched out on either side. Concrete spans bridged the cut. Except for the open space none would know it was there.

"That's the answer," said Ald. Thomas A. Doyle. "Bury the Illinois Central in a cut like this, with electrified tracks, and you save and make Chicago's lake front—one of the finest of the world, now ruined with walls and smoke—that's all you see now, and it absolutely eliminates anything that could be called a view."

FRAT VS. NON-FRAT

And in This Case the "Antis" Have a Better Scholarship Standard.

Co-eds of Northwestern university have had a higher average in scholarship in the second semester of 1915-1916 than the men and men not members of fraternities have had a better average in the same period than men belonging to "frats," according to figures made public yesterday by Charles Marsh, registrar of the university.

SORORITIES.
Alpha Phi	1.8352	Pi Beta Phi	1.4657
Alpha Omicron Pi	1.8088	Gamma Phi Beta	1.4641
Alpha Chi Omega	1.7725	Kappa Kappa Gamma	1.4320

Alpha Gamma Delta	1.4657	Average	1.6851
FRATERNITIES.
The Wranglers	1.6330	Delta Upsilon	0.9464
Sigma Chi	1.5081	Sigma Alpha Epsilon	0.8062
The Scribblers	1.4376	Sigma Nu	0.7665
Beta Theta Pi	1.3457	Phi Kappa Sigma	0.6200

MEN'S DORMITORIES.
Foster house	1.4613	Haven house	1.3397

The young women students average 0.3966 higher in scholarship than the fraternity men, Mr. Marsh said.

The average of non-members of fraternities was given as 1.4151, while that of fraternity men was 1.1885.

WOMEN CLASH OVER SUFFRAGE; TEMPEST GROWS

Mrs. McCulloch, Mrs. Catt, and Mrs. Trout Chief Figures in Word War.

Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch made a few derogatory remarks anent Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout at the meeting of the Chicago Political Equality league in the Congress hotel yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Trout replied. Mrs. McCulloch accused Mrs. Trout of misquoting her. The kettle began to sing merrily, and at a late hour last night it was boiling enthusiastically.

It all began as a quiet and orderly gathering assembled to hear Ald. Charles E. Merriam discuss the proposed constitutional convention and incidentally to hear some of Illinois' leading suffragists discuss ways and means of obtaining full suffrage. Mr. Merriam made his little talk in favor of the convention and departed. He explained that he had another engagement.

Then Mrs. McCulloch was introduced. She spoke of the various methods by which the women of Illinois might obtain full suffrage and advocated a campaign for the suffrage amendment at the next session of the state legislature.

Trouble Starts Here.

Right here somebody lighted the gas under the kettle. Only that morning had it been announced that Mrs. Catt, president of the National American Woman Suffrage association, had written opposing any campaign at this time for the suffrage amendment to the Illinois constitution. This mean that the national association would refuse its aid to any such campaign.

"Illinois simply must not have a suffrage referendum with the election conditions as they are in the state," Mrs. Catt had written to Mrs. Trout, president of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association, who sat on the stage back of Mrs. McCulloch and who was scheduled to be the next speaker.

But Mrs. McCulloch was not daunted. She did not stop at expressing her opinion in favor of the amendment campaign. While her hearers were gasping for air she plunged right into a thinly veiled attack upon Mrs. Catt and Mrs. Trout. She urged all suffragists to get behind the campaign for the amendment.

She Wades Right In.

Then Mrs. McCulloch took another deep breath and waded right in. She referred to the interests which the suffragists would find opposing their campaign—the liquor interests, that omnipresent bugaboo, "big business," and the politicians.

"With these enemies to face," she continued, "we don't want any opposition from within our own ranks. We don't want any lack of enthusiasm on the part of those we regard as our friends. We don't want to find them lined up with big business, the breweries, and the politicians opposing us, their fellow women, in a campaign to gain full suffrage."

Mrs. McCulloch concluded her address with an appeal for the indorsement of the state suffrage amendment, and then announced that she was sorry she had to leave to keep another engagement.

Reply by Mrs. Trout.

But Mrs. Trout referred only in passing to the announced subject. She spoke of the necessity for a constitutional convention. Woman's suffrage, she said, would be certain to be included in any new state constitution. Then she turned her attention to the suggested campaign for a suffrage amendment to the present constitution.

"Every objection to the constitutional covention as the means through which we may obtain full suffrage," she said, "holds doubly true with regard to the proposed suffrage amendment. Mrs. Catt has written urging us not to undertake any campaign for such an amendment at this time.

"Mrs. McCulloch has told you that even if it were defeated in a referendum nothing would be lost. I think she is mistaken. Much would be lost. Mrs. McCulloch herself told me that she did not think the proposed amendment would pass."

Mrs. Trout sat down. During her talk there had been a stir near the door, and the moment she stopped a voice just within the portals called, "Mme. Chairman, I rise to a question of personal privilege." It was Mrs. McCulloch.

"I have been misquoted," Mrs. McCulloch continued. "I never said that the suffrage amendment to the state constitution would not carry. What I did say was that I would not guarantee its passage."

Mrs. Trout Is Sorry.

"I am sorry if I did not quote correctly," replied Mrs. Trout. "As I recall, there were several of us together when Mrs. McCulloch made the statement, and it seemed to me that we understood her as I have said."

"Well," Mrs. McCulloch returned, "I had left the room after my address, and the woman who called me back is Miss Erickson, who was present at the time the statement was made. She told me I had been misquoted and I came back."

"I apologize if I misunderstood Mrs. McCulloch," Mrs. Trout said. "We appear to differ, although I thought we agreed on the chances which the suffrage amendment would have in a referendum or in the legislature. At least we agree in that we both stand for full woman's suffrage."

The audience applauded and Mrs. Harriet S. Thompson, president of the league, stepped forward.

"Mrs. McCulloch," she said, "made a statement with which I so thoroughly disagree that, as president of this league, I do not feel that I can let it pass unchallenged. Mrs. McCulloch told you that we would be no worse off than before if the suggested suffrage amendment were defeated.

"With such a possibility in view I have been inquiring of all sorts of people what they thought would be the result of a defeat, and I have received almost invariably the same reply. If the amendment were defeated it would be blazoned out all over the United States that suffrage in Illinois had been a failure. Never in the world could we make people understand. They wouldn't listen to explanations."

JUDGE PINCKNEY GIVEN GEM STUDDED WATCH.

Juvenile Court Official Tried and Found Guilty of Being Just Jurist, Humanitarian and Gentleman.

Judge Merritt W. Pinckney, for several years judge of the Juvenile court, was "tried and found guilty" of "being a just jurist, humanitarian and a gentleman," and sentenced to accept a diamond studded and engraved gold watch at a "hearing" in the gold ballroom of the Hotel La Salle last night.

The "hearing" came at the close of a banquet in his honor arranged by more than 1,000 friends from the social, civic and professional life of Chicago.

Judge John P. McGoorty presided. The witnesses for the state included Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen and Judge Olson.

"GET JAUNDICE OUT OF SOUL AND SMILE," SAYS EDUCATOR

Plenty of Play with Work and Belief Life Is Worth Living Urged on Teachers by W. L. Bryan.

W. L. Bryan, president of Indiana university, spoke at the monthly meeting of the Cook County Teachers' association yesterday.

"There are three ways to cultivate a pleasing disposition," he said. "The first is play.

"Everyone should engage in play, for it is one of the most important things in the world. Play for your soul's sake and for you body's sake.

"The next is work. Nobody can be happy without working. Work, authorities agree, can even cure insanity.

"The third essential is that you must firmly believe that life is worth living.

VENTILATION

IF your windows are closed you invite tuberculosis and pneumonia—the dread diseases from which nine thousand (9,000) people died in Chicago last year. Closed windows are weakening, depressing, debilitating, dangerous, and in many cases FATAL.

IF (on the other hand) you open your window you are made miserably uncomfortable and risk chills, colds, sore throat, rheumatism, and other serious ills. Many people are so susceptible to drafts that they find them as dangerous as the poisons which result from closed windows.

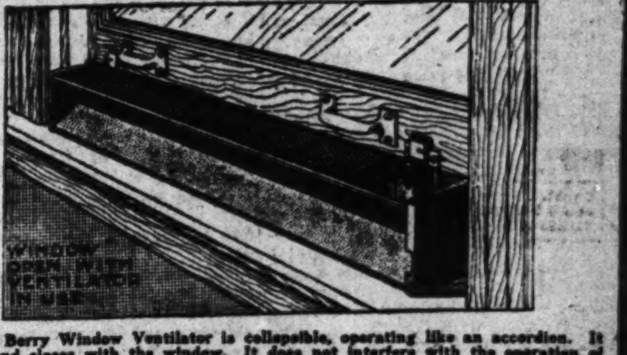
BUT you can have a constant supply of FRESH AIR in every season with entire comfort and safety by using the Berry Window Ventilator, which admits FRESH AIR but excludes drafts, rain and snow. You can install it in a few minutes with a screwdriver.

Although tens of thousands are now in use, although it has been a tried, tested, proven success for four (4) years, we now announce a radical reduction in the price of the

BERRY WINDOW VENTILATOR

Orr & Lockett, former exclusive agents, have gone out of business, and as a result the manufacturer is able to sell these ventilators direct to you, eliminating the middleman's profit. The price was formerly 40% more than that now asked.

We are now selling Berry Ventilators from an exclusive Berry Ventilator store at 18 East Jackson Boulevard. Phone Harrison 915.



WINDOW OPEN WITH VENTILATOR IN USE

The Berry Window Ventilator is collapsible, operating like an accordion. It opens and closes with the window. It does not interfere with the operation of the window, and when not in use lies flat on the inside of the sill—out of the way. The amount of air admitted is easily regulated by raising or lowering the window. It is finished in oak and mahogany.

How to Take Measurements

Close window—measure on the inside sill from window stop to window stop, as close to window railing as possible. The "window stop" is the perpendicular strip that holds the window in place.

Berry Ventilators come in sizes of three inches apart from 17 inches to 71 inches. Any of these sizes will fit window openings that are any part of three inches wider than the length of the ventilator.

Jeffery

The Most Value for Your Money

SHARPEN your pencil and figure this out. Within the past few weeks you have seen practically every automobile in Chicago selling at between $1000 and $2000 advanced in price from $100 to $300. Some have advanced not only once but twice and even three times.

No pretense is made by the manufacturer of these cars of advancement in quality as reason for the enhanced price. "Increased cost of materials" is practically the only reason given.

This reason is legitimate—there can be no question about that—

But the big point is right here. No other "six" and no other "four" selling at less than $2000 could outmatch Jeffery in dollar for dollar value before this advance. No other "six" and no other "four" selling at under $2000 could outmatch Jeffery in beauty—in exclusiveness—in stamina—in power—in flexibility—in hill climbing—in economy, or any other test by which you care to measure the car you buy. And yet Jeffery prices have not advanced.

The famous Jeffery "six"—the car which takes Palos Hill on "high" with nine full grown men—and with the same load, and then attains a speed of 70 miles per hour—sells today with all its improvements and refinements for even a lower price than last year.

We do not know how long this will last. An advance in the future in Jeffery prices will in all probability be necessary—but today you can still buy at the same old price.

Why, we ask, should you buy any other car at an advanced price when no other car could match Jeffery in performance and value at the original price?

Present conditions serve merely to emphasize this outstanding fact: Jeffery cars today represent more value for your money than any other car on earth.

"TRIBUNE" WRITER TO TELL CONDITIONS IN GERMANY

SPECIAL JOURNEY MADE TO OBTAIN FACTS FOR PUBLIC

Written After Return, Stories Escape Changes by German and British Censors.

For more than a year it has been impossible to obtain accurate information about Germany. American correspondents in Germany have had to submit all they wrote to the German censor, who has eliminated everything he considered it undesirable for the world to know.

Thereafter the correspondence has had to pass through the hands of the British censor, who in turn has struck out all information about Germany that England wished concealed.

It remained for "The Tribune" to get the news out of Germany and to do what our government has failed to do—overcome the English censorship of American mails.

In May of this year "The Tribune" commissioned Miss Madeleine G. Doty to go to Germany, observe conditions, then to return to America and write on this side of the censorship.

Thus Miss Doty brings to the readers of "The Tribune" the first uncensored accounts of how Germany is living that have been obtained in more than a year.

BY MADELEINE G. DOTY.
[Author of "Society's Misfits."]

"Will you go to Germany?"

It seemed a large order. I and my ancestors are American but my name is wrong. Madeleine (French) Zabriskie (Polish) Doty (derived from the English Doten).

"We want the truth," said the editor. "You're a neutral, you want peace; we think you tell it."

That settled it. To be asked to tell the truth is a proposition not to reject.

The quickest route to Germany lies through Norway, for all steamers, both Dutch and Norwegian, must sail around the north of Scotland.

On the 15th of July I board the Christiania Fjord. I have never been to Norway. It is like going to Greenland. My heart is in my boots. I feel very small and without courage. At the last moment I want to desert. As the steamer pulls out of the dock New York seems a heavenly city, and my family waving a last farewell infinitely precious. I feel I am being cast out of paradise.

Voyage Is Delightful.

But it is a jolly ship's company. In a day my fears are forgotten and I am absorbed in the adventure ahead. Every one on the steamer has a mission. There are some naturalized German-Americans, many Swedes, and a few Norwegians. It is a splendid voyage with calm seas and smiling skies. Each day the days grew longer and more beautiful. On the tenth day the sun is setting at 10 p. m.

Not until that tenth night do we begin to discuss the war. We are nearing the north of Scotland, the scene of the disaster to Lord Kitchener and his men, and we talk of mines and submarines. Life preservers are carefully inspected. But at break of day English officers board our ship and take us safely into Kirkwall harbor. Here we lie for two days, while passports, cabins, and our persons are examined.

"Incriminating Cables."

Presently I am summoned before an English officer. He holds two cablegrams. I reach for them eagerly, but he pauses before making delivery. "You'll have to explain these," he says. One from an unduly admiring friend begins "Brave spirit." The other from my father tells of constant thought. He wired: "Watching every night from the hill at sunset."

This, coupled with the "Brave spirit" of the other cable, and the fact that I am going to Germany, was too much for the English officer. He feels sure I mean to torpedo the king of England at sunset. Fortunately the last words of the home cable are: "Mother preserving." The officer's mother also puts up jam. His fears relax. We have a good laugh.

There is one trifling excitement during the detention at Kirkwall. A crowd gathered one afternoon at the ship's side. A German stowaway has been discovered. He is being lowered into an English boat. There are many little expressions of sympathy. They come from the pro-Germans and Swedes. A big Swede takes up a collection for the prisoner. It is quite evident where Swedish sympathy lies.

That night we cross the North sea. Not many of us sleep, but in the morning we are lying off the Norwegian coast. There is a dense fog. When it lifts our ship is lying between masses of rocks so near it seems possible to jump to them from the ship's deck. Soon we begin to steam up the narrow fjord to Bergen. Each moment the shores come in closer and rise higher. The sea and sky are a steely blue, the air as clear and fresh as on a brilliant winter's day.

Lands at Bergen.

Everywhere the people crowd to the shore to wave a greeting. Norway presents a mixture of the crude rugged freshness of America, and the finished grandeur of Switzerland. We landed at Bergen and there took train to Christiania. I took three days to make the trip and penetrated deep into a fjord or climbed to the top of a snow covered mountain.

There is something almost sinister in the grandeur of the scenery. It is overpowering to the uninitiated. It is bound to produce people of originality and inner resources. Frequently families living deep in one fjord have never known what lies on the other side of a towering mountain.

There is no trail. Everywhere on my trip I met young men and women mountain climbing. The women, like the men, wore knickerbockers. People were on their summer vacation. There was no sign of war, nor was there any sign of war in Christiania.

Like San Francisco.

That city, lying among its hills and curving water front, might be mistaken at first glance for San Francisco and the Golden Gate. But the city has the earmarks of age and romance yet lacking in San Francisco. It is a miniature Paris. It is full of the spirit of Bohemia. Its restaurants abound in good food, gay music, and interesting people.

Norway is teeming with originality. It is not smooth running and well ordered, but it has greatness and forces. Hardly a picture or piece of sculpture in its gallery of modern art but has character and meaning. Much is crude, but all expressive of life and virility. One no longer wonders that this is the land of Ibsen and Bjornson. Norway is a race of individualists. Germany uniformity. Germany's organization and German culture are repellant to every fiber of the Norwegian being. Norway, the land of viking ships and adventurers, could not produce a race of obedient people. Therefore Norwegian sympathy is with France and England, for Norway believes these countries stand for freedom, democracy, and a republican form of government.

Finds Spotless City.

From Christiania I take a sleeper to Göteborg, Sweden. When I awake in the morning it is to find myself in a new land. In my school geography Norway and Sweden seemed one and the same. But Göteborg is as alien to Christiania as Boston is to New York. This city is smooth running and well ordered; no crowd, no bustle, no Bohemia. Neatly numbered little blue and white cars run in regular circles about the town. The atmosphere is that of spotless town, where they always use sapolio. It is quaint and charming, but not exciting. Sweden, like Germany, is well organized. The Swedish and German temperament are akin, methodical and thorough, with a distaste for the erratic, the erratic which so frequently breeds genius.

Copenhagen a Metropolis.

In the afternoon I take the train from Göteborg to Copenhagen. It is too late when I reach there to form an impression. But I am conscious of flying taxis and streams of people. I have reached a seething metropolis which makes Christiania to Göteborg seem tiny by comparison.

Copenhagen combines all races. It has canals, people with wooden shoes and sturdy Dutch temperament. It has a few mildly interesting sidewalk cafés. It has suburban English houses and Tommies who go out Sunday with their best girls. It has a great beer garden in the center of the city, called Tivoli, like the Zoölogical garden of Berlin. Sundays and evenings Tivoli is crowded with bourgeois, whole families, fathers, mothers, and children who come to enjoy the fun. Beer flows, bands play and people pass and repass. Denmark absorbs all races and elements.

Sympathy with Allies.

But the Danish people, like the Norwegian, are heart and soul with the allies. Not so much because of love for England and France as through hatred of Germany. Germany has snatched part of their land and bitterness is in their hearts. They will not willingly assist Germany. All the frontier mail is examined, for recently it was found thin slabs of butter were being sent to the enemy by letter postage.

Many Danish merchants have made vast fortunes out of Germany necessity. But these people are held in contempt. In the early days they aided in feeding the German army. This they did by exporting great cans of prepared meat called "goolash." Now these people are nicknamed the "goolash." They struggle to disguise their identity and their nouveau riche condition. Old telephone and automobile numbers are in great demand and ramshackle old houses are bought at exorbitant prices.

Prosperous but Apprehensive.

The atmosphere of Copenhagen is distressing. It is tense, like a strung bow. It seems to await some dire fate, and it reeks with money made from dying humanity. Never has the city been so prosperous. Three times the ordinary number of taxis ply the streets. Yet in spite of great business activity the populace is unsettled, expectant, dreading it knows not what. Nowhere are there worse stories of German atrocities. These tales sink in. One begins to understand what the early American settlers must have felt with a band of savage red Indians just beyond the next ridge.

Daily I grow more nervous. Fear possesses me. It is said that every woman who enters Germany is subjected to a sickening and disgusting personal search and the tales of hunger and imprisonment, the fate of all foreigners in Germany, are appalling. Can I carry my task through?

Hears Alarming Reports.

I dine with an American friend. He has become completely dominated by the atrocity stories. He almost orders me home. "America forgets," he declares, "that Europe is at war and Germany is no place for a woman."

I cannot sleep. Only pride holds me to my purpose. I am told that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is tolerated in Germany and the New York Tribune despised. I destroy all papers except my CHICAGO TRIBUNE credentials. I have no scruples about this for I am writing the same articles for both papers and I am out in search of the truth and do not wish to hurt any nation.

Moreover, I have an errand of mercy in Germany. The Christian World fund for starving children of the New York Church Peace union has given me $500 for German war orphans and starving babies with a promise of more later. I clutch this firmly in my hand and proceed to the German embassy at Copenhagen.

Awaits "Dreadful Ordeal."

Here I wait all day. Any minute my number may be called, so I dare not go out to lunch. There is a great crowd of people, all seeking passports. Most are turned away. Each day it grows more difficult to enter Germany. Finally at 5 o'clock my turn comes. My credentials are entirely satisfactory. I am stamped and passed without question. It is very reassuring.

But then began dreary days of waiting. Not for four days after my passport is viséd can I leave Copenhagen. Three of my pictures and all marks of identification are being sent to the frontier. It is the waiting that is nerve racking. Meanwhile all Copenhagen seemed bent on telling me dire tales of the "Barbars."

Uncensored Telegrams.

A Norwegian acquaintance who is on her way from Holland to Denmark through Germany, twice sends word she is arriving. Eagerly I meet her train, but she never appears. What has happened? Is she imprisoned in Germany? Then I bethink myself to telegraph a German friend and ask her to meet me in Hamburg. In one week I sent three telegrams, but received no reply. It is very weird: I have the sensation that I am hurling myself into unknown space where I shall be cut off from all world communication.

Then the food problem troubles me. My Denmark friends urge me to secure government authorization to carry a small stock of supplies. This I do and purchase eight pounds of butter and a half yard of sausage.

Finally the morning of my departure arrives. I and my three bags, my package of butter and my half yard of sausage are duly deposited in the train. At the last moment comes a wire from Germany. Not from my friend but from a friend of my friend. I can only guess why this is. Perhaps my friend is in prison.

Speech Valuable Asset.

The telegram invites me to come to Munich, but my ticket and passport are made out for Hamburg. It is too late to change. I shall know no one in Hamburg. If only I could speak German. Speech is a valuable asset. Most things can be explained but I shall be tongue tied. I do not feel at all brave. It is like going into battle. I'm shivering, homesick, and terribly excited.

As the train speeds on its way I study my train companions. There are three Chinese students, a German merchant, and a woman who says she is Swiss. The woman is very friendly. She speaks to each of us and asks our mission. She has traveled from Switzerland through Germany and Denmark to Sweden and is now on her way back. This is a trip difficult to make unless one has powerful friends in the German government.

Makes a Valuable Friend.

She speaks English fluently. Perhaps she is working for Germany. Anyway she is very friendly, and very appreciative of my desire to help German babies. She is on her way to Hamburg. I ask to go with her. If she is a spy I could be with no safer companion. It is terrible to be so suspicious. That is one of the deadly features of war—you trust no one.

As the train speeds on and we reach the Danish frontier, we see small encampments of soldiers. We are entering Germany by way of Warnemude. When we reach the water front a German boat is waiting to carry us to the other side. It is a trip of about two hours. As we cross this tiny piece of the Baltic sea there are no signs of the German fleet. We probably are too far from Kiel bay.

The German territory on which we land is a seashore resort. There is a great stretch of beach dotted with sun umbrellas and a few people walking aimlessly about. Somewhere a band plays faintly. It is very dreary. Like a holiday resort on a rainy day.

Another Ordeal.

As we land we are conducted into a long wooden building. The first great ordeal is about to begin. I stick close to my traveling companion. She is given No. 50 and I No. 51. My heart goes like a triphammer. Suppose they don't pass me. My companion is summoned first, but a moment later my turn comes. I am shown into an inner office. I find myself in the midst of a little knot of soldiers. At a desk is an officer asking questions and taking answers. I stammer and stutter; the few words of German I know desert me. I thrust out my papers desperately. These have been translated into German. Their contents are magical. That money for suffering babies softens German hearts. An officer who speaks English addresses me.

"Where are you going?" A.—To Hamburg.

"Where do you expect to stay?" A.—I don't know; I'm traveling with a friend.

"What is your friend's name?" At last I am caught. I grow very red. I realize I have never asked my companion's name.

First to Leave.

The German officers gaze at me stolidly waiting an answer. Finally I blurt out: "I don't know her name, but she's No. 50."

Carefully they consult their list. It is as I guessed, No. 50 is eminently satisfactory. With utmost courtesy my passport is viséd and my luggage stamped and passed unopened. I am the first to leave the little building. The only article that troubles the English speaking officer is a box of American crackers.

"You'd better conceal those or it may cause jealousy that we let you keep them. We have made an exception in your case." There isn't an inch of room in my bag, so I reply: "I'll throw them away," and raise my hand to do so. "O don't do that!" The command comes so quickly and earnestly that in a flash I realize every speck of food in Germany is prized. So I board the train with crackers, butter, dangling sausage, and unopened baggage.

It is nearly two hours before the other passengers are released. To travel in war time requires patience. Many of the women have flushed faces. It is evident their examination has not been agreeable. Number 50 arrives shortly. She, too, is flushed. She says she has recently had an operation and wears an internal support. This surgical harness she was obliged to remove for inspection. Why this is, if as I suspect she is known to the German government, I do not know. Anyway I have been lucky. My papers are good.

All this time the train has been standing in a long wooden railroad shed. There has been nothing to see. As we pull out my eyes sweep the country. There are no trenches and no body of soldiers. To the casual observer it looks as if the Danes could walk straight into Germany. As we speed through the country we pass great stretches of flat, barren, uninteresting pasture land. Here and there are herds of cows. My companion informs me we are passing through the dairy district. Once my companion grabs my arm excitedly to point to a field of wheat (white flour). There is a dining car on the train. It has been said that through trains furnish good meals and so deceive traveling foreigners as to internal conditions.

Gets War Time Meal.

This dinner was fourth rate, with a fourth rate service. A total change from the well run dining car of a year ago. There is soup, fish, a tiny slab of meat, vegetables, and a pudding. The quantity is small and the quality poor and the preparation atrocious. The latter defect is not the fault of the cook. It is due to lack of fat, lack of sugar, lack of seasoning. It has all been boiled and is tasteless. It reminds me of prison fare. The pudding cannot be eaten. It is a gray mass and tastes like bran. It is without sweetening. A soldier manfully eating his sees me in the act of swallowing my first mouthful. He grins a sardonic grin. It is practically the only smile I see in all Prussia.

First Day in Hamburg.

In three hours we reached Hamburg. If there had been a carriage or taxi at the station it had gone when we reached the entrance. We eventually secure an aged porter to carry our luggage to the Reichshof hotel across the way. The station is full of soldiers, pale faced, worried, and silent. They are lining up to take night trains for the front.

At the hotel my companion and I secure adjacent single rooms. It is a great relief to have her German tongue at my service. I don't open my mouth. The Reichshof is perhaps a second rate or third rate hotel, but I have a perfectly appointed room with hot and cold running water for 3 marks 50 pfennigs a day (about 90 cents). German hotel men have resolutely kept hotels open at great loss and have not raised room rates.

I was too much excited to go to bed and suggested a walk. Through silent deserted streets my companion and I made our way. We came to the great sheet of water in the center of Hamburg. At intervals bright lights from a café sent their shimmering rays flashing and dancing across the water. But all is silent and still as though some great calamity were upon the city.

No Sugar and No Milk.

We entered a café. It is a huge place and has hundreds of little tables. Only two are occupied—one by a group all in mourning. The brilliance of the place exaggerated its big emptiness. We sit down and order coffee. Presently two cups of steaming black liquid are served. There is no sugar and no milk. My companion calls a waiter. "You've forgotten the milk and sugar." The waiter bows politely. "No, madam," says he. "We have recently been verboten to serve either milk or sugar."

We drink our coffee in silence. It is coffee "ersatz," which means coffee mixed with a substitute. A lump rises in my throat. I see the tired, worried soldiers with their lean faces. I looked at the little group in mourning across the way. I taste my undrinkable coffee.

Seized by Pity.

Already the suffering of the people has sunk deep, an aching pity seizes me. I do not stop to reason whose fault it is. Whether the German government or not is the chief culprit for the state of affairs, I only know mankind is being hurt, is being punished. My prison experience has taught me that punishment is of no avail. To crush people makes them ugly.

"This has got to stop," I whisper to my companion, and she nods.

So ends the first day. The succeeding week in Germany, Switzerland, France, and England must be told in succeeding articles.

LANDIS ANGERED BUT POWERLESS IN CAR FAMINE

Legally Unable to Compel Roads to Furnish Rolling Stock to Coal Men.

"Against all of his sense of justice and inclination" Judge Landis yesterday ruled against twenty-six coal mining companies in Illinois and Indiana who appealed for an order compelling 146 railway companies to return coal cars to the home roads, thus averting a coal famine.

The coal mining companies declared they are unable to perform their duty to the public without cars in which to ship fuel. They declared the railway companies are using coal cars for other purposes and thus causing a coal famine and a consequent rise in prices.

Judge Landis Powerless.

Judge Landis said he was powerless under the powers granted to the interstate commerce commission by the Supreme court to order a return of the cars. The judge applied the keen whip of his sarcasm in agreeing with the complaining attorneys, who said they were unable to understand the agreement of the members of the American Railway association providing for the interchange and return of cars between connecting lines. The agreement is plain enough, but the cars are not sent back.

The action was brought by M. F. Gallagher, attorney for the twenty-six companies whose mines are in Illinois and Indiana on the tracks of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad.

Ruling of the Judge.

"That there is an official body known as the interstate commerce commission," said Judge Landis, "whom the carriers' counsel seem to be unanimously agreed does possess such a high character of intellect that the problem which all the railway operatives and traffic experts in the United States are helpless to untangle, will yield before the efforts of the commission. You will not infer from my statement of the case that I do or do not take stock in these suggestions that these gentlemen have made.

"The question that the court is dealing with is a legal one, which is presented by the position of the defendant carriers . . . that this court is powerless to grant the plaintiffs relief because of the fact that the interstate commerce law has devolved the authority in such a situation upon the commission itself.

Not a Local Issue.

"The point at issue is not a local one, but exists throughout the United States. I say this in view of the conclusion, which, against all of my sense of justice and inclination and feeling about what has not been done by the defendant carriers, I have been obliged to reach.

"The decisions of the Supreme court of the United States, as I read them, are clear to the effect that congress, having devolved upon the commission this power of supervision and enforcement, the court here is without power, in advance of action by the commission, to relieve this situation.

the Supreme court on this point, distasteful as the ultimatum of this order is to me, having in mind the object of the statutes, having in mind that there are shippers of grain in Minnesota, of lumber in California, of stone some place else, and steel some place else, and cotton some place else that are all in the same fix with these coal companies, whose inability to operate their mines has created the situation which this community particularly is now confronted with on this 11th day of November, 1916, at the beginning of winter, I would have to deny these plaintiffs their relief, because of my inability to read into the situation the primary power in this court to grant relief."

Judge Landis directed the complainants to appear before the interstate commerce commission now sitting in Louisville to hear just such complaints. He said he had no doubt Commissioner McCord would speedily sign an order giving relief.

Operators Doing Their Best.

It was pointed out by George Cushing, editor of the Black Diamond, a coal trade paper, that the coal operators are trying to do their duty.

"Of coal being moved," said Mr. Cushing, "from 94 to 95 per cent (anthracite) is moving on contract or 'circular' prices, and only from 4 to 6 per cent of it is 'premium' coal, or coal for which premium figures have been paid. In bituminous coal from 60 to 95 per cent is moving at contract prices and from 5 to 40 per cent on premium.

"Our retailers are shorter than our factories and railroads. The gas and electric people have a safe margin. Thus the burden of our shortage falls upon the retailer, and in consequence the small consumer.

"Our car supply just now is about normal. We are getting from 50 to 60 per cent of the number at which we are rated, which is about normal for October and November, but an element of danger enters the situation with the approach of December. Ordinarily the condition eases in December; this year it won't. The demand in Chicago for steam coal is 25 per cent greater than at this time last year, although it is normal for domestic coal. The demand on Chicago from outlying districts, however, is abnormal—and therein is our danger.

"I suppose 50 per cent of the situation may be attributed to the shortage of rail cars, which is really an extremely bad distribution of cars rather than a shortage," he declared. "The railroads have chosen the psychological moment, apparently, to begin fighting among themselves."

TEETH, HAIR, SKIN

Manufacturing Druggists Offer Job to Prize Beauty.

WHO is the Chicago girl with the most beautiful complexion, teeth, and hair?

Each of the 1,440 members of the Chicago Retail Druggists' association is searching the neighborhood of his store for the answer. When she is found she will be given a good position and a chance to tour all the larger cities of the United States.

The druggists are going to have their first annual exhibition at the Coliseum from Dec. 2 to 10. The leading manufacturers of lotions, tonics, tooth pastes, and similar products will be exhibitors. They want the best practical demonstration of the value of their products.

When the winner is chosen she will have a chance to become a model for a leading manufacturer and tour the country demonstrating his wares. Rouge, dyes, and similar concoctions will not figure in the competition, it being the intention to find the girl who has improved or preserved her beauty by the use of legitimate national products.

ROADS ORDERED TO RETURN CARS OF OTHER LINES

Commerce Official Starts to Remedy Shortage and Remove Coal Famine.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Interstate Commerce Commissioner McChord started the unscrambling of the railroad car tangle today. He sent a blanket telegram to the railroads of the country ordering them to start towards home every foreign coal car on their lines and report back to the commission on Monday what results had been obtained up to the time and follow it up with daily reports thereafter.

The commissioner indicated, in making the announcement, that is was only the first of a series of steps under consideration to relieve the coal shortage that has been sending prices up. Other measures will include lumber and grain and the refrigerator car shortage that is threatening the harvesting of the perishable fruit and produce crops in the northwest. The telegram was put out in the form of a proclamation. In fact, the railroads have accepted it as an imperative order, issued as it was immediately following the testimony given by G. H. Alexander, superintendent of car service for the New York Central lines.

Cars Will Be Sent West.

Mr. Alexander admitted that his road had thousands of cars on its line belonging to other railways, adding that it would be in a position to handle all the business offered by its own shippers if it in turn could get the other lines to return New York Central cars.

"You say that you have 5 per cent more coal cars on your line than you own," Commissisoner McChord said. "You should not have that much and I am going to issue a proclamation to all the railroads to reduce the cars on their lines to the number they actually own, starting right now."

The order will have the immediate effect of throwing more cars into the middle west, where the coal shortage is most acute. The export situation in the eastern seaboard and the wholesale confiscation of other lines' cars have almost stripped this section of the country, it was pointed out. The Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad testified later in the day that it had lost 28,000 cars to eastern lines during the last year, and that today less than 24 per cent of its coal cars were on its own lines and less than 8 per cent of its box cars.

Roads Plan New Regulation.

The word was also passed around among the shippers that the railways have assured the commission they will start moving foreign cars immediately and will frame new regulations making the recurrence of present conditions impossible. The railroad presidents from the eastern, western, and southern territories will meet in New York on Monday and have agreed to have a plan to submit by Tuesday night. Commissioner McChord has been asked to confer with them in Washington as soon thereafter as possible.

The line of questioning followed out by F. B. Dow, attorney for the commission, today indicated that it was thinking seriously of paying no attention to initials on box cars or refrigerators. A pooling arrangement is possible with the railways agreeing to move the cars into a shortage territory, regardless of ownership, at the orders of the commission.

C. W. Jackson, representing the brokers furnishing coal to the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, said his company has been receiving no contract coal recently because of an embargo on the Louisville and Nashville railroad.

Fruit Harvest Is in Danger.

R. G. Phillips of Rochester, N. Y., president of the International Apple Shippers' association, started the hearing this morning, testifying that as a result of the shortage in refrigerator cars the entire harvest of the fruit crop in the far northwest was in danger. He said that at some points in Washington, Oregon, and California the crops had been gathered and thousands of carloads were waiting on the ground or in temporary storehouses that would be lost in the event of a freeze.

The Great Northern railroad had been able to furnish only 600 cars during a month when the demand had reached 150 cars a day. Of the 600 more than half had arrived in such condition that they could not be used for the long journey to Chicago.

"In some cases we found these refrigerator cars loaded with paving brick and household goods," he said. "We have agreed to pay and have been paying the highest demurrage rates in order that these cars would be reserved for our business. Instead they are being used for everything."

LOWER RAIL RATE ORDERED BY WISCONSIN COMMISSION

Ten to Twelve Per Cent Reduction on Carload Lots Will Be Enforced Within the State.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 11.—A material reduction in intrastate distance rates on agricultural implements, vehicles, and articles of this nature in carloads is announced by the state railroad commission today in the decision handed down in the case of Lindsay Bros., Milwaukee, against railroads operating in Wisconsin.

The commission orders the Chicago and Northwestern, Soo, Omaha and Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroads to discontinue the levying and collecting of group rates on those articles and to substitute by Jan. 1, 1917, a distance rate schedule compiled by the commission from [illegible] miles.

The average reduction for points in the state is declared to be from 10 to 12 per cent.

ROAD FORCED TO SEIZE COAL.

Big Four Takes Fuel Consigned to Ohio Manufacturer—Shortage at Critical Stage.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 11.—That the coal shortage has reached a critical stage was demonstrated here tonight when the Big Four railroad seized for its own use 150 tons of coal consigned to a manufacturer here. The railroad took advantage of a provision of the interstate commerce law which is said to allow such action when it is necessary to keep the road in operation.

Money Grows if rightly planted
DIXIE BRAND
DIXIE BRAND

A Yearly Income for Every Man and Woman

Would you save $10.00 monthly for a few years if you felt assured it would earn for you an income of $1,500 to $2,000 yearly? This without a stroke of work on your part. You do not have to leave your present business or employment unless you choose.

That is what a Dixie Estate planted to fancy grapefruit, oranges and avocadoes should earn after it begins bearing. Past and present prices for these fruits prove this an EXTREMELY CONSERVATIVE ESTIMATE.

Picture for yourself a cozy home in balmy Florida, beneath beautiful skies, among flowering shrubs and luxuriant money-producing fruit trees. SUCH IS A DIXIE ESTATE, which awaits you whenever your inclination draws you to it.

SAVE NOW — SMILE LATER

We expect to plant at least 1,000 of these Dixie Estates this year and bring them into bearing for their fortunate owners. Will you be one? Think of this great and unparalleled opportunity!!!

A Few Dollars Saved Monthly Will Secure for You a Dixie Estate

You are not paying out or spending this money, but saving and investing it in a safe, money-making property—a highly developed fruit grove which, according to statistics, should within a few years bring you a substantial income. Think what this really means to you—figure it out for yourself.

A Dixie Estate Will Insure Your Future

HERE IS THE ONE INVESTMENT which must appeal to every man and woman. Whether you are drudging along for a mere living wage—whether you are a merchant or farmer—or whether you have an independent income—you cannot afford to miss this chance to own a Dixie Estate.

Citrus fruit and avocado trees are long lived. This is not a temporary investment, but one which should bring a permanent income and continue to increase in value yearly. Compare this with any investment you have ever heard of—you will have to admit a similar offer has never before been made.

YOU ARE PLANTING MONEY RIGHTLY WHEN YOU INVEST IN DIXIE ESTATES

LOCATION—The best in all Florida, in the vicinity of Tampa—population, including suburbs, 70,000, growing so rapidly that it is destined to become the Los Angeles of the South. Dixie Estates will be near paved boulevards, railroad stations, schools and churches.

THE SOIL is as good as any of the best fruit land in all Florida. You could not buy better land for fruit growing no matter how much you paid for it.

THE CLIMATIC CONDITIONS are ideal for fruit growing. A more health-giving, charming climate could not be desired.

THE TREES are the very finest obtainable—budded, pedigreed stock, grown by experts. Owning extensive nurseries and having years of experience developing Florida lands enable us to develop these Dixie Estates in the most approved up-to-date manner.

Fancy oranges and grapefruit are well known money producers, when brought into bearing by expert, scientific methods.

The avocado (commonly called alligator pear) is known as the aristocrat of fruits. The supply is so limited that in northern cities only the rich can afford to pay the extravagant price it sells for. In December, 1915, avocadoes sold in Chicago at the almost unbelievable price of $3.00 to $4.00 each. It is no doubt the highest priced fruit known.

ONE SINGLE AVOCADO TREE HAS PRODUCED $1,500 IN FRUIT ANNUALLY. When you realize what a wonderful fruit the avocado is you will understand why we claim that in Dixie Estates (which will contain 20% avocado, 40% grapefruit and 40% orange trees) you are offered a heretofore unheard of opportunity to derive a splendid YEARLY INCOME FOR A SMALL INVESTMENT. The proof is what you want!!! We have it and will gladly send it to you FREE.

YOUR DIXIE ESTATE receives expert and scientific care and attention for three years. A grove manager then takes charge if you do not wish to look after it personally. WOUNDED, THEN FALLS AGAINST BURGLAR ALARM

Watchmaker in Pawnshop Shot by "Patron" Who Asks to See Timepiece.

John White, a watchmaker, employed in the pawnshop of Max Rosenthal, 821 West Madison street, was shot in the back and dangerously wounded yesterday by a man who had asked to see a watch and who escaped when a burglar alarm was accidently touched off by his falling victim.

The supposed patron and White were alone in the shop. It is believed the man had pawned the watch he asked to see and was desperate because the time had lapsed and he was unable to redeem it.

Shoots as White Turns.

As White turned to get the watch from the window the man fired. White fell and bumped against one of the numerous alarm connections.

The alarm brought in a number of neighboring shopkeepers, who arrived as White's assailant was leaving. No suspicion was attached to him and he escaped. White was taken to the county hospital.

Killed in Union Park.

Andrew Byrnes of 1424 Fulton street was shot twice and fatally wounded last night when in Union Park court, between Fulton and West Lake streets. The shooting is a mystery. One theory of the police is that Byrnes may have been shot by holdup men, a robbery having been committed a short time before only a block away.

Byrnes, an hour after he was found on the sidewalk, died at the county hospital. Efforts to question him failed.

The man robbed was Lawrence Baronowski of 1461 Ogden avenue. Two men took $50 from him at the point of a revolver at Union Park court and Arbor place less than twenty minutes before the finding of Byrnes. The police are tracing Byrnes' movement and trying to learn whether he had any enemies.

OSTEOPATH LOSES LAWSUIT.

Fred W. Gage, a practicing osteopathic physician, at 27 East Monroe street, was yesterday denied by Judge Walker his petition for a writ of mandamus to compel City Clerk Siman and Health Commissioner Robertson, and Martin Heckard, registrar, to register him as a "legally qualified physician."

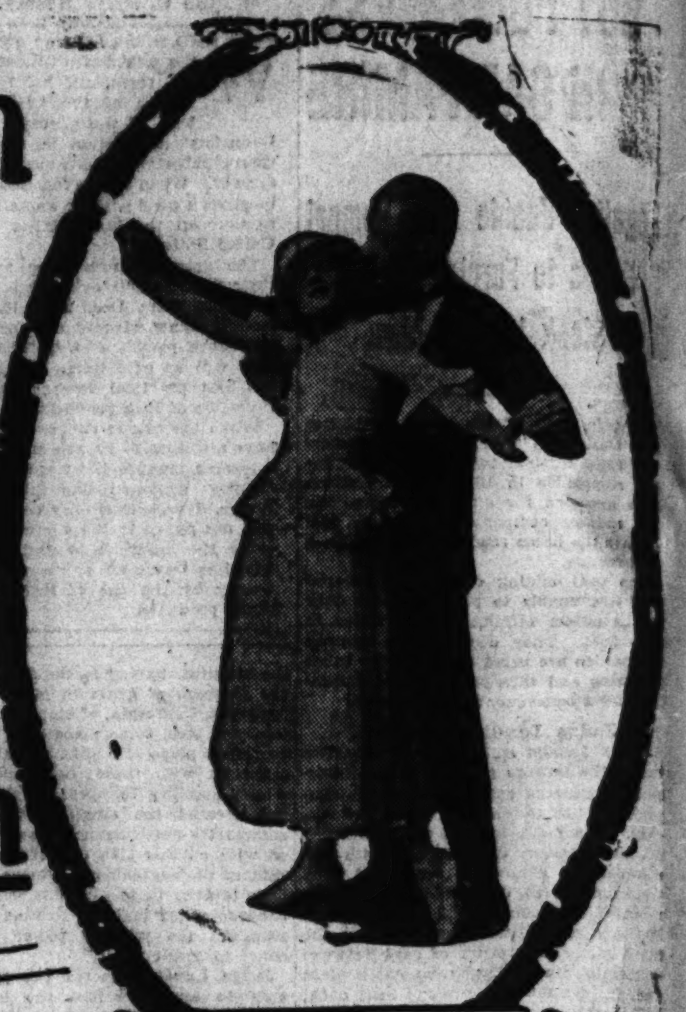
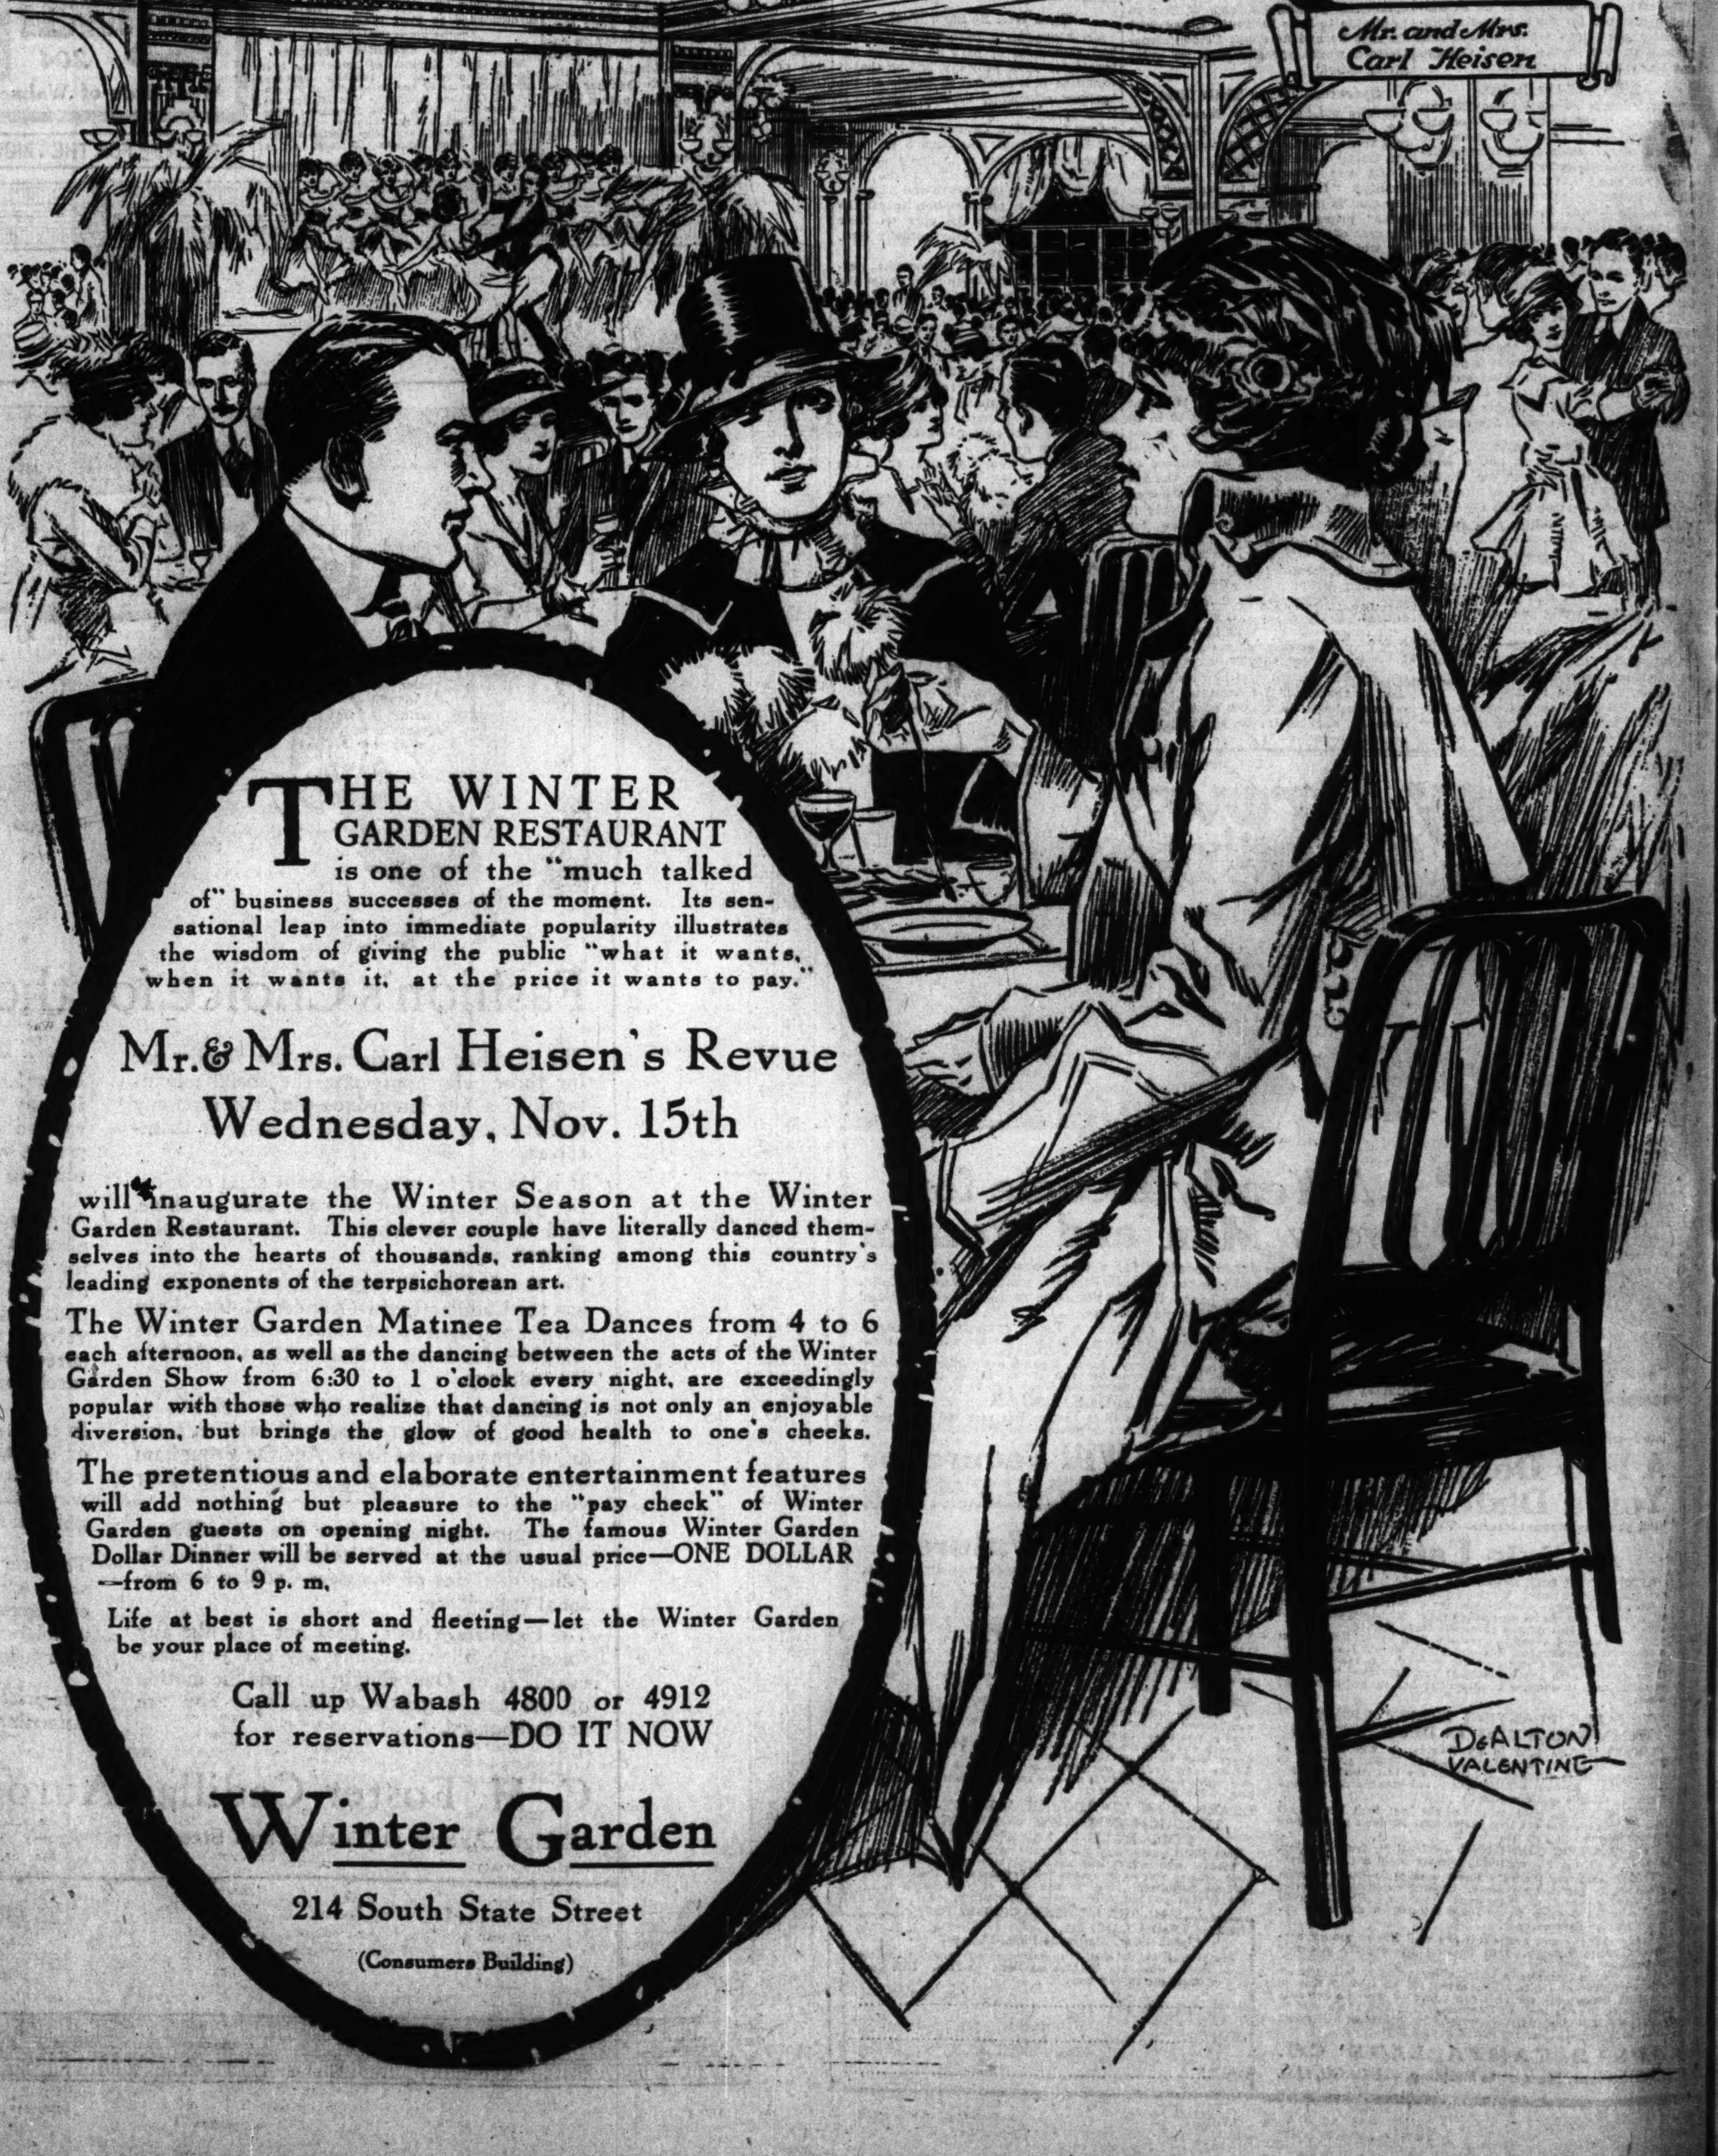
Opening Winter Season

Winter Garden Restaurant

Wednesday Nov. 15th



Mr. and Mrs. Carl Heisen



THE WINTER GARDEN RESTAURANT is one of the "much talked of" business successes of the moment. Its sensational leap into immediate popularity illustrates the wisdom of giving the public "what it wants, when it wants it, at the price it wants to pay."

Mr. & Mrs. Carl Heisen's Revue
Wednesday, Nov. 15th

will inaugurate the Winter Season at the Winter Garden Restaurant. This clever couple have literally danced themselves into the hearts of thousands, ranking among this country's leading exponents of the terpsichorean art.

The Winter Garden Matinee Tea Dances from 4 to 6 each afternoon, as well as the dancing between the acts of the Winter Garden Show from 6:30 to 1 o'clock every night, are exceedingly popular with those who realize that dancing is not only an enjoyable diversion, but brings the glow of good health to one's cheeks.

The pretentious and elaborate entertainment features will add nothing but pleasure to the "pay check" of Winter Garden guests on opening night. The famous Winter Garden Dollar Dinner will be served at the usual price—ONE DOLLAR —from 6 to 9 p. m.

NATION FACES BREAD FAMINE; DUE TO EXPORT

War Crazed Europe Fast Exhausting Surplus—Embargo Seems Remedy.

SOME FACTS THAT STARTLE.

(Mr. Hyde has been assigned to inquire into the subject of the High Cost of Living—a question of vital importance. Following is the first of a series of articles setting forth the facts.)

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

A bread famine!

Within the next six months the people of the United States will probably be forced to cut down the amount of bread they eat. If the famine comes it will be because so much wheat has been exported that not enough is left to supply the domestic consumption.

Former Ald. B. W. Snow is a leading crop expert. "On Aug. 1, last," said Mr. Snow, "it was estimated that there were 100,000,000 bushels of wheat in the country available for export. In other words, there was that much available wheat above the amount needed for consumption in the United States up to July 1, 1917, when the new crop will be ready.

"During the last two months about 75,000,000 bushels—three-quarters of the available supply—has been sold abroad. The foreign demand continues. There is grave danger of overexportation."

BRITISH BIG BUYERS.

Last week the British government bought 7,000,000 bushels of wheat for shipment abroad, a considerable part of it from Canada. Yesterday European purchases aggregated 2,500,000 bushels.

Foreign government agencies are still in the market with large orders. It seems certain that the surplus of 25,000,000 bushels available for export, without putting the people of the United States on short rations, will be exhausted within a month. There is nothing to prevent foreign governments from buying and sending out of the country great quantities of wheat after that time.

ASQUITH'S VIEW OF CRISIS.

The premier of Great Britain, Mr. Asquith, told a committee which called to complain of high prices that, while high prices are to be deplored, an actual shortage of food in the country would be more serious. If there were a reduced supply of foodstuffs in the world markets the most important thing for England was to be assured of an ample supply, and it could not do this by regulating prices below world prices.

Something like 20,000,000 men in the war trenches must be fed, to say nothing of the vast civilian populations of Europe, largely busy with the manufacture of war munitions. It is to be noted of the soldiers that official reports show them to be demanding and eating 80 per cent more food in the field than they consumed at home.

EMBARGO SEEMS ONLY SAFETY.

How far is the United States to suffer not only from high prices of foodstuffs but even from a bread famine due to the demands of war crazed Europe?

Apparently the only thing which will keep enough wheat in the United States for the consumption of its own people is the putting of an embargo on the exportation of wheat, which will prevent its being sent out of the country. That, at least, is the only remedy suggested by experts. An embargo on the export of wheat would instantly cause a sharp drop in the price in the United States.

SOME PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

Meanwhile there are certain facts which should be interesting to the housewife and consumer in Chicago and certain questions which should be answered.

Bread made from American wheat sells today in London at 18 cents for four pounds, much cheaper than bread made from the same flour in Chicago.

Does that indicate the existence of a wheat trust in the United States?

Is speculation on the Chicago board of trade and other exchanges responsible for the fact that wheat is rapidly approaching the price of $2 a bushel?

PART OF MILLER AND BAKER.

What part do the miller and the baker play in increasing the price of bread in Chicago and other American cities?

Can an embargo be legally laid against the exportation of wheat?

How would an embargo affect the American farmer?

What would happen if the Dardanelles should be opened and the way left clear for the great wheat crops of Russia, bottled up for two years, to be shipped to all the ports of the world?

LIVING COST HITS GROCER.

Petition in Bankruptcy Blamed to "Squeezing" by High Prices He Was Forced to Pay for Stock.

That the high cost of living had simply squeezed his client out of business was the assertion made yesterday by Attorney Philip L. Sullivan, who filed a bankruptcy petition on behalf of Alfred F. [illegible], a grocer and butcher at 5057 South State street, listing liabilities of [illegible] and assets of about $200.

"The high cost of food made it impossible for my client to buy supplies in large quantities," said Mr. Sullivan. "He is simply one of a large number of small grocers in the city who are simply being squeezed to death by the high cost of living."

Youth Shot by Chum in 'Wild West'

Robert White, 15 years old, was too "quick on the draw" yesterday when he and Edward Gignac, 17 years old, were playing Indian. Gignac fell with a bullet in his abdomen. It is feared he may die.

White is the son of Matthew White, 6442 Wayne avenue, secretary to the general manager of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. Young Gignac is the son of Raymond N. Gignac, 6437 Lakewood avenue, member of the credit company.

The White boy broke down and was weeping bitterly when taken to the Rogers Park station to be questioned.

Found and Hid Weapon.

"I found the revolver in a playground a few months ago," he said. "I hid it in my room. My brother gave me three cartridges to play with. Edward and I thought we would have lots of fun playing wild west, so this afternoon we went up to my house. Mother was out shopping.

"We played to see who could draw the quickest, like they do in wild west stories. Ed had a button hook and I used the revolver. We quit for a while and I placed the revolver on a window sill.

Believes He Found Bullets.

"I guess Ed must have put the bullet in it. I didn't. I think he found them and placed them in the gun while I wasn't looking. We began playing wild west again. Ed pointed the button hook at me and made a motion as if he had pulled the trigger of a revolver. I picked up the pistol and pressed the trigger.

"There was a shot and Ed fell on the floor with his hands to his stomach. He moaned, 'Robert, you've shot me.' Then he got up and staggered to the dor and fainted before he could open it. I ran out to call neighbors, but the people upstairs weren't home so I hurried over to Ed's house and told his mother something terrible had happened. His mother fainted when she saw him."

Later a conference was held at the Rogers Park police station, at which the fathers of the Days and White were present. All were convinced the shooting was an accident.

U. S. FINDS FOODSTUFFS STORED IN YARDS IN CARS.

Inquiry Starts to Find if Supplies Were Held Unloaded to Cause Increase of Prices.

Government investigation of the charge that more than 2,000 carloads of foodstuffs are being held in the railroad yards of Chicago for a boom in prices was started yesterday by Joseph B. Fleming, assistant to District Attorney Clyne. The report came to the district attorney's office in a letter Friday.

Mr. Fleming investigated and found that a number of carloads of cabbage and potatoes had been lying in the yards of various railroads for almost a month. Whether these cars are being held up to create a shortage will be the subject of a rigid inquiry.

According to Mr. Fleming a number of railroad officials declared that they were powerless to move the cars until the shipments were called for by the owners of the foodstuffs contained in them.

Produce dealers, to whom inquiries were made, denied they had any foodstuffs stored in freight cars. The market, they say, despite the soaring prices, is "choked" with farm produce at this time of year.

It is the intention of Mr. Clyne to summon a number of produce dealers to his office tomorrow to inquire into the reasons for the produce remaining in cars for so long.

"ADMITTANCE, 2 POTATOES," IS SIGN AT THIS MOVIE.

Owners Start Move to Collect Price Soaring Foods to Be Given Poor on Thanksgiving.

ADMITTANCE, 2 POTATOES

That was the sign above a moving picture theater in Waukegan yesterday. The theater is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Muller, and the day's receipts totaled nearly three barrels of potatoes.

"Groceries are so high that the poor will have a hard time making out a Thanksgiving dinner this year," said Mrs. Muller. "Next week the admission will be an onion or a cabbage, and then I am going to try to get the bakers and grocers to indorse the movement with some mince pies and coffee.

"By Thanksgiving we'll be able to provide materials for a number of good dinners to the poor."

OHIO MINE WORKERS DEMAND HIGH LIVING COST INQUIRY

Charge Food Speculation Causes Hunger in Families, Even Where Bread Winner Has Steady Job.

Columbus, O., Nov. 11.—Ohio state mine workers through their executive board today sent resolutions to President Wilson and Gov. Willis demanding national and state investigations of the high cost of living.

Representing 50,000 miners the resolutions declare the high cost of living is caused by "unfair and illegal speculations in foodstuffs and other necessary commodities, thereby causing actual hunger and distress in families even where the bread winner is steadily employed."

CLOSE SALOON OF "SPIKER."

Detectives yesterday closed the saloon owned by Patrick J. [Spiker] Fleming at West Chestnut and Wells street. The license issued to Fleming had been ordered revoked by Mayor Thompson's investigating committee. The saloonkeeper and Joseph Geary were found guilty last Thursday of assaulting Joseph Gavon, 111 West Chestnut street. Fleming was fined $200 and sentenced to ninety days in the house of correction and Geary also was fined.

$173,000 FINES FIXED BY LANDIS IN RAIL CASES

Six Lines and Packing House Draw Penalties on Rebating and Other Charges.

JUDGE CLEANING UP DOCKET.

Federal Judge Landis stepped into his court yesterday, sat down, adjusted his glasses, and then fined a packing firm and several railroad companies $173,000 and costs of approximately $5,000 on charges of violation of the interstate commerce laws.

Rebating and shipping less than carload lots at carload rates and working trainmen an excess number of hours were the principal offenses.

The trials took place some time ago and the action of Judge Landis was taken in a general cleanup of old cases on his docket.

These Companies Fined.

The fines were assessed against the following railroads and packing firms:

The Elgin, Joliet and Eastern, $30,000 and costs.

Pennsylvania company, $20,000 and costs.

Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis, $50,000 in one case and $20,000 in another, and costs.

Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, $100 and costs.

Swift & Co., $60,000 and costs.

The Specific Charges.

The charge against the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern Railway company was a false bill, it being alleged it allowed the carrier, the Low company of Joliet, to ship cardboard boxes at the shipping rate of strawboard, which is lower.

The Pennsylvania company and the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad company were each fined for allowing the W. H. Merritt company, formerly a Chicago board of trade member, a rebate of $2 a car on every outbound shipment of grain.

The $30,000 fine against the latter road was for allowing a similar rebate to the B. A. Eckhart Milling company.

Rebate Larger in Eckhart Case.

The rebate in this case, however, was twice the amount of the switching bill, and often amounted to as high as $16 a car, and the government introduced into evidence a letter written by the traffic manager in charge of the Eckhart shipments to his superior in Pittsburgh, advising him to "pay the charges, as 'Barney' Eckhart was very influential in Chicago politics."

Mr. Eckhart was tried on the same charge, but the case was taken from the jury and thrown out of court by Federal Judge Anderson. The railroad pleaded guilty.

Charge Against Swifts.

The charge against Swift & Co. was that it shipped less than carload shipments via the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad company and the Ann Arbor Railway company to Michigan points at the carload rate.

The three $300 fines against the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad company, the Indiana Harbor Belt Railway company, and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad company were assessed for violation of the hours of service law, working trainmen in excess of a specified number of hours.

In the other case against the Chicago and Northwestern railroad it pleaded guilty to violating the twenty-eight hour law, which prohibits holding cattle or sheep in freight cars more than twenty-eight hours.

SEARCH IS ABANDONED FOR YOUNG "GLOBE-TROTTERS."

Matthew Dick and Paul Martin Declared by Parents to Be "All Right," Though Wanderers.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 11.—Search for Matthew Dick and Paul Martin, the two Yale students from Chicago, who left school to make their way in the world, was abandoned tonight by the faculty and members of the young men's families who have been here for the last two or three days in an effort to discover some clew.

The ambition of the boys to make their own way without regard to the fortunes of their parents was given as their reason for taking a flyer in the open world. A chance remark by Dick that he would like to try to make an independent fortune in South America is the only clew to the boys' intentions.

Mrs. William P. Martin, mother of Paul, and A. B. Dick, father of Matthew, yesterday declared they were not worried about the boys.

"I have heard from my son and am confident he is all right," said Mrs. Martin.

"Whether or not I have heard from my son is my affair," said Mr. Dick. "I am not worried about him."

MUCH COLDER, PREDICTION.

While there was a decided drop in temperature yesterday, there is a greater one due for today, according to Assistant Forecaster Mitchell of the weather bureau. Chicago kept reasonably warm yesterday owing to the lake, which keeps the city warm in winter. In fact, Chicago was the warmest spot anywhere along the shores of the lake. But today there will be a zipping breeze from the north and northeast and it will in nowise be a warm one. Snow, too, is to accompany the nor'easter.

WOMAN ASKS A FRESH START

Mrs. Jessie Farrell Seeks Divorce, Then God's Open Country.

"To know more of peace and happiness, with her little daughter in God's open country—somewhere," is the wish expressed by Mrs. Jessie Farrell, who is seeking to end a loveless marriage with her husband, and who in turn is accused by that husband of infidelity and a none too clandestine affair with a First regiment cavalryman. Mrs. Farrell was yesterday awarded temporary custody of her 6 year old daughter, Edith, and $25 a month alimony.

Mr. Farrell, in contesting her suit for separate maintenance, charged that his wife left little Edith outdoors in the cold on several occasions while she entertained Clark Hallam, then a University of Chicago student, in her apartment. Attorney Ulrich, for Mr. Farrell, said a cross bill for divorce would be filed, at which time endearing letters, alleged to have passed between Mrs. Farrell and Hallam, while the latter was on the border, will be introduced.

Writes to "Tribune."

In her own defense Mrs. Farrell yesterday wrote THE TRIBUNE.

"Our domestic life," says the letter, "from the beginning was never one of love and harmony that should exist between husband and wife and my present step is one of long negotiating, its tardiness only explained first by the daughter we both are so fond of, my unsuccessful attempts at a settlement out of ccurt, and the abhorrence of publicity.

"The charges against me are preposterous; there are no grounds for an alienation suit, as will be proved at the proper time; I never received any attentions from Mr. Hallam other than from adviser to client.

"I would like to be credited with having a little more good common sense and putting my brains to better use than having dreams of being a society queen or even listening to such empty talk if it were voiced to me.

Would Study Music.

"I am not socially inclined, but I am musically inclined, and if I had all the money I want I would now be getting that musical education, instead of being humiliated by a mercenary husband and grinding away in a big indifferent city.

"I would take my daughter and get away in God's open country somewhere and know more of peace and happiness."

FLOWER EXHIBIT TODAY.

Newest and Handsomest Blossom Will Be Named for Mrs. Wilson.

The newest and handsomest flower exhibited by the Chicago Florists' club in the gold room of the Hotel La Salle today will be named for Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. A large bouquet of newest flowers will be presented to Miss Violet Selfridge of London, for showing her true Americanism in coming from England to Chicago to make her social debut. The exhibition is open to the public afternoon and evening.

According to all rules of demand and supply the stock in flower offerings for debutantes went soaring yesterday, for four youthful maidens were formally introduced to society during the afternoon.

Assisting her were Mrs. Norman Fraser, Miss Louise Garaghty, Miss Barbara Blatchford, Miss Dorothy Fraser, Miss Henriette Wurts, Miss Carter Williams, Miss Edith Besley, and Miss Dorothy Packard.

The tea was given by her aunt, Mrs. Frank Chandler, at 744 Rush street, where her father and mother were married and where her sister, Miss Rosalie, made her debut four year ago.

TRIED HIS LUCK IN STOCKS; NOW HE'S SHORT $45,000.

Clerk in Liberty National Bank of New York Confesses, President Cochran Announces.

New York, Nov. 11.—[Special.]—James Miller, a young clerk in the Liberty National bank, confessed to President Thomas Cochran and other officers of that institution Thursday that he had, within a period of a few months, embezzled $44,919 and had used the money in speculation.

Miller is in his twenties and lives at 1372 Seventy-ninth street, Brooklyn, with his wife and one child. He is said to be related to several wealthy families in Brooklyn.

The lure of the "easy money" to be made nowadays in Wall street led the young man to speculate, he confessed. But while others were winning hundreds of thousands he was losing.

According to a formal statement given out today by President Cochran, the Liberty National does not lose a cent, as Miller was bonded in excess of the amount he stole.

The name of the bonding company and of the brokerage house where Miller did his speculating were kept secret by President Cochran.

DWELLERS IN BUNGALOWS HELD ON CHECK CHARGE.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Martin of Park Ridge, Home Owners, Accused of Offering "Bogus" Paper.

Harry Martin and his wife, Mary, who live in their own bungalow at Park Ridge, were arrested last night on a charge of confidence game. Philip Rice, a lawyer at 127 North Dearborn street, who represents several persons who cashed supposedly bogus checks for the couple, is complainant.

It is alleged that Mrs. Rice, who had a bank account, checked out and afterward drew six checks on the bank, the amount being $38. The checks were cashed by the husband in payment of tradesmen's bills at Park Ridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Rice were taken to the South Clark street station. They pleaded not to be separated and were allowed to sit together in the man's lockup until midnight, when friends procured their relase on bail.

Mrs. Mary A. Smith of 4242 North Ashland avenue was granted a divorce from George B. Smith, a druggist, yesterday by Judge Denis Sullivan. Mrs. Smith said she found pictures of actresses in his pockets.

YALE STUDENT'S RUNABOUT KILLS

C. H. Whitney, Chicago, Is Held After Finding Body Wedged in Car.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Charles H. Whitney, a Yale student, the son of Mrs. Julia L. Whitney of 3122 Sheridan road, Chicago, was held by the police without bonds all day as the result of the peculiar death of an unidentified man, a portion of whose body was found jammed between the body of the Whitney automobile and a spare wheel carried on the side.

Whitney was released tonight in custody of his counsel and the coroner will resume his investigation Monday. Since the first of the year Coroner Mix has had twenty-two automobile fatalities in New Haven and thirty-eight around New Haven, nearly all on the Milford turnpike, where Whitney killed his victim early today. The coroner is especially aroused because this is the third motor casualty on the same highway this week.

Freshman in Sheffield.

Young Whitney, who is a freshman in Sheffield Scientific school, accompanied by two classmates, Larry Allerryce and John Grant, left the Cloister college clubhouse last evening in Whitney's runabout. Returning through the town of Orange early this morning the car turned out to pass a motor truck.

It is believed the unidentified victim was sitting in the middle of the road. An unbroken flask of whisky was found on the body. After proceeding a third of a mile Whitney thought his car was steering peculiarly and discovered the torso wedged in the car. The auto truck driver had picked up one leg and the other was found a third of a mile back.

Whitney Calls Police.

In response to Whitney's telephone summons the police investigated and arrested Whitney. His companions and the auto truck driver were held as witnesses. There was no evidence of drinking or reckless driving.

The dead man, whose body remains unidentified, was about 45 years old, and apparently was a laborer. The Whitney automobile is hung unusually low and it is believed that when the car scooped up the body death was instantaneous. The legs were torn from the body at the same impact. Coroner Mix examined witnesses all this afternoon. He will decide later whether he will press a charge of manslaughter.

MOTHER HEARS NEWS.

Mrs. Julia L. Whitney of 3122 Sheridan road received the first news of the accident in which her son figured from THE TRIBUNE. She said she would immediately take steps to supply any help the young man may need.

"I am sure he was not at fault," she said. "He was an excellent and careful driver. This is his first year at Yale. He was a student at the Latin school. He never even touched any one before in driving a car."

GETS $18,725 FOR INJURY.

One of the largest verdicts—$18,725—for personal injuries returned in the Superior court for some time was awarded yesterday to George A. Wilson, 21 West Twenty-fourth street, Chicago Heights, against the Chicago Heights Terminal Transfer railroad before Judge Irwin of Elgin.

Mr. Wilson, formerly a fireman for the railroad, was thrown from the cab of an engine and suffered serious and permanent injuries when the locomotive was derailed.

WAR'S GIFT TO WORLD.

BY STERLING HEILIG.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—I have just had the privilege of visiting the hospital at Compiegne, directed by Dr. Alexis Carrel, the famous French-American scientist. The hospital is twelve miles from the German front, within continuous thunder roll of the great guns. Compiègne has been bombarded three times at long distance, and I stood beside crumbled villas in the old royal town.

Dr. Carrel did me the great favor of passing three hours with me at the bedsides of his wounded, fresh from the front, and in his laboratories, among his assistants, explaining the application of his wonderful new methods of keeping the most horrible wounds clean from microbes, and so permitting them to heal in from one-third to one-tenth the usual time of an infected wound. [And almost all wounds, especially of shell splinters, torpedoes, and grenades, are infected. Pus grows in them naturally from germs on bits of clothing thrust in along with ball or splinter.]

GREATEST WAR DISCOVERY.

So here is the greatest war discovery of all time.

The use of the liquid found by the American chemist, Dakin, who worked with Dr. Carrel, has been much talked about of late, but I have not seen any popular account of a third factor in the treatment, which is the astonishing mathematical check or guide or standard curve worked out from Dr. Carrel's data by the young Frenchman, Lecomte du Nouy, who was once a western cowboy and talks English like an American.

These three men and their assistants found their field of research and healing open to them in the advanced base hospital of Compiègne—so near the firing line, as I have said, that the wounded got rushed into its beds within five to fifteen hours after being hit. It is in the sumptuous former hotel of the Rond-Royal, just facing Compiègne palace, practically built in the old royal park.

WONDERFUL WAR HOSPITAL.

It has 100 beds. I found ninety of them filled. Some had arrived within ten hours, and already the healing liquid was in operation on them and they were reposing peacefully.

Undoubtedly the thing is like a miracle.

Two of the principal surgeons of the United States Steel corporation—Dr. Sherman of Pitsburgh and Dr. Noland of Birmingham, Ala.—sent abroad to study medical results of the war, have spent most of their time with Dr. Carrel over this great discovery at Compiègne.

PROUD OF PINK PAJAMAS.

Outside it was dark, cold, and raining, and the old town of luxury and romance of Eugénie's court was sad, dull, chilly, sloppy, and two-thirds empty. The trees dripped as the rickety old cab fetched us up in the moldy twilight. Then suddenly steam heat and lights in warm corridors with soft carpets, amid sweet comfort, without the slightest hospital smell—aye, there were even perfumes in beautiful long dining rooms and modern hotel parlors, lined with brass cots, and each wounded man in pink pajamas, gift of Mrs. Lathrop and the other American ladies who preside over the distribution work at the Alcazar, in the Champs-Elysées, Paris. (How the poor, rough fellows delight in their beautiful pink pajamas! It was worth the trip to see them.)

TOLD WITH VIVID EXAMPLES.

And the long session of scientific explanations, with the living subjects before me, grew, itself, to be a wonderment, well worth the labor I had taken to obtain three days at the front from the French war department. Professional men will find the story told for them in technical reviews, which are hurrying to get it out ahead of each other. This is what I saw and heard. All the same I have tried to preserve the sharp, clear explanations of Dr. Carrel, given beside the patients, in sight of the wound, or in the laboratories, before a blackboard with formulas and colored slides projected on a screen, which follow the course of the magical healing of wounds which otherwise in half the cases would have meant amputation or death.

Problem Which Was Faced.

First I must tell the life and death problem which faced Dr. Carrel and his assistants and all the hospital surgeons in this war (and, it may be added, all the surgeons and doctors who have to deal with wounds in all parts of the earth. The after-war applications of the discovery will be one compensation of the hateful slaughter.)

The problem was to find a liquid and a method of applying it which would keep wounds clean from the microbes which so nearly always infect them—and kill the microbes without killing or burning or eating away the living tissues of the wounded men at the same time and prevent their healing.

No such liquid was known.

Famous authorities laughed at the idea. Only yesterday, so to speak, a savant like Sir Almroth Wright did not hesitate to say publicly:

"If ever an antiseptic should sterilize a deeply infected wound it ought to be proclaimed in all the papers," morning, noon, and evening!"

Old Need of Early Start.

Wounded men, they said, might get first treatment two or three hours after falling, and it was the objection of these older routine surgeons that at such an early period an antiseptic might do its work which it would be impossible to do later, when the patient reached a hospital for permanent treatment. At that moment, they claimed, the pus had too much start to be abolished by any known liquid. They kept the wound as clean as possible, but the germs remained and the pus continued forming—which they washed away with every change of dressing. When wounds healed it was by the white globules of the blood finally exterminating the microbes—with attending fever, which was the sign of the battle, and only then could the torn tissues, free from pus by nature's working, finally grow together. When pus got the upper hand the limb had to be amputated, or the man died.

War's Human Wreckage.

The result, in France alone, it is whispered, has been 80,000 arms and legs amputated, some say 100,000, some 200,000, as no statistics have been published. This apart from the dead.

Now, Dr. Carrel's world-wide reputation at the Rockfeller institute was won precisely by his wonderful success in human grafts—that is, in making living tissues grow on living tissues.

On entering the war, he saw that the only hope of cleaning out the fatally swift growing germs from deep wounds and their hidden corners must be by some continuous irrigation of the wounds with a chemical liquid capable of killing the germs; but as the routine authorities claimed, all known antiseptic liquids which killed microbes were so caustic that they would also kill or dangerously irritate the living tissues, or corrode to the blood vessels and cause hemorrhage.

It was then, in this dilemma, that Dr. Carrel asked the American chemist, Dr. Henry D. Dakin, to search for the magical unknown liquid—which many famous authorities cliamed could not be successfully applied, even should it be discovered.

The Magic Liquid.

Daken got to work. Aided by the French chemist, Daufresne, they studied about 200 different substances before perfecting the sterilising solution which I saw, shining, limpid, pale pink, and beautiful, in a great glass ampoule, high up, at the head of every brass bedstead of the Compiegne hospital—and often at the foot of the bed, or wherever it could be hung—the magical "pink liquid which saves poor soldiers."

They found it in September, 1915. It is chemically hypochloride of soda in a 5 per cent solution. Its formula has been given to the scientific world. Doubtless the Germans are using it already. It kills the microbes without irritating the tissues, without being poisonous to the organism, remains stable, and costs less than 1 cent per quart. But before it was found, what months of patient seeking and experiment were passed, applying, observing, rejecting, and seeking, applying, observing anew.

Irrigating a Wound.

Even today the most striking thing is Carrel's method of applying the liquid—although, of course, it is used in compresses on trepanned skulls, and in other special ways in special cases, and he carefully points out that his method of irrigation in "only a method, and we have others."

Hanging high, at head or foot of the bedstead, or at both—but always high, to obtain a good pressure—is the great ampoule of pink liquid. Leading down from it is a long, flexible rubber tube, which goes straight to the wound.

When it reaches the wound this rubber tube branches [often by means of a fork pronged glass joint] into as many little rubber tubes, of all lengths necessary, closed at their ends but pierced with numerous little holes along their sides, as may be necessary to irrigate the entire wound, in all its parts. The little branch tubes reach everywhere, inside the wound, where microbe germs can be. Then the wound is firmly bound up, and even the bandages remain soaked with the sterilizing liquid.

Unprintable Pictures.

Upstairs, in the laboratories, Mme. Carrel showed us photographs of wounds. She is a beautiful, majestic woman, refined, luxurious and, I should say, with natural leanings toward fashion; yet she is proud of her natural color photographic slides of horrid wounds, projected on a screen.

"This wound," explains Dr. Dehelly, "began irrigation on Sept. 10, 1916 (the thing is awful, mass of torn thigh, ripped tendons, mangled muscles, splintered bone, but everywhere about it the little tentacles of thin red rubber tubes). The articulation of the hip is exposed and suppuration well established, the case coming to us only after two days. (The pus has a nasty color and no newspaper would dare to print such pictures)."

Click! The slide changes.

"The wound, after two days' irrigation." (Pus is gone and ugly blues and sinister greenish pinks are turning rosy.)

Click!

"A notable amelioration after five days. (It is red flesh, like an appetizing piece of butcher's meat, and the size of the wound seems smaller.) Note, the processes of healing are conspicuous," explains Dr. Dehelly, if I have his words right. "It is a young man of 22, naturally."

Click! (The last, and what a change!) The wound is gone.

"It has been closed, after four days more," says Dr. Carrel's first assistant.

We understand. The skin is pulled together over what must be a large cavity, and sewed with strong catgut. "In the closed cavity, microscopically pure from germs, the repairs of nature go on with undreamed of rapidity," adds Dr. Dumas, another strong technician of the Compiègne force. (The lucky boy's leg is not swelled, even at this stage!)

And so on.

No Longer Fear Infection..

Great wounds are sewed up after eight days, ten days. In the old way they left them open until the unaided work of nature from interior to the surface should produce an improvement which the surgeon deemed favorable. It took much time at best, often months, with all the dangers of reinfection, blood poisoning, bad closing, stiffness, weakness and incurable fistulas . . . .

Now (and the thing is being rushed in all French hospitals) they amputate no longer, so to speak, for cause of infection; they save all limbs not stricken by anatomical lesions incompatible with the life of the member!

There were awful gangrenes; wounds grown putrid by neglect of lying on the battlefield, and horrid messes, green, black, carbuncle, which had been fetched from other hospitals where they had festered in the long old fashioned struggle of the weakened organism against swarming microbes.

All heal under the continuous irrigation. And as we passed from bed to bed they lifted bandages to show the good red flesh as it was healing, without danger of infection from the nurse's touch because bathed in the magic Dakin fluid.

"Evidently," said Dr. Carrel, "the moment we get the wounded man we clean his wounds with minute care, extracting splinters, bits of dirty clothing, etc.; and if necessary we open the wound as largely as may be necessary to explore it completely. These openings are made in such a way that once the patient is put into his bed the entire wound takes something like the form of a cup, permitting the antiseptic liquid to bathe it everywhere, tissues, bones, and muscles; and where this is impossible we have other ways to lead the irrigation tubes to every surface and deep fissure."

A Puzzling Formula.

It is the domain of the French cowboy and St. Cyr graduate, who is a profound mathematician, Lecomte du Nouy. A smooth shaved, boyish giant, laughing, chummy, as easy as an old shoe, full of giggling stories and seemingly more interested in football than in the high regions of integral calculus, in which he worked out "by intuitive process" a blackboard formula which makes me giddy just to look at.

"From the beginning," said Dr. Carrel, "when the new patient was still on the table, we began by measuring his wound, both in surface and depth. Now we do it not for research but for practical healing."

Equation of Vitality.

It happened thus:

These men of meticulous research were always measuring the wounds at different periods of progress. One day Dr. Carrel handed to Lecomte du Nouy a bundle of such data.

"There seems to me," said Carrel, "to be a mathematical relation, perhaps, somewhere in these things between the size of the wound, the time of its healing, and the patient's age. See if you can find an equation."

The one time cowboy drew his abscissas and ordinates, his perpendiculars and horizontals, making little even squares down which he could plot a curve, beginning high up at the maximum size of the wound when received and the beginning of the time of treatment. The size of the wound, when deep, is measured by the volume of water which it can contain like a cup.

Mathematical Curve of Healing.

Plotting his data case by case Du Nouy discovered that already on the third or fourth day of irrigation, or perhaps the fifth or sixth, the general direction of the curve of healing had become clear, and by comparing, in great quantities of cases, the difference between the progress of healing in men of different ages, he found as a fixed rule that between 20 and 30, no matter what the constitution and antecedents of the patient might be, the healing took so much a quicker curve than say between 30 and 40 that a "co-efficient of age" must positively exist.

Youth will be served!

"The cicatrization of a wound," says Dr. Carrel, "is a function of the size of the wound and the age of the patient."

Before Du Nouy arrived at a simple algebraic formula which any hospital doctor can use he had to go through a quantity of conic sections and integral calculus, but this he keeps for the sagacious, and the formula or indication how to make the curve of wounds healing is as practical as the ordinary method followed by physicians for recording the temperature of fevers.

It is a great discovery—near to a biological theory of the growth and power of life itself!

The Two Curves.

How is it used, practically

So easy! For each wounded man they draw the ideal curve of his recovery in red ink. It is done in advance after five, six, or eight days' irrigation. So they can predict two months in advance the exact day when his wound should heal with a dry scar!

Then, day by day, beside the ideal curve they line the curve of actual progress in black ink. The two curves ought to coincide. If the black curve of fact begins to get away from the red curve of biology they know there's surely something wrong with the treatment.

They hunt for the wrong thing. It may be a bad compress, a bad position in the bed, clothing too tight, improper nutrition, or even, possibly, a bit of infected clothing, almost microscopical, hidden in some deep fold of the wound. It must be something—and they always find it.

Then again the black curve of fact catches up and runs beside the rosy curve of theory, like two bully bounding trotting horses, hitched together to a buggy with pneumatic tires!

And they can tell the wounded man: "On Sunday, Jan. 28, 1917, your wound will finally heal up with a dry scar!"

YANKEE FLYERS AS SKILLFUL AS ALLIES OR FOES

Americans Compete on Favorable Terms with British, French, and Germans.

BY LINCOLN EYRE.

HEADQUARTERS AMERICAN ESCADRILLE, ON THE SOMME FRONT, Nov. 11—The Americans flying for France have entered on a new phase of their career. In their daily battles high over Picardy's fields, they are competing with the best of French and British, as well as German aerial talent, and they are getting away with it thoroughly. Just how thoroughly I was able to see and hear for myself during a few hours I've just spent in their company here.

In this one day they were in half a dozen individual scraps and accounted for three enemy machines. Thereby Givas Lufbery's score jumped to six, which is the record for the escadrille. Bert Hall recorded his fourth victory and Paul Pavelka, one of the neophytes, registered his first direct hit.

War Sobers American Flyers.

A great change has come over the little group since I visited them in the Verdun sector last June. Then they were just a bunch of young daredevils ready for a fight or a frolic, preferably the former. Now they're a very sober set of veterans, not at all fond of war for war's sake, but determined to go through it no matter what happens.

The loss of Chapman, Rockwell, and Prince has set its stamp on even the youngest and least experienced of them, and the frolicsome spirit has gone for good. They are all doing their duty doggedly, but it isn't fun any longer.

British Aviators Busy.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The British official communication issued this evening reads as follows:

During the day bombing raids were continued by our aviator with effect against enemy billets, aerodromes, and headquarters, and at night enemy stations and trains were successfully attacked, two trains being hit by bombs, while a third was set on fire and a number of explosions followed.

In the course of numerous fights in the air three enemy machines were destroyed and a fourth was forced to land within our lines. Many others were driven down in damaged condition. One of our machines is missing.

Raids on Supply Stations.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—An official report issued tonight says:

A group of seventeen British airplanes bombarded the steel works at Focklingen [Volkingen] northwest of Saarbrucken. Two thousand pounds of projectiles were dropped on the buildings, which were damaged seriously. The British machines fought several actions. Three enemy machines were felled. On the following night eight of our airplanes executed a fresh bombardment of these works. Several fires were observed.

Our squadrons drenched with projectiles the stations of Ham, St. Quentin, Tergnier, and Nesle in the Somme region, and the airdrome at Dreuze, the blast furnaces at Rombach, the airplane sheds of Frescati [near Metz] and the blast furnaces of Hagondange [north of Metz].

WOULD BAR TERM CIVIL WAR; USE "WAR BETWEEN STATES"

United Daughters of the Confederacy Adopt Resolutions Urging Change of Expression.

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 11—Resolutions to "educate the people of the United States, especially the confederate veterans," in the use of the term "war between the states" in preference to "civil war" were adopted today by the general convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Information that the veterans themselves preferred to use the term "civil war" and that the Daughters had made fruitless attempts to have an inscription on the Red Cross building at Washington changed led to this action.

A resolution was adopted demanding that "histories and readers used in the schools of the south should have a fair and impartial account of the events before the war, during the war, and in the reconstruction period.

MARMON 34

Advance in Marmon Prices
Effective January 1, 1917

In common with other manufacturers of mechanical products using the finer materials and higher class workmanship, the Nordyke & Marmon Company is obliged to increase the prices of the Marmon 34. The new prices will affect cars purchased from this date for delivery after the first day of the coming year. But cars ordered for delivery before January 1 will be sold at the old prices.

Notwithstanding this advance, the Marmon 34 is by far the most economical car of the luxury class. Due to its scientific construction, 1100 pounds lighter weight and wonderfully efficient overhead valve motor, it averages from 50 to 75 per cent more miles per gallon of gasoline. Its tires give hundreds of miles more service than the same kind of tires on other cars of equal size and power.

The Marmon 34 is already priced lower than comparable cars, and it will probably remain so.

Reo

"When in Doubt, Push Both Feet"

THAT'S ALL YOU NEED TO KNOW to drive Reo the Fifth, "The Incomparable Four."

THAT'S ONE REASON WHY this great car is so popular with women drivers—its simplicity and certainty of control.

"HANDLES JUST LIKE my old electric," exclaimed a prominent society woman when, after much hesitation, she essayed to drive her husband's new Reo the Fifth—and found to her surprise and delight that it was just as easy to drive a Reo gasoline car as it had been to drive her pokey old electric.

YOU SEE, THE TWO foot pedals are both "brakes"—and the left pedal also releases the clutch. Push half way—clutch releases and car coasts freely; push further and you set the "service" brake. Right foot sets the other or "emergency" brake.

NOW HERE'S THE DIFFERENCE between this Reo control and others.

ON OTHER CARS you must think of several things at once. Of course after a few weeks of driving the various operations become practically automatic. But meantime—you may pay the price of the car for an accident, and a new radiator or fender is the most frequent result of learning on most cars.

"STANDARD PRACTICE" controls one brake by a hand lever, the other by the right foot; and the clutch pedal is controlled by the left foot.

TO STOP QUICKLY and hold the car on an incline, you must perform three operations at least—release clutch and set two sets of brakes—one with the foot, one with the hand.

DRIVING REO THE FIFTH is simplicity itself to the novice—for all you need to know is "if in doubt push both feet." Car stops—and nothing happens, you know, when you are standing still.

THE VERY FACT that you don't have to think which foot; nor need to use your hand at all; but can keep both hands firmly grasping the wheel, where they ought to be—till the emergency has passed—makes this the safest, simplest car in the world to drive—bar none.

THE VERY IMPULSE is automatic—for, what more natural than, seeing something ahead of you, you'd lean back, brace yourself against the back of the seat, hold onto the wheel—and press both foot levers.

THE REO ENGINEERS made many experiments and tests to determine just what the average inexperienced man or woman driver would do in an emergency—as when an object appears in front. And this famous Reo control is the result.

JUST TRY IT yourself—if you have ever driven any car you need absolutely no instructions. Glance at the index plate that surrounds the "one rod" control lever—and you are an expert Reo driver from the instant.

AND IF YOU HAVEN'T driven before, you will, after one ten minute lesson, be just as expert and have the confidence—which is the main thing—of an old driver.

IS IT ANY WONDER the demand for this Reo the Fifth has always been greater than the possible supply?

SIMPLICITY OF CONTROL—and low cost of upkeep are the two chief reasons.

THE PRICE—$875 f. o. b. factory, is the other reason—for the quality, the bigness, and the luxurious riding qualities of Reo the Fifth at the price, makes this car "The Gold Standard of Values" among automobiles.

"THE GOLD STANDARD OF VALUES"

CHICAGO WILL LEAD VIENNA, DOCTORS SAY

Medical Students from Allied Countries May Study in America.

With the establishment of the new medical center in connection with the University of Chicago, it is expected that the hundreds of medical students of Europe, Asia, and the United States will come to Chicago. Berlin and Vienna will no longer remain the meccas for students of medicine, if the prophecies of the Chicago physicians and surgeons come true.

The new medical schools and research laboratories, when completed, will represent an investment of approximately $10,000,000. It is believed that men and women from all the countries now at war with the Teutonic allies, feeling themselves unwelcome in German and Austrian cities after the end of the war, w'll come to Chicago to complete their medical education.

Foreigners Now Coming.

"There is a great demand for medical instruction both in this country and abroad," said Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan of the Presbyterian hospital. "In the last five to ten years European doctors have begun to come to this country in increasing numbers. There are probably more foreign surgeons in the big clinics of the middle west, in Cleveland, Chicago, and Rochester, than in any other place in the world.

"After the war the English, French, the Russians, and the Japanese will be forced to seek that kind of education in America on account of the conditions brought on by the war. The establishment of the medical center is opportune because of the war and the development of American medicine.

"The conception is magnificent. It will mean much for the middle west, and particularly for Chicago. It will mean the getting together of a number of strong institutions, the Presbyterian hospital, the Children's Memorial hospital, the Home for Crippled Children, the Sprague Research fund, and the Durand hospital with the McCormick Memorial Research institute.

All Will Co-operate.

They will meet in one big coöperative scheme for furnishing the best sort of undergraduate medical education and graduate instruction to practitioners who have received their degrees."

"Chief credit for the successful working out of the plan," said one of the men interested, "is due to the indefatigable efforts and great vision of Dr. Frank Billings. To build in Chicago a great medical center has been his hope for as much as ten years, and he has worked continuously with that in view. The controlling forces of the Rockefeller foundation felt in the beginning that its resources should be centered at Johns Hopkins.

"Through the research work already under way at the Presbyterian hospital and the fine medical organization developed there Dr. Billings was able to impress Dr. Flexner with the opportunities in this great city, and Dr. Flexner in turn succeeded finally in making the Rockefellers see this. Dr. Billings, as he deserves, will be the president of the new institution."

Dr. Franklin H. Martin said that thousands of physicians and surgeons will visit Chicago as a result of the project. "Nowhere in America can such clinics be found as Chicago holds every day," said Dr. Martin. "Even the battlefields of Europe do not afford such opportunity for learning. Surgery there is limited to remedial surgery for wounds. The surgery of the Chicago clinics includes almost every injury and disease."

BACK TO THE WAR ZONE

Tribune's Famous War Correspondent Sails Today on S. S. Espagne to Return to the War.

Capt. Henry J. Reilly

Before joining THE TRIBUNE'S staff Capt. Reilly served for fourteen years in the United States army. The outbreak of war found him in the Philippine islands. He sailed to France via India, and as no correspondents were allowed at the front, took command of a section of the American ambulance, later visiting the front in the armies of England and of Austria.

In 1916 he returned to this country and took charge of THE TRIBUNE'S preparedness campaign.

Upon the mobilization of the national guard he went to Texas in command of Battery E, First Illinois artillery, where he gained the reputation of the most efficient militia officer in the service.

Now that the war has assumed a new and possibly final phase, he returns to bring THE TRIBUNE expert report and comment such as no other newspaper in the United States affords.

Next Sunday he begins in THE TRIBUNE an expert analysis of the militia mobilization in Texas.

MEDIC BOOST FOR CHICAGO

"The plans of President Judson of the University of Chicago for a $10,000,000 medical institution will be of tremendous benefit to Chicago and the middle west," Health Commissioner Robertson said yesterday. "The European medical centers are suffering from the war like the rest of Europe, and it will take them years to regain their former standing. Meanwhile Chicago will stride to the front."

Last week, according to Jacobs, Johnson had Wagstad arrested on a charge of confidence game. Thursday he was tried and acquitted.

CAMBRAI CALMLY SIPS ABSINTHE IN WAR'S MIDST

Famous French Town Pursues Business and Pleasure as in Times of Peace.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
[War Correspondent of The Tribune.]

CAMBRAI, France, Mid-September.—By day and by night Cambrai can hear the guns of the great offensive on the Somme, but, with an adaptability not always credited to the French, it continues to sip absinthe and play piquette with itself and to sell cambric to German officers.

The town is now eighteen to twenty miles behind the fighting. It has been nearer and may again be nearer. Pending either eventuality it may be trusted to enjoy its absinthe as long as the supply holds out and to sell at hours most convenient to itself the exquisite linens to which it gave its name.

Last evening some officers and correspondents were planning to leave the town at 1 o'clock this morning. "But we must buy linen for the women at home," they agreed, and stopped at a trustworthy establishment which is half shop and half dwelling.

Shop Opened Late at Night.

It was 6 o'clock. Jangling the bell brought no response. One of the party crossed the street and said to a neighbor of the proprietress of the linen shop: "Be so good as to tell madame to have the shop open at half past 11 tonight. We will return then to make some purchases."

The neighbor said he would see that matters were so arranged, and so they were. At 11:30 madame, cheerful, polite, and a little quizzical, was standing behind the counters, which were strewn with fabrics so fine and filmy that you could have almost threaded a darning needle with one of the handkerchiefs and certainly have run a chemise through a finger ring.

The prices on all the goods were marked both in francs and marks, and persons who know the linens of Cambrai said the prices were reasonable.

Friendly Toward Officers.

Madame was on excellent terms with the German officers in the party. Some of them she had known for nearly two years—the period of the occupation—and she and they had jokes and allusions in common that were lost on the newcomers. By midnight she had taken in several hundred marks.

The sales having been made she accompanied us to the door and waved good-bys as we clambered into our motors, making an extremely piquant picture as she stood silhouetted in the high doorway, the lights of the shop behind her, and before her the dark street, where the motors were chugging and the sleepy sentry pacing back and forth.

According to all the rules of hate formulated in this war by newspapers and civilians this ought not to have happened, but it did happen, and the effect of it was to make you wonder why people who can get on so pleasantly together under the most difficult conditions ever go to war at all under any conditions.

One of the pictures I like to see in these troubled times in a troubled land is the picture of the dozen or so imperialed gentlemen, some of them as young as 50 and some of them as old as 70, who assemble every afternoon at 4 o'clock in a certain café on the Place aux Bois for their absinthe and their piquette.

They are mellow, eager old souls, their natural liveliness a little subdued by the air of aloofness they deem it proper to assume in order to prove to the Germans that they are not reconciled to the situation. They bow, but they bow coldly, in response to the salutations of Germans entering the café.

Drink Absinthe All Day.

Their games of piquette last until 7 o'clock, when they toddle away to dinner, and their glasses of smoky absinthe last as long as the day's supply in the café lasts. After it is exhausted they sip grenadine, which looks—its taste remains unknown to me—like a more vehement brand of circus lemonade.

They sit on the leather benches running beneath the mirrors with which the café is lined. They beat with animation on the marble topped tables when their game of cards provokes argument. They are old and wrinkled and weazened, but there is a pathetic sprightliness about them. I watch them for hours with absorbed attention. They fascinate me. They seem so much a feature of the present situation and yet they are no factors in it.

Their work is done. Now they can only sit on the leather benches and argue and gesticulate, and sip their grenadine when the absinthe has run out, their lean figures; their brave old backs are reflected in the endless mirrors. Yet they were factors once and they, too, have known battles.

Hardened to War's Horrors.

One day a member of our party fell into talk with one of them and was telling with feverish particularity how it went on the front fifteen miles away, how we had been with batteries that were under fire from three points, how a cottage wall was red with the blood of men still unburied, and how, when we approached a tree at the bottom of the hill which leads up to Irles, the shells began to cut away its branches.

It was a good recital and truthful. The old man listened in silence. When my friend had finished his story with some estimates of the losses this fighting involves, the old man shrugged his shoulders and said, "One would think, monsieur, that there had never been any wars before." It was a sobering comment, and to it a hysterical world may wisely give heed.

A man of Cambrai could justly say those words. Like Liege and Lille, Cambrai has been through and seen so much that it can now face anything with relative equanimity.

Town Filled with Troops.

Today Cambrai is an important point on the German line of communication with the Somme. Day and night it is streaming with troops and its citadel is a receiving station for prisoners of war.

A Bavarian general who will eat only what his troops eat is commander of the town. His rule is benevolent. Amid the rumble and clatter of troop movements the natives go placidly about their business. They civilly answer the civil questions of the Germans and the local authorities work harmoniously with the military authorities in matters that look to the well being of the population.

They dwell amid sobering signs that point the quickest way to the bomb proof cellars to be used in case of an attack by flyers, but their fears, like their hates, have not survived two years of occupation. Even in a war ridden town life soon swings back to routine. Black robed nuns glide about the streets. Sprinkling carts go bouncing over the cobbles and the French drivers of them peremptorily warn German soldiers out of the way.

Wounded Ride in Street Cars.

Only the German wounded ride in the street cars, for the military government has taken over those vehicles, painted them gray, fitted them with stretchers, glazed the windows, emblazoned the red cross on their sides, and is using them for the moving of the wounded.

On the walls at every street corner are posted proclamations, old and new, French and German, which contain instructions to the people relative to the laws of war, food, lights, hours. One of the earliest of them, dating from the autumn of 1914, may account for the good state in which the town finds itself. It is an appeal from the mayor to the citizens. It begins "Cheres Citoyens" and says, "Show the same calm and dignity in the future as you have in the past and all will be well."

Food is only fair and naturally much dearer. The health of the people is good. Their spirits are affected, as the spirits of all of us in Europe are, by the almost unbearable strain of waiting. Most of us have little heart to plan for the future—we civilians I mean. Always in the back of the mind is a shamed, flaccid sense of living along from day to day.

WANTS CHILD TO FORGET

Mother of Fern Roberts, Who Shot Her Dentist Father, Is Taking Her to the South.

Mrs. Louis Espy

Mrs. Louis Espy, mother of Fern Roberts, the 15 year old girl who shot and tried to kill her father, is preparing to take her daughter to the sunny south where she may recuperate from an operation performed at a west side hospital yesterday.

"Judge Bartelme ordered Dr. Roberts to pay for the child's support, give her a hundred dollars for railroad fare and clothes, and let me see that her education is taken care of," said Mrs. Espy. "I want to get her away from her father's influence and the remembrance of her desperate act. I hope that she will forget what she saw in that awful bridewell hospital."

Mrs. Espy, after her divorce from Dr. Roberts, married Louis Espy, a sanitary inspector in Panama, who was murdered a year and a half after the wedding by a friend of Dr. Roberts.

NONE CAN BRING PEACE, VIEW OF BULGARIAN KING

Europe Looked to America, but Was Disappointed, He Says —War Must Continue.

BY KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

[Copyright: 1916: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

SOFIA, via Amsterdam and London, Nov. 11.—"Peace? Did you say peace? When? Where? So we end!" King Ferdinand emphasized his exclamation and sharp questions, in answer to my inquiry, with eloquent but deprecating gestures of outstretched hands which seemed to say, "Show me!"

"Where is the man who can make peace?"

The king shook his head. Then, turning suddenly to Crown Prince Boris: "Can you see peace in sight, my son?" The heir to the throne of Greater Bulgaria answered with a shake of his head.

"Light, peace, and the Prince of Peace always have come out of the east," I suggested.

"True," the king responded quickly, "but this time the world expected him from the west—the new world. It was there that the light which it was hoped would pierce the chaos and darkness of the European shambles was expected to rise.

Look to America; Disappointed.

"The world looked to America—to that grand nation and great people of George Washington—to produce the prince of peace who would lead a mad and exhausted Europe back into the path of peace, civilization, and culture. The world has been disappointed. Peace? Yes. Who does not desire peace; but when, where, how? Where is the man who can show the way?"

King Ferdinand I., czar of the Bulgarians, received me today in the royal palace. An audience planned originally for perhaps fifteen or twenty minutes was extended into an informal and intensely interesting chat of about three hours and was, next to my much shorter talk with the pope, perhaps the most interesting conversation I have had with any statesman or ruler in my fifteen years of journalistic career. It afforded me, however, an opportunity to study the many sided, brilliant, versatile, remarkably gifted, and most romantic figure on any European throne today.

America Both Friend and Foe.

The king described himself as more than an admirer—as almost a worshiper—of "the great George Washington," and spoke of his two brothers, who have been much in the United States, as having been "fanatical Americans."

But Ferdinand found what to him was an "incomprehensible gulf" between what he termed the principles of Washington and what he characterized as the principles involved in the dual attitude of America today—"humanitarian on one side, prolongation of the war on the other hand."

The czar did not know and was visibly surprised and deeply impressed when I told him that America had fed and was still feeding Belgians and the population in the occupied districts of northern France, and especially when he was informed of the sum American philanthropy had devoted and was devoting to that purpose.

"Those are large sums," he remarked. He frankly said that that was wholly new to him.

LANDIS GIVES MORE TIME FOR BANK REORGANIZATION.

Judge Allows Smetanka Further Period for Raising of Capital to Finance Olszewski Institution.

Judge Landis yesterday gave Attorney Warren Pease and Julius Smetanka, collector of internal revenue, who represent the incorporators of the new Universal State Bank and Trust company, which will take over the property of the A. Olszewski bank, 3252 South Halsted street, three weeks in which to raise the required capital.

When the Olszewski bank came into the bankruptcy court some time ago the incorporators asked time to raise capital to transfer the institution to a state bank.

Attorney Pease stated that $155,000 of the necessary $200,000 had been subscribed.

Why Store Your Car?

WHEN you invested in a home, you did not purchase one that could be used only six or eight months of the year. Then why drive an automobile, the infirmities of which make it necessary for you to put it in winter storage?

Your motor car should serve you well the year round. If it will not do this, it is only half an investment. Modern science has recently perfected a motor car which will give you as satisfactory service in winter as it does in summer. This car is the model 44, eight-cylinder, light weight Oldsmobile.

A pressure of your foot on the starter button starts this car, unfailingly, invariably, in the coldest weather. Its integrally cast intake and exhaust manifolds warm the fuel, so that it runs as smoothly in January as in hottest July.

The eight-cylinder motor drives the car resistlessly through mud and snow; the reason—a power impulse to every five inches of car travel, and weight less than 2800 pounds. Gear shifting is reduced to a minimum.

It will pay you further to investigate this car, as it will show you something new in cold weather performance.

Night Driving

Electric headlights, tail light and spot light illustrate the completeness of the standard equipment furnished on the DENMO.

The spot light alone prevents accidents—delays—mistakes. The driver can easily locate street signs, find house numbers and turn it back into the body to read names on parcels.

DENMO Owners Get Free Inspection Service

IT is our belief that a greater measure of economical, day-after-day service is built into the DENMO than any other truck on the market.

Yet a truck must be considered as a piece of machinery. And no piece of machinery will yield its maximum of service unless thoroughly inspected and adjusted at frequent intervals.

Twice a month for one year we send our service inspector to the place where each owner keeps his Denmo Truck. He fills the oil and grease cups, adjusts carburetor and magneto and gives the owner a written report on the condition of that truck.

This service is FREE to DENMO owners. It is a part of our interest in your trucking problems—an interest that only begins with the sale of a DENMO Truck. A post card or telephone request will bring you full information.

GEN. VON BUELOW ASSERTS ALLIES CANNOT SUCCEED

Says Line in West Will Hold 200 Years—Censures the U. S. for Its Part.

BY CARL W. ACKERMAN.
[United Press Staff Correspondent.]

HEADQUARTERS OF THE COMMANDING GENERAL OF THE GERMAN ARMY ON THE SOMME, via Berlin [via Sayville wireless], Nov. 11.—As long as the allies maintain their present conditions, peace is out of the question—and if they expect to force peace by a decisive blow along the Somme, that expectation is an impossibility.

So declared Gen. Buelow, commander in chief of the German forces along the particular front where interest now centers in the great war.

"The English and French face an impossibility along the Somme," he continued, "if they expect to break through. It is reported they have cavalry always ready for the rush over our lines—but every soldier, every officers, every general on the German side knows that the enemy cannot break through. It's technically and physically impossible. The battle will continue two months—two years—two hundred years—until the English and French get so much iron pounded into their heads that they can't carry them."

"Allies Know Failure."

It was an American who opened the interview with the question:

"Will your excellency permit questions from correspondents?"

Immediately the staff formed a circle around to listen, for questioning of a general is a novelty. Gen. von Buelow stepped forward, standing a lone target for questioners:

"Why have the allies not broken through?" was the first query hurled at him.

"Ask them," came the immediate reply. "They know better than we."

"It has been stated that the allies have not broken through, first, because of the strong German defenses. If that is the first reason, what's the second?" was asked.

"After months of preparation, after assembling enormous stores of men, cannon, and ammunition, the allies thought this time they would succeed," the commander in chief replied. "Their materials had been assembled from throughout the world."

Says America Is Fighting.

Gen. von Buelow paused—and then went on:

"Note, he said, "no one on the west front permits America to forget that Germany believes she is fighting today not only the armed forces of the allies, but American financial and ammunition interests."

The general paused again and then, recalling the question, said:

"After weeks of artillery preparation, during which time they thought they had destroyed everything on our side, the allies urged with infantry for four months. What have they gained? Only a few kilometers of destroyed land."

"Yes," interrupted his staff chief, "we have figured out that at the present rate of progress the allies will reach the Rhine within 200 years."

Morale Is Main Power.

"The chief thing in a modern battle," Von Buelow resumed, "is the morale of troops—and the firm conviction which is part of the lives of our troops is that under no condition shall the allies break through. Every man, every officer, every general, is here to do his duty and see that a break is made impossible. The English and French can go on indefinitely—but they will not break through, first, because of the morale and fighting power of our troops; second, because of our defenses."

"What does your excellency think of English 'tanks'?" was next asked.

"They are fake advertisements," Gen. von Buelow responded. "The English used them first as an experiment. We think they must have realized their impracticability now, because they do not use them any more."

MISS EVA LUDGATE BACK DESPITE ZEPS AND SUBS.

Traveler and Social Worker Reports Havoc Wrought by Airships—English Bitter to America.

Miss Eva Ludgate, traveler and social worker, has just returned to her home in Wheaton after passing through three Zeppelin raids and leading a detail of Scotland Yard detectives all over England.

"There is no way to get information as to the location or damage done by the dropped bombs from Zeppelins," said Miss Ludgate. "I remember it was announced by the war office that four had been killed in a Zeppelin raid. A doctor who had been on the scene said that thirty-five dead bodies were taken from one building.

"On my return trip I was constantly annoyed by the taunts of the ship physician of the Cunard liner Saxonia, who sneered at America and at President Wilson's note writing. 'I hear the supply of paper has given out in America,' he said to me. When I expressed surprise he said, 'Yes, your president has used it all.'

"Coming into port the American flag, as is customary, was broken out at the bow of the liner. I said to the physician, who was standing near, 'Don't you think it a beautiful flag?' 'Yes,' he replied, 'it's a pity that it doesn't give you any protection.'"

The new Fiftieth street police station at South Wabash avenue and East Forty-eighth street, to be opened Dec. 15, will be one of the most modern in the country, Chief Healey declared yesterday.

The cell bars are to be brass and white and Negro prisoners are to be segregated, he asserted. The building is to cost $70,000.

"The station will be sanitary in every respect and erected according to the newest practice in prison architecture and construction," Chief Healey said.

Work on other new police stations has been started.

Prepare To Defend Chicago

A few years ago Chicago's only defense was Eastern capital. Builders could not build unless big corporations came forward with large funds for mortgages—but—

The tide has turned and the Chicago citizen has come to his own. The 6% first mortgage which proved such an excellent investment for Eastern capital is now divided into principal notes or bonds of from $100 to $1,000 and the citizen of most humble financial rating buys them and receives the benefit of the improvement of his own city to the tune of 6% interest and safety.

Beautiful new apartment and business buildings in growing sections are the security back of these bonds and the Chicago Title & Trust Co. certifies each bond to be a first mortgage on a specific piece of property.

Investment in our bonds builds up your income, satisfies your desire to save, and fulfills your patriotic duty to "good old Chicago."

Write for folder 101-A describing these issues fully and become a participant in Chicago's health, happiness and prosperity.

LAST week's real estate market reflected in a striking manner the demoralizing effect of the prolonged excitement regarding the presidential election. Monday furnished several noteworthy transactions, notably the sale of the Lessing and Lessing Annex, but after that the market's activities seemed practically paralyzed by the intense excitement which centered about the election outcome.

Both brokers and principals seemed for the time to have forgotten about business and to have devoted their time to seeking the latest information regarding contests in close western states or in discussing the probabilities of the results there.

Several Deals Held Up.

Brokers also reported that the principals in several important deals held off waiting the result, the statement being made in some instances that prospective purchasers indicated their purpose to drop out in case the result was not to their liking. This concerned manufacturing property more than any other class, but it is not believed by brokers generally that the market is likely to suffer to any material extent from this cause. Of interest in this connection are several interviews with leading brokers regarding the probable effect of the election on the market.

In fact, now that the uncertainty is over the belief is that the market will respond to the favorable fundamental conditions which obtain with reference to it.

This belief was voiced strongly in the address by Frederick S. Oliver, a former president of the Chicago real estate board, at the weekly luncheon of that body on Thursday, and it is shared by many other experienced brokers and operators who believe that it is only a question of a short time before much of the huge accumulated surplus of funds which has been employed in stock speculative schemes will turn to real estate, where value conditions are of an attractive character.

Market at Standstill.

As a matter of fact, outside of the sale of the Lessing and Annex and two other large purchases by C. E. Hotle of Oakland, Cal., of apartment house properties and two south side deals, there practically was nothing doing of sufficient importance to deserve comment.

There was a fair run of small properties, but in the way of really important transactions the week's business made a sorry showing as compared with that of the previous week.

A loan of $3,500,000 to the Moir Hotel company was an important feature in a mortgage loan way, but there was a poor showing in the way of leases of business space in the downtown district.

The Lessing and Annex, at Surf street and Broadway, were sold by J. J. Heald, a banker of Jacksonville, Fla., to Lucius S. Brown, who has had the management of the properties for the last year or more, the statement being made it was a personal purchase on his part.

While the consideration is withheld, it is said to have been in the neighborhood of $800,000. The sale was subject to an incumbrance of about $300,000, Mr Brown also giving a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a purchase money mortgage of $300,000 three years at 6 per cent.

107 Apartments.

The Lessing is on a lot 200x197 feet and is a five and six story building. The Annex across Surf street occupies a lot 150x205 feet. The two contain 107 apartments, those in the Annex containing seven and eight rooms, while those in the Lessing contain four and eight rooms.

The buildings are said to have a gross annual rent of approximately $100,000. They were acquired about two years ago by Mr. Heald from Charles E. Rector, who acquired them a few years before from Mrs. Augusta Lehmann in a trade. They are regarded as among the highest type of apartment buildings in the city.

SERGEL WILL HOLD TWO OFFICES FOR 3 MONTHS.

Charles H. Sergel, city treasurer and president-elect of the sanitary district, has about decided to hold both offices until his term as treasurer expires next April. He goes on the sanitary district pay roll the first week in December.

Mr. Sergel received an opinion yesterday from his attorney, Willis E. Thorne, declaring that he may hold both positions for the three months involved and draw both salaries if he cares to do so.

If Mr. Sergel decides to hold both positions he will not accept pay from the city after the first week in December.

Robert R. McCormick adopted this procedure when he was elected president of the sanitary district twelve years ago. At that time he was alderman from the Twenty-first ward.

Contracts have been closed and the ground broken for a large two and three story fireproof and semi-fireproof business and apartment building at the southeast corner of Milwaukee and Central Park avenues, to be known as the Fidelity Bank building. It will be erected by Frank F. Greenwald and Samuel W. Winefield and is expected to cost over $180,000. With the land it will represent an investment of over $300,000. The lot fronts 246 feet on Milwaukee avenue and 258 feet on Central Park avenue. The Fidelity bank will occupy the corner, while the remainder of the lower floor space on both streets will be used for stores, of which there will be sixteen. The second floor will contain seventeen offices, two large halls with wardrobe and retiring rooms, and six apartments. The third floor will contain six apartments. Lackner & Butz Sons have underwritten a 6 per cent serial bond issue of $180,000 on the property.

A new attractive south side apartment building is that at the northeast corner of Grand boulevard and Bowen avenue. It contains thirty-one apartments of two, three, and four rooms, is on a lot 70x175 feet and with the land is said to represent an investment of $110,000.

SEVERAL LARGE LOANS REPORTED DURING THE WEEK

Moir Hotel Company Gets $3,500,000 on New Building—Leases of Floor Space.

Several loans of more than ordinary interest were reported or made matters of record during the week. The most notable of these was the one of $3,500,000 by the Chicago Title and Trust company to the Moir Hotel company on the property at the southeast corner of Madison and Clark streets. It is subject to a prior incumbrance of $2,000,000, matures in 1930, and bears 6 per cent interest.

There also was filed for record another loan of $150,000 by J. G. Search, trustee to the hotel company, which matures in 1920 and bears 6 per cent interest.

Get $225,000 on Building.

S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a loan of $225,000, two to nine years, at 6 per cent, to John R. REALTY MEN SEE NO BAD RESULTS FROM ELECTION

Of much interest as bearing on the probable effect of the election on the real estate market are several interviews with leading brokers on this subject. Almost without exception the belief is the market will not be affected adversely and that the outlook is exceedingly promising. The interviews follow:

Paul Steinbrecher, president Chicago real estate board — The Chicago real estate market has been on the up grade for some time and I fail to see how this can be checked by the election. The country has no reason in my opinion to fear any radical changes in the policy of the administration likely to injure the business interests of the country. I believe the market is on the eve of a great revival.

Frederick S. Oliver of Oliver & Co.—I believe Mr. Hughes as a candidate had in a far larger degree than Mr. Wilson the confidence of the business interests. Nevertheless with conditions as they are—no end of the war in sight and the yellow stream of gold from Europe continuing its flow into this country—I cannot but feel that much of the great profits of the last two years and that are likely still to accumulate will go into real estate.

Edward M. Willoughby of Willoughby & Co.—We can look for more settled conditions than would have been the case had there been a change in the administration.

W. K. Young of W. K. Young & Bro. —I firmly believe we are to have a greatly improved real estate market and that this will be hastened by the result of the election. The generally prosperous condition of the country, abundance of money, and healthy condition of land values in Chicago I am certain will result in greatly improved conditions.

Edgar M. Snow of Edgar M. Snow & Co.—There is no ground for apprehension. Business will adjust itself to the conditions incident upon the reëlection of President Wilson. Generally prosperous conditions warrant the belief that a greatly improved situation in the real estate market of Chicago will come.

Albert H. Wetten of A. H. Wetten & Co.—I do not believe the real estate market in Chicago would have been affected whichever way the election had gone.

J. H. Van Vlissingen of J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co.—Industrial property has been steadily improving and I look to see this continue on an increasing scale as the result of the great accumulation of capital and the generally prosperous condition of the country.

Arthur T. Aldis of Aldis & Co.—I cannot see how the result of the election can affect the real estate market.

ASKS ACCOUNTING BY WIFE.

George B. Clark, proprietor of a garage at 63-69 East Fourteenth street, filed a petition in the Circuit court yesterday against his wife, Mrs. Mary J. Clark, and his stepson, Charles Ferguson, asking for an accounting from them of his business affairs. He also asks that they be restrained from removing from a bank $2,100 which he says belongs to him and which he alleges they have placed to their credit.

D., at a valuation of $25,500. George W. Stewart represented both parties to the transaction.

William F. Bildhauser has sold Joseph J. Stiller the twelve apartment building at the northwest corner of Ridge and Wayne avenues, consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $19,000. The apartments contain four rooms and the building has a gross annual rent of $5,000. The purchaser conveyed in part payment the three apartment building at 1437 H[illegible] avenue, subject to an incumbrance of $11,000, and the vacant at the southwest corner of Ridge road and Kenilworth avenue. George W. Walker was the broker.

Springfield Avenue Deal.

The property in Springfield avenue 235 feet south of Belden avenue, lot [illegible] 134 feet, east front, with flat improvements, has been sold by Bertha M. [illegible] to Blaine Kellypool, consideration nominal, subject to $20,000.

There was filed for record the transfer by I. W. Seaman to William A. Haynes of the property in Drexel avenue, [illegible] feet south of Fifty-fifth street, with flat improvements, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000.

BUSINESS PROPERTY MAKES POOR SHOWING FOR WEEK

Business property made an exceedingly poor showing, the central district being without a representation in the week's business, while little of importance was done in outside business property.

Late in the week there was filed for record the transfer by C. A. Winston of Highland Park to Willis N. Byington of New Port Richey, Fla., of the property at the southeast corner of Seventy-fifth street and Ellis avenue, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $40,000. The actual price is said to have been about $85,000. The improvements comprise a three and four story building, containing a thirty room hotel, thirty apartments, nine stores and lodge hall, and offices.

The property at the southwest corner of Aberdeen and Sixty-third streets, lot 69x125 feet, improved with seven white tiled front stores, has been sold for $20,000, subject to $10,000.

Mayer and Ida Meinick have purchased from Birdie Field the property in Ogden avenue, 125 feet east of Kedzie avenue, lot 25x127 feet, improved with a three story building containing one store and five flats, for a reported consideration of $15,000.

The purchaser conveyed as part consideration the property in California avenue, fifty feet north of Arthington street, east front, consisting of a three story building containing a store and four flats, on a lot 25x125 feet, for a reported consideration of $9,000. Morris Sax & Co. represented both parties.

Held on Bigamy Charge.

John C. Neibel, alias Sherman, of Downers Grove, was held to the grand jury in $1,000 bonds by Judge Mahoney in the Desplaines street court yesterday on a charge of bigamy. He was arrested several weeks ago on complaint of his first wife, Mrs. Anna Neibel, 1750 Balloo street.

NO LARGE TRANSACTIONS IN ACRES OR VACANT SITES

There were no particularly noteworthy transactions in acres or vacant during the week, an outlying south side deal of some interest being the sale by the Moore estate to Charles MacDonald of a tract of forty-two lots at the southeast corner of Eigthy-third street and Cottage Grove avenue, also facing Maryland and Drexel avenues, for a reported consideration of $25,000. The purchaser plans to improve with brick bungalows to sell at $4,500. Raymond M. Grattan was the broker.

The Chicago Title & Trust company has taken title as trustee from Josephine P. Slauson to the property at the northwest corner of Wilson and Hermitage avenues, lot 42 feet on Hermitage and 165 feet on Wilson avenue, improved with a residence. It is the purpose of the purchaser immediately to improve the property with a building to contain stores and offices. S. C. Iverson of Hibbard Porter & Bro., was the broker. It is opposite the Ravenswood Y. M. C. A., and only a block from the railroad station.

Le Roy F. Harris of Harris, Kusel & Co., builders, has purchased from Leon Hartman the vacant on Grand boulevard, 150 feet south of Forty-seventh street, 50x150 feet, east front, for a reported $8,500, which he will improve at once with a twelve apartment building of three and four rooms. Benjamin Rosenberg & Co. were the brokers.

In an interesting sale of manufacturing property William B. Hale, William P. Sidley, and Preston Kumbler, trustees of the estate of George W. Hale, have sold to David S. Simon of Albert L. Straus' office, the property at the southwest corner of Federal and Twenty-fifth street, 200x100 feet, vacant, for a reported consideration of $35,000.

Thomas R. Sheare has purchased from Bella F. Evans the property at the northeast corner of Central Park avenue and Walnut street, 225x134 feet, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $26,660.

TYPIST TAKES STAND TO CLEAR HER EMPLOYER

Miss Ann Riordan Testifies for A. C. Frost in Jury Bribing Case.

A former employé of A. C. Frost, millionaire traction magnate, went to his aid in the federal court yesterday, where Mr. Frost is on trial on a charge of conspiring to bribe the jury which tried him in the $10,000,000 Alaskan coal land fraud case.

Miss Ann Riordan, a stenographer in Mr. Frost's office, testified that never during her employment by Mr. Frost had she seen Archibald T. Fitzgerald, the man who confessed to federal authorities that Frost paid him money to bribe Oliver W. Bourke, a member of the jury. Mr. Frost was acquitted at the land fraud trial.

Testimony Helps Defense.

Miss Riordan was placed on the stand by Attorney Albert Fink to refute the statements made by Fitzgerald. She said that she occupied the office daily from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. during the period in which Fitzgerald alleged the "deal" had been planned and consummated, and that never in that time had Fitzgerald been in the office.

Bourke, who formerly was mayor of Blue Island, and Burt D. Wing, an attorney, are on trial with Mr. Frost.

Miss Riordan was questioned by Attorney Fink.

Q.—Did Mr. Frost occupy the office at all during the trial? A.—No, he came in only once or twice during the entire trial.

Denies Ever Seeing Fitzgerald.

Q.—Did you ever see Fitzgerald in the office? A.—No. I never saw him before in my life.

Miss Riordan testified she arrived at the office at 8 o'clock every morning before the trial and stayed there until 6 o'clock every night.

The purpose of Mr. Fink was to show she was occupying the room at the time when Fitzgerald said he was talking to Frost in the room.

The testimony of Frank Bogert of Ottawa, Ill., a member of the coal land jury, also appeared to favor the defense.

Indictments Attacked.

A move to block the government's prosecution was made by Attorney Fink. He attacked the legality of the indictments.

Prosecutor Hopkins opposed the motion and Judge Geiger postponed argument until Monday.

Hinton G. Clabaugh, chief of the investigation bureau of the department of justice, was the last witness called for the government. Mr. Clabaugh testified that Fitzgerald confessed that he and Burt Wing conspired with Frost. Fitzgerald got into communication with Oliver W. Bourke, former mayor of Blue Island, who was on the jury. Mr. Clabaugh said Fitzgerald told him and made a "deal" whereby the jury was to receive $15,000.

Fitzgerald told the same story on the witness stand.

GIRL TELLS OF ENFORCED LIVING WITH "DRUMMER."

He Induced Me to Come to the Boat in Benton Harbor to Say Good-by She Says.

Kenosha, Wis., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—With her golden hair hanging almost to her waist in curls, Hazel Dana, 18 years of age, the daughter of John Dana, a policeman at Benton Harbor, Mich., waited for her father at the county jail here today. The father says that she was abducted from Benton Harbor six weeks ago by a man known to them as John Harley Fay, supposed to be a traveling salesman from Madison, Wis.

She told between sobs how Fay had ardently wooed her at Benton Harbor. On the night he left the city, she said, he had asked her to be at the boat landing to say farewell. When she went to the landing, she says, Fay gagged her with his hand, gathered her up in his arms, and took her aboard the boat, which sailed a few minutes later for Chicago.

She said he repeatedly threatened her with a revolver, and under his threats they had lived as man and wife in a Kenosha apartment. He told her he would kill her if she told her story, and then eloped with a Kenosha girl.

JUDGE FISHER ON WARPATH.

Well Dressed Couple, Held on Morals Charge, Fail to Appear at Private Hearing.

Judge Harry M. Fisher's consideration for well dressed moral offenders, for whom he arranged a private hearing, was rudely flouted when the star chamber couple failed to show up in the judicial presence. Judge Fisher's delicate consideration was promptly withdrawn and he testily told the well dressed couple's lawyer they would have to come into the open Morals' court just as do trespassers of less tasteful attire. They were arrested in the Hotel La Salle Friday night and told the police they were Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Evans. She was 24; he 44. Judge Fisher released them in bonds of $50 each.

DE VRY OPPOSES MERRY GO ROUND NEAR HIS "PETS"

Zoo Chief Thinks 'Canned Rag' Would Peeve Animals in Lincoln Park.

Music is said to have a fascination that will change the tiger's growl into a purr of pleasure. But Cy De Vry, animal trainer at Lincoln park, believes his amiable beasts of the Chicago zoo will be incited to nervousness and excitability by the strident tones of a merry-go-round organ.

Mr. De Vry learned yesterday a project is on foot to erect a merry-go-round immediately in front of the lion house. George A. Schmidt of Riverview park is said to be behind the move for a ten year concession, at an annual rental of $2,000. A committee of the Lincoln park commissioners, consisting of Bertram M. Winston, Nelson N. Lampert, and A. F. Bruchman, has taken up the matter and will make a report at the December meeting of the commissioners.

Animals of Discerning Ear.

"Those animals will raise cain," said Mr. De Vry, "if they have to listen all day to a merry-go-round. Of course they may put some kind of silencers on the organ or place it inside a building, but it will have to be opened up in the summer time. Animals may like music, but they won't care for a steady diet of a merry-go-round rag.

"Besides that, the zoo will need that space for expansion. If it stands at all, that is the only way it can go. We need that space for a monkey house, a hayhouse for the elephants, camels, giraffes, and all the animals who eat hay, and a reptile house. Our zoo will be about complete when we get those three additional buildings.

"If they must have a merry-go-round, I would suggest that it be placed on the extension or the pier."

Governor to Investigate.

It was said that an attempt to launch the project would be made before the present commissioners make way for Gov.-elect Lowden's appointees. Gov. Dunne said he would institute an investigation of the matter.

"I know extremely little of the plan to erect a merry-go-round," said Gov. Dunne. "If it is a nuisance, I shall oppose it. If it is going to benefit the public in any way I shall not oppose it."

MARRIAGE COURT PRAISED IN REPORT BY TRAEGER.

Sheriff Says New Tribunal Dignifies Service and Adds to Receipts of Office—Fees on the Increase.

Sheriff Traeger's "marriage court" is paid a high tribute as a means of dignifying marriage and of adding to the fees of his office in his report yesterday to the county board.

The sheriff estimates that the fees of the fiscal year from the marriage court will be near $30,000. Already the fees amount to $12,160 for four and a half months.

The sheriff's office in 1916 collected $99,032.97, while in the previous year there was collected only $72,024.77. Deputy sheriffs traveled 1,819,868 miles in serving 116,848 writs for the courts, 2,114 pauper writs, and 83,938 subpœnas, citations, attachments, and notices.

We are Becoming Conversational
NOBODIES!

"—why, do you realize that we seldom have anything to talk about, nowadays, except the children or the housework or the bills?"

"I know it. When people come in I'm really ashamed. I have never cared for small talk—but we haven't any 'large' talk. We must brush up. We must do some good reading."

"Yes—but what shall we read? It sounds like a funny question, with all the world of literature there is to choose from. But I must confess I don't know where to begin, or what to read, or how to choose."

"That's just it. We are both really interested in worth-while things—art, travel, history, literature, music, nature—but if we were to delve into all those things we'd just get into a maze, and we'd never get anywhere, and pretty soon we'd give it up. You know we would."

"You are right! Oh, if someone would tell us each day, in just a few minutes, even one thing we really ought to know—" And right here comes into your lives. The Mentor Association has 70,000 members who, like you, are really interested in worth-while things, who have found that such things must be a part of every well-rounded existence, and who realize that they haven't the time or the special training to dig deep into all subjects.

Twice a month, the first and the fifteenth, they receive "The Mentor." Each time a special topic is discussed with absorbing interest by an authority who is also a gifted writer. And with each issue of "The Mentor" are six gravures or color pictures, reproduced on heavy paper which, added to the illustrations throughout the text, and the text itself, leave with you a graphic and vivid recollection of the subject.

For Instance

"The Mentor" of August 1st contained an unusually interesting and human article on Argentina by E. H. Newman, lecturer and traveler.

On August 15 "The Mentor" took to all members a discussion of Game Animals of America by that student of animal life, W. T. Hornaday, Director New York Zoölogical Park.

The September 1 issue was devoted to the life and the art of Raphael, told by Professor John C. Van Dyke, Rutgers College.

Hamilton W. Mabie wrote of Walter Scott in "The Mentor" of September 15.

"The Yosemite Valley" was the subject of a discourse by Dwight L. Elmendorf in "The Mentor" of October 2, and you can well imagine the beauty of the accompanying pictures in color.

These are but examples. The texts, from time to time, reach into the realms of Fine Art, Travel, History, Biography, Literature, Music, Domestic Art, Nature and Popular Science. Each is lavishly illustrated in addition to the separate gravures or color pictures.

But "The Mentor" itself is only part of what The Mentor Association means to you.

What Membership Brings

Briefly, membership in The Mentor Association gives you these five things:

First. 24 issues of "The Mentor," bringing a beautifully printed and illustrated story every two weeks, all about one subject written by a leading authority upon that subject—300 pages during the year.

Second. 600 beautiful illustrations, distributed during the year through the text of the 24 issues of "The Mentor."

Third. 144 gravure or color pictures, reproduced on heavy paper, all ready for framing, in deep, rich tones that bring out all the beauty of the originals. On the back of each picture is a crisp, five-minute description of the subject that is portrayed.

Fourth. Answers to any question on art, travel, literature, history, nature or architecture; each answer by an authority.

Fifth. Authoritative Club Programs. Any program you may want for a club, a reading circle, a literary afternoon or evening—each made for you by an expert.

How to Join

The Mentor Association wants among its members only those people who love the finer things of life—who are interested in music, nature, art or travel—who have a real desire for self-improvement and broadening. If you are one of these people (and we believe you are, if you have read thus far) we cordially invite you to our membership.

But, first—you must be convinced. So we make this offer. Write your name and address on the coupon below; tear it off and mail it to us. Send no money; you will receive a copy of "The Mentor." If you like it, and want to join The Mentor Association, send $1 on receipt of a bill from us, and $1 each month for but two months thereafter, until a total of only $3 has been paid.

A membership in The Mentor Association is yours for but $3 a year; 12½ cents for each issue of "The Mentor."

You are placed under no obligation by signing the coupon. This is a special offer. Don't let it pass. Tear out the coupon now, while it's on your mind.

DOCTOR COMES BACK TO CHICAGO TO WILL MILLIONS

Dr. Norman Bridge Finds California Law Limits Bequests to Charity.

Because the laws of California will not permit him to dispose of his immense estate as he wishes to, Dr. Norman Bridge, California millionaire, has again made Illinois his place of residence. A few years ago Dr. Bridge lived in Los Angeles. He moved there twenty-five years ago from Chicago when he found he was suffering from tuberculosis. Acquiring a fortune in California and Mexican oil properties, he and his wife decided to make wills bequeathing their estates to charitable, medical, and educational institutions.

When Dr. Bridge's attorney informed him that he could not bequeath more than a third of his estate to institutions he moved back to Chicago, and now he calls the Blackstone hotel his home.

Has No Children.

"I was given to understand that this law was passed to prevent people from giving everything they had to the Catholic church when they died," Dr. Bridge said. "Just how much of my estate is going to be disposed of in bequests I do not care to say, but it is more than one-third. I am childless."

Dr. Bridge came to Chicago for two things, he remarked last night. The first and most important to his mind was to vote the Republican ticket. The second was to attend the nineteenth annual convention of the American Mining congress. He will talk before the congress Monday evening in the Hotel La Salle and exhibit moving pictures of the largest and richest oil well in the world, the famous Cerro Azul gusher, located near Tampico, Mexico.

Made New Wills.

"Since taking up our residence in Chicago Mrs. Bridge and I have made new wills," Dr. Bridge continued. "Some people in California have died, leaving property to people who they hoped would turn it over to the institutions which they designated. Such a will is dishonest."

Dr. Bridge's rise to wealth is one of the business romances of southern California. He is now about 72 years old and is the treasurer of six different oil companies. They are the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company, the Mexican Petroleum corporation, the Mexican Petroleum company, Ltd., Mexican Petroleum company, Huasteca Petroleum company, and the California Petroleum corporation.

Fortune Made in Ten Years.

And Dr. Bridge became interested in oil properties only ten years ago. To a great extent he has given up his medical practice, but he still takes an active interest in the Rush Medical college, of which he is an emeritus professor. For four years prior to 1901 he was on the faculty of the institution which graduated him.

AGED HUSBAND REGAINS $2,275 FROM HIS WIFE

Former Mrs. Pio Ordered to Return Sum as He Annuls Their Marriage.

On the ground that he suffers from a "temperamental mania for women and matrimony, that wholly unfits him for marital responsibility," Louis Nehring, aged 73, was yesterday granted a decree annulling his marriage to Mrs. Minnie Pio. Judge Denis Sullivan also ruled that Mrs. Pio and her step-daughter, Louise Holmes, repay $2,275 which they secured from the romantic old gentleman.

Says She Sought Money.

The action was on Mr. Nehring's petition. He related that while he was seeking love and happiness in marriage, Mrs. Pio from the start played for his money. She asked $2,300 to finish payment on a house before she would consent to love the Lochinvar from Prairie du Chien.

Mr. Nehring asserted that a "badger plot" was then hatched in his own house to provide Mrs. Nehring cause for ejecting him and keeping possession of his property.

Calls Party a Trap.

A party was arranged, at which he was fêted with ten year old whisky until 20 year old lips began to look pretty good to him. A Mrs. Mary Thomason, pretty and vivacious, then put up her mouth and dared Mr. Nehring to take the pucker out. Mr. Nehring pecked away at the rosebud with so much energy that he did not hear Mrs. Nehring enter the room. She blasted him with one scornful look.

Then she ordered him to bed, and the following day put him out of the house. Mr. Nehring then hunted around among the memories of many loves for an old friend, common sense, and he promptly trudged to a lawyer and started suit.

14 DEATHS FROM PNEUMONIA

One Day's Fatalities Cause Health Chief to Issue Warning Against Peril of Disease.

Fourteen persons died of pneumonia in Chicago Friday, causing Health Commissioner Robertson to sound a warning against overeating and poor ventilation. He said pneumonia is one of the most contagious diseases known to medical science, although not considered as such by the public, and pointed out that there are more than 3,600 deaths from it yearly in Chicago.

"If these deaths were due to infantile paralysis the public would be aroused in earnest," he said. "Most of the deaths from pneumonia are caused by overeating and poor ventilation. Overeating especially is a predisposing factor."

CHICAGO BOY DEFEATS TIGERS FOR HARVARD

Horween's Field Goal Decides 3-0 Battle Before Great Crowd.

HARTE SAVES GAME.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Harvard defeated Princeton in their yearly football struggle in the stadium across the river from Cambridge today by the skill of Ralph Horween and the speed of Dick Harte. The score was 3 to 0.

Horween, who is a Chicago boy, won the game for Harvard by drop kicking a goal from the field when standing on the twenty-three yard line in the third period; Harte saved the game for Harvard two or three minutes later when he brought down Allen Brown with a flying tackle from behind, after the latter had snapped up the ball on a fumble by Casey and was on his way to the Crimson goal line with a clear field.

Tigers' Errors Aid Crimson.

Mistakes by Princeton—fatal mistakes—were contributing causes both to the winning of the game by Horween and the saving of it by Harte, and these must be told, even if they are not emphasized.

A short punt for a scant twelve yards by the usually dependable Driggs when fairly deep in his own territory early in the third period and a damaging penalty of fifteen yards against the Tigers two plays later, when Winn failed to report to the referee on being substituted for Highley, gave Harvard its one real chance to strike, and thus the way was opened for Horween to win the game for Harvard.

Princetonian Misses Chance.

Then two or three minutes later, after Allen Brown had retrieved a fumble and was off with a clear field, some Princeton man, who could be be identified, had the chance to cut down Harte, but failed to grasp it. Brown could not measure strides with the fast flying Harvard end, and was laid low with a brilliant tackle from behind after covering twenty-three yards.

Harvard also made mistakes which might well have been turned to account by Princeton, but giving full credit to the Tigers for the fight they made and the game they played, the scoring punch was lacking.

Lose Three Opportunities.

Three times Mr. W. K. Opportunity knocked at the door and three times was entrance refused. On two occasions fifteen yard penalties checked promising rallies. On two occasions, longish tries at the Harvard goal from placement by Funk failed; on one occasion Harvard took the ball on downs on its own nineteen yard line, ending Princeton's brightest chance to win.

Some criticised Jack Eddy's judgment in calling for a rushing play on the fourth down instead of a try at goal from the field. This may not be altogether fair. Moore and Thomas had been tearing through the Harvard line for short gains, and there was only one yard to go for first down.

Eddy had reason to have faith in Thomas, from his remarkable plunging behind closed gates at Princeton, but the Harvard forwards closed in as he hurled himself at the line and stopped him with a scant half yard to go.

Criticism of Play Not Earned.

Eddy would have been criticised for not rushing, when the attack was going fairly smoothly at that time, if a try at goal had failed. But Princeton had three chances to score to Harvard's two, and under the circumstances it was only right that the victors should carry off the spoils.

Football games have been played which carried greater thrills, but few have been played which held 40,000 men and women under the spell of so much uncertainty, and in the grip of so much tenseness. Toward the end the game seemed to hang on every play, with Harvard fighting desperately to hold the winning margin of three points, and Princeton calling on every resource to get a man loose and turn the tide.

Brilliant Throng in Stand.

The day, the scene, the game were cut to fit each other. College football crowds are distinctive. They look much the same year after year and act the same; yet they are ever distinctive. The crowd this afternoon was not behind those which have gone before in color, brilliancy, enthusiasm, and concentration on the gripping game.

The rival camps had their organized cheers; the ordinary onlookers had their spontaneous outbursts. The first, with songs interspersed, were appreciatively enjoyed by the rank and file of onlookers. The second was intensified and made a part of the undergraduates' day.

Fur coats and heavy wraps were a burden, so temperate was the weather. A sharp wind out of the southwest added only invigoration to the run of the game.

Harvard Rooters Add Color.

Between halves, while the panting players were getting a momentary respite and many instructions, the Harvard men entertained with their "Marseillaise" and with their flaming Crimson "H" formed against the drab background of the stands with fluttering handkerchiefs.

After the game Crimson rooters took part in their usual mad revel on the Pollard, Chicago Boy, Helps Hand Eli Its First Defeat.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Yale went down to defeat today, 21 to 6, for the first time this season, although the Eli eleven, which was fored of substitute players, led the eleven from Brown, 6 to 0, when the first half closed, the result of two drop kick goals by Full Back Jim Braden.

The visitors smashed the Yale rush line to smithereens in the second half, Wade, Pollard, and Devitalis each getting a touchdown, which, with three incidental goals by Hillhouse, accounted for the Browns' total of 21 points.

Chicagoan Star of Both Teams.

Fritz Pollard of Chicago, the colored half back, was the individual star for both elevens. His end runs time and again baffled the Yale tacklers and his fifty yard plunge, after taking Harry Legore's punt in midfield, giving Brown its second touchdown, was the most spectacular play of the afternoon.

Yale was chagrined at being unable to shatter the Brown defense for a single touchdown, but was on both occasions of its journeys close. The Browns held till fourth down, when Braden chose to attempt a field goal rather than a line attack.

On other occasions, in the first period Yale approached to the Browns' twenty yard line, but Braden's attempted field goal fell short. Brown did not threaten the Yale goal during the opening period.

During the second period Brown gradually worked the ball toward the Yale goal, two end runs by Pollard netting twelve yards each. The Yale defense rallied, however, at the Eli thirty yard line and Yale wrested the ball on downs.

Braden Repeats Drop Kick.

Braden made a drop kick in the first three minutes of the period, after Yale had taken the ball at the Browns' thirty yard line, on Hillhouse's short punt. Opening the third period Brown took the aggressive and Yale did not once against threaten its goal. Brown stormed ahead eighty yards to the Yale one yard line, where Yale desperately held on downs.

Trouble was only temporarily averted, however, for Braden's kick to Yale's forty yard line gave Brown a chance to come rushing back, and Purdy crashed over the line for the first Brown touchdown on fourth down. Pollard's dashing run back of Legore's kick gave Brown its second score.

Five minutes later Brown began another march of eighty yards down the field, following the kickoff on short line gains. Brown advanced till the Yale five yard line was reached, where Hillhouse headed a forward pass to Devitalis for the score.

Fully 25,000 people saw the game, which was Brown's second annual victory in succession over Yale, as they won last year, 3 to 0. Lineup:

LAMPS OF AUTOS LIGHT GRID FIELD AT FINISH.

Stillwater, Okla., Nov. 11.—Headlights from more than a hundred automobiles illuminated the gridiron during the last two periods of the football game today between Oklahoma A. and M. and the Central State Normal, and the ball was painted white to enable the men to see the passes. Two storms delayed the game until it seemed too dark to complete the contest. The automobiles then encircled the field, the lights were put in position, and the A. and M. team defeated the visitors, 34 to 6.

WORK OF COFALL WINS 21-0 GAME FOR NOTRE DAME

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Notre Dame won the fourth annual clash with South Dakota university, 21 to 0, today. Capt. Cofall made the first touchdown shortly after play began and scored all the Catholic points.

Notre Dame secured its second touchdown in the second period on a fumble. Such slips were many, and were made by both teams, because of the cold weather. The Coyotes played a lively game in the third period and held the visitors. The third touchdown came near the end of the game on a right end run. Cofall kicked all goals.

Notre Dame Gets Score.

South Dakota could not gain after taking the kick off, and punted back. Notre Dame began a steady march by line bucking and skirting the ends. South Dakota aided the advance by two penalizations for offside.

A forward pass placed the oval on South Dakota's fifteen yard line, and on two line plays Cofall crossed the goal, seven minutes after the game began. He kicked goal.

In the second quarter South Dakota failed on several attempts at forward passes. The state university made some gains against the line, but a fumble gave Cofall the chance for his second touchdown. He kicked goal again, the half ending soon afterward.

Desperate Effort to Score.

Neither was able to score in the third quarter, which was the most sensational of the game. Brilliant plays were made by both sides, the Coyotes' fighting bitterly for a touchdown. Notre Dame's defense proved too strong, however. Near the close of the game the Hoosier team fought its way to scoring distance, and Capt. Cofall went over again. He kicked goal, and South Dakota's desperate efforts fell short after this.

CHICAGO BOYS GRID HEROES

Five college players, graduates from Chicago high schools or local prairies, figured prominently in the results of yesterday's football games. Here are their performances:

RALPH HORWEEN, former Francis Parker player, made the drop kick for Harvard which defeated Princeton, 3 to 0. He booted the ball from the twenty-seven yard line in the third quarter.

FRED POLLARD, former Lane Tech star, was big factor in Browns' 21 to 6 triumph over Yale. He pulled several sensational runs, one for fifty yards in the third period for a touchdown which clinched the game.

FRITZ SHIVERICK, first famous at University High, was instrumental in defeating Michigan, 23 to 20, at Cornell. He lifted three drop kicks in as many attempts, scoring nine points.

"CHICK" HARLEY, who learned the game on the Chicago prairies, played only ten minutes for Ohio State against Indiana at Columbus, but started the Buckeyes on their way to 46 to 7 victory by two end runs of thirty-five yards and forty-two yards.

FULL BACK KOHLER, All-Star high school player as member of Wendell Phillips, was a big factor in Northwestern's victory over Iowa. Playing defensive quarter back, he stopped almost everything shot through the line, while he made consistent gains through the Iowa forwards with his plunges. He also figured in the forward passes.

Cornell's Rush at Finish Noses Out Michigan, 23-20

BY RING W. LARDNER.

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—There was a wild, wild pastime in this town today. Tonight, with most of the precincts heard from, Cornell was conceded the election by a vote of 23 to 20. When five or six minutes of the third period had been played Michigan was leading, 20 to 6, and it seemed to be a moral cinch on victory.

Then Cornell, which had stuck to straight football and depended on Shiverick's great kicking up to this time, cut loose some forward passes that turned things upside down. Two touchdowns were the result of these long heaves, and Shiverick, by kicking both goals, tied up the count.

Even then it appeared to be an even money bet that Michigan would nose in ahead, for the Wolverines' attack looked nearly twice as strong and consistent as Cornell's. But Shiverick's remarkable kicking saved the day for his bunch. Two tremendous punts carried the ball far into Wolverine territory, and the westerners had to kick from behind their own goal line.

Shiverick's Toe Wins Game.

Cornell got the ball not more than thirty-seven yards from the Maize and Blue goal, and from there Shiverick added the three points that settled it with his third successful drop kick of the day. Shiverick's drop kicking average was 1.000, as he made only three trials. The first two of them came in the opening period and gave Cornell six points before Michigan got started. The first one was easy, but the second was a peach, the Ithaca star booting it over from forty-three yards out.

From the time Shiverick made that second goal until nearly the opening of the last period Michigan played rings around the pupils of Mr. Sharpe. Zeiger, who was in at quarter because of Sparks' bad knee, gained acres of ground. Pat Smith was usually good for two or three yards when they were needed, and Maulbetsch was his effective self.

Passes Puzzle Cornell Backs.

In addition to the gains made on straight football Michigan's passes, in the second and third quarters, were things that Cornell did not know how to stop. Smith and Peach did the throwing, with Maulbetsch and Dunne as catchers. Some of Dunne's grabs were spectacular in the extreme.

The prettiest play of the day, perhaps, was the heave from Peach to Dunne that gave Michigan its third touchdown and an apparently safe lead in the third period of play.

But the Wolverine's defense against forward passing was just as weak as Cornell's and when the Ithacans got busy after Dunne's touchdown they simply ran wild with the throwing game. They had the score tied in no time.

Teams Desperate at Finish.

Cornell students, who had backed their team with much cold cash, began to root vociferously for the victory that had seemed impossible. So desperately were the Wolverines fighting, however, that Cornell had little chance of crossing the Maize goal line again, and the contest would have wound up in a tie if Cornell had not possessed a person with a toe as accurate as Shiverick's.

As the game was played the two elevens appeared about equal in strength. Michigan was outclassed in kicking, but seemed to have more versatility of attack and better men to do the attacking.

Mr. Yost and the Michigan players found a great deal of fault with the officials and during the argument with the head linesman over an alleged offside play a Wolverine substitute named Whalen cracked the gentleman in the eye.

Stands for 12,000 Spectators.

This was the first time a Michigan team has played on the new field, which is handicaped by the name of Schoellkopf. It is further handicapped by nature. On one side is a valley that is almost a canyon. There is not a chance in the world to build stands there, so everybody has to sit in the structure that is built on the level side. The scenery is beautiful, but the seating capacity is limited to something like 12,000.

There was considerable betting on the game, and most of it was at odds of 10 to 8 with Cornell on the short end. The reason for this was not visible to the naked eye.

A special train from Ann Arbor reached Ithaca about noon and the 500 rooters it brought made fully as much noise as the native Cornellians. The Wolverine squad was supposed to arrive about 1 o'clock this afternoon, but their train was late and the game was started at 2:30, instead of 2.

Cornell Off to Bad Start.

At the outset a Cornellian, who looked like Speed, the left half back, pulled a boner that threatened early disaster for his team. He recovered the ball and tried to run it out with five of six Michigan men right on top of him. He was downed on his own one yard line and Shiverick had to punt.

Michigan got the ball on the Cornell forty yard line. Then, with Zeiger and Smith carrying the ball, the Wolverines made a first down and would have made another but for a fumble. It was Cornell's ball.

On the first play Capt. Mueller came round Michigan's right end and was tackled when he had gone about ten yards. But he wasn't tackled permanently. And before he was finally downed he had traveled fifty yards to the Michigan thirty-five yard line. The Cornell attack was good enough to get as far as the twelve yard mark, and there Michigan held.

Shiverick, who is a Chicago lad, stood on the eighteen yard mark and drop-kicked a goal. Michigan kicked off again and again the Ithacans conveyed the ball into Michigan territory. But the brace came quicker this time, and Shiverick had to try another field goal. It was a tough one, but he made it, from the forty-three yard line.

The Cornell crowd, scenting an easy victory, went bugs. But their joy, to use a unique expression, was short lived. A moment after the next kick-off Cornell had to punt and from their forty yard mark Pat Smith, Zeiger, and Maulbetsch marched down the field for a touchdown. The Cornell defense was laying for Maulie, and Yost's attack fooled 'em, as the little captain did not carry the ball oftener than once out of five times. Zeiger was the busiest guy, still he did some effective running from pass formations.

Michigan Leaps Into Lead.

This touchdown was made early in the second period and another one soon followed, but Mr. Yost had to uncork one of his pet plays to turn the trick. Line plunging was successful until the ball was on the Cornell forty yard line with about four yards to go on a fourth down.

Right End Peach dropped back and Zeiger stood in the kicker's position. The ball was passed from center to Zeiger, who started round right end, but tossed the ball back to Peach, who for-

BUCKEYES ROUT INDIANA ELEVEN IN 46 TO 7 GAME

Columbus, O., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Looking out to Columbus this afternoon the western conference finds Ohio State still undefeated and a 46 to 7 victor over Indiana. Everywhere the Hoosiers were outplayed, and Chick Harley, the Chicago star of the Buckeyes, played only ten full minutes.

Long runs were the high lights of the contest. Harley whirled through Indiana for three runs of twenty-five, thirty, and thirty-three yards before he retired. McIntosh played well for the Hoosiers, but he had no interference.

Buckeyes Get Early Lead.

Ohio's play was unified, whereas Indiana failed to systematize its defense and played an individual game. Stiehm's men failed to show their much touted aerial game with any success. There was no one on the field during the first half but the Buckeyes. The Hoosier eleven left its football ingenuity on the side lines. Ohio State piled up a 32 to 7 score in the first half.

During the contest the Buckeyes made thirty-one first downs and Indiana eight. Ohio completed four passes out of nine for forty-three yards. Indiana tried nineteen passes, five of which earned ninety-five yards.

In seven kicks W. Hess and Gray averaged thirty-eight yards for the Hoosiers. Yerges and Boesel averaged thirty-four yards in four punts for Ohio. Indiana lost twenty-five yards by penalties and Ohio five yards. Ohio fumbled six times, but luckily recovered all except one.

Players Who Made Counters.

Yerges scored three touchdowns for Ohio, Sorensen two, Norton one, and McDonald one. Hiatt of Indiana counted the only Hoosier touchdown when he took across a twenty-five yard pass from W. Hess. Most of the Buckeye gains were through the line, although several long runs were made by Harley and Norton around Buschmann.

Indiana tried forward passes in savage desperation, but Ohio's secondary defense was everywhere. Bolen starred at breaking up passes for the Buckeyes.

Crowd of 10,000 Sees Game.

Ten thousand spectators saw the walkover. In 1913 Indiana introduced Ohio to the western conference by taking a 7 to 6 game here. Today Ohio decisively defeated the Hoosiers for the third consecutive time. Lineup:

AMES WINS IN SNOW, 7-0.

Ames, Ia., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—State field was snowbound and the Ames eleven was glad to take a 7 to 0 victory from Morningside college of Sioux City today. Morningside was undefeated and the Ames goal line had not been crossed when the game began. The only score was made in the third quarter, when Aldrich, the cyclone quarter-back, held his feet in a wide circling run around the Methodists' right end over the slippery field. The snow made the ball slippery and caused frequent fumbles.

NOTES OF PURPLE GAME

It has been a long time since such enthusiasm has been shown by Northwestern students. They rooted and cheered even when their team was behind and they stuck by the eleven at times when it looked as if it might be defeated.

"Wee Willie" McGill, former baseball pitcher, who is now acting as trainer of the Purple eleven, was a happy man after the game. Willie is sincere in his assertions that Northwestern will win the title and is doing his utmost to keep the players in physical condition.

Nelson Kellogg, athletic director at the University of Iowa, was a busy person. With a phone receiver strapped to both ears and the mouthpiece in one of his hands, he let the students at Iowa City know just how the game was progressing, play by play.

Lewis Omer, athletic director at Northwestern, was certainly a happy man after the game. He asserted nothing will now stop the team from winning the title.

"LITTLE FIVE" TITLE GOES TO MONMOUTH; BEATS LAKE FOREST

Monmouth college eleven clinched the Little Five football title today when it defeated Lake Forest on Farwell field, 17 to 3. The downstaters made their first score in the middle of the first period, when Ady broke through tackle for a short plunge to the goal line.

Lake Forest made its only score when Scholz dropped a field goal from the thirty-five yard line in the second period. Both teams came back in the second half with renewed drive, but neither was able to count. In the last period Brooks broke through the Lake Forest line for a touchdown and shortly afterwards Raymond sent a place kick over for the final score.

For Monmouth Raymond played a good game on attack. Woods' speed and drive on offense and defense marked him the star for Lake Forest. Lineup:

DOPE ON PURPLE

Northwestern must win from Purdue next Saturday at Evanston in order to meet Ohio State at Columbus on Nov. 25 with a clean record for the Big Nine title. Ohio State, the other undefeated Big Nine eleven, plays Case in a game which has no bearing on the conference championship. Northwestern is favorite over Purdue, which was beaten by Iowa, 24 to 6. Ohio State, on the basis of comparative scores against Indiana, appears stronger than Northwestern, but Coach Murphy's fighting charges have met successfully every test thus far.

Wins in Final Drive After Hawkeyes Get Jump in Opening Period.

DAVIS OF LOSERS STAR

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Without the services of Capt. Paddie Driscoll, one of the best players who have worn a Purple uniform in the last decade, and coming from behind and overcoming handicaps against a fighting aggregation, Northwestern defeated Iowa yesterday on Northwestern field, 20 to 13. The feat makes the Purple look like the logical Big Nine champion.

Northwestern played football when it had to. Iowa did the same, but the reserve plays which Coach Murphy had been saving turned the tide of battle. The Hawkeyes tried to emulate the feat of Illinois, which upset Minnesota last Saturday by getting the jump. They got the jump, but did not have the staying qualities to put up the necessary defense when hard pressed.

Iowa Starts with Rush.

Capt. Laun of Iowa won the toss and elected to defend the north goal, thereby taking advantage of a strong wind. During the first few minutes of play there was little to choose between the two elevens, Iowa having a slight shade. Capt. Laun, with the wind in his favor, booted the ball over the Purple goal line after his team had failed to make headway when the ball was in midfield. This resulted in a touchback for Northwestern, and the ball was put in play by scrimmage on its twenty yard line.

Half Back Underhill fumbled on an off tackle drive, the first play that the Purple attempted, and Davis dropped on the ball for Iowa. Davis and Duncan then alternated in carrying the ball on line plunges and drives off the tackles until the oval was on the Purple one yard line. Scott then hit center for the needed distance, throwing gloom into the Purple, while the Hawkeye yells were given with a vengeance. Davis added another point by kicking goal.

Hawkeye Defense Holds.

Following this score Tripplet kicked off for Iowa and sent the ball over the Purple goal line for a touchdown. The Purple worked the ball down the field and into Iowa's territory by use of end runs and line plunges. Ellingwood, Kohler, and Brightmire were the star performers, but when the ball was worked well inside of the five yard line the Hawkeyes put up a stubborn defense.

Kohler was sent against the stubborn Iowa forward wall, but he failed to make consistent headway. Ellingwood then was sent off the tackles, but was set back without any gain. Again Kohler and Ellingwood were sent against the fighting Hawkeyes, but they could not make the required distance and the ball went to Iowa on its two foot line. It was one of the greatest stands made by a conference team on its goal line in years.

The ball was kicked out of danger by Capt. Laun and for the remainder of the half the struggle was fought in midfield.

Ellingwood Makes Long Run.

Tripplet kicked off for Iowa to start the second half. The ball went into the arms of Ellingwood, who made a beautiful thirty-five yard return and when he finally was brought to earth the ball rested on the Iowa forty yard mark. Shortly after the start of the half Williams was substituted for Brightmire at quarter back for Northwestern. Williams started to work immediately. He tore around the Iowa ends for substantial gains, and his work resulted in the ball being placed within scoring distance.

Ellingwood, Kohler, and Underhill, the Purple backs, then advanced the ball yard by yard until it rested on the Iowa three yard line. With Iowa expecting a straight plunge by Kohler and the secondary defense pulled up behind the forward wall, Underhill was sent off tackle, and when Referee Knight untangled the mass of humanity the Purple back was over the line for the score which made the Northwestern rooters feel more easy. Their joy was short lived, as Putnam missed the goal and the score was 7 to 6 in Iowa's favor.

Davis Boots Field Goal.

Exchanges of punts and a fumble by Kohler on the Northwestern twenty-eight yard line gave the ball to Iowa, Davis falling on the oval. After Iowa failed to make consistent headway, Davis attempted a field goal from the thirty-eight yard line after a bad pass, Wyland to Jenkins, had resulted in an eighteen yard loss. Davis' attempt fell short and Ellingwood downed the ball on the Purple twenty yard mark.

Norman punted out of danger for Northwestern, but the Hawkeyes, by hard line plunging in which Jenkins and Davis were the main factors, carried the ball to the Purple twenty yard line. With four yards to gain on the last down, Davis was elected to make a drop kick. Standing on the twenty-seven yard line, the tow headed half back sent the ball straight between the posts and over the cross bar for three points which put Iowa further in the lead.

With Northwestern rooters shouting at them to fight and show more consistent football, the Purple players settled down to work. After Iowa had scored its field goal, Northwestern elected to receive the kickoff. Tripplet booted the ball to Underwood, who wormed his way back through the Iowa team for a thirty yard run. A forward pass, Kohler to Underhill, resulted in another substantial gain, with the result the ball rested on the Hawkeye eighteen yard line.

Purple Jumps to Front.

From this point to the goal line Northwestern played its best football of the day. Using Underhill and Ellingwood on off tackle drives and Kohler through center, the ball was gradually carried to the Iowa one yard line. Again Iowa put up a stubborn defense, but on the last down, with less than a foot to gain, Williams showed good judgment by plunging between Center Smith's legs for the score which sent Northwestern ahead and the Purple rooters into a frenzy. Putnam kicked goal and the Purple led, 13 to 10.

Putnam kicked off for Northwestern to Jenkins, who made a nice return to the middle of the field. After the Hawkeyes had made a few gains Jenkins punted out of bounds on Northwestern's five yard line. Norman then punted to Jenkins, who was stopped on his twenty-five yard line. Time was called shortly afterward for the end of the period with the Purple on the long end of a 13 to 10 score.

Aerial Score Ties Up Game.

When play was resumed for the beginning of the fourth period the ball was in Iowa's possession on its twenty-five yard line. Duncan and Scott plunged through center, for two yards each. Jenkins failed to make ground and with four yards to gain on the fourth down Davis dropped back to his nineteen yard line and again drove the ball between the posts for three points, which tied the score.

Northwestern again started a determined march which resulted in a touchdown. Trippler kicked off to Zanger, the attempt being short. The Purple player was stopped in midfield, but Kohler and Underhill got busy and started to uncork some plays which evidently had been saved for such an emergency. A forward pass, Kohler to Underhill, netted twenty yards; then the Purple backfield got working together and carried the ball to the Hawkeye three yard line.

Kohler then was sent through center on a split interference play from a punt formation for a touchdown, to which Putnam added another point by kicking goal. This made the score 20 to 13 in favor of Northwestern, which successfully held its margin and upset the best plays sprung by Iowa.

Visitors Try Best Tricks.

After Northwestern had scored its last touchdown Iowa attempted desperate plays in which the forward pass was the all important factor. During the closing minutes of play Davis and Jenkins tried to make successful passes, but Northwestern always was on the alert, with the result the passes were incomplete. Not only did Iowa try to gain ground when it was beaten but it worked just as hard to stop the Northwestern offense, although practically certain of defeat.

It was a great game of football and a credit to both elevens. Northwestern still is a leading factor in the conference race, while Iowa came back with the fighting spirit, a football essential which was appreciated by old time grads of the Purple institution. The Purple played just enough football to win, while Iowa showed all the offensive and defensive play it had been taught.

Davis Stars for Enemy.

It would be hard to pick out the star performer of the Northwestern eleven, but it is a simple matter to give Davis credit for being one of the most determined and aggressive, at the same time successful, performers in the game. Even Purple rooters shouted and cheered for him when he was hurt in the third period. It was he that urged his teammates to greater efforts in the closing minutes of play when it was apparent Iowa was whipped unless a forward pass could be executed successfully. In addition to being a power defensively Davis scored the two field goals, and if Iowa had won he would have been responsible for the victory.

In addition to Davis the game played by Becker, who was shifted from center to right tackle, cannot be overlooked. He was in the fray all the time and certainly was a power on his side of the line. Capt. Laun also performed well as long as he was in the contest. Coach Jones was well pleased with the showing of his team and asserted his men played all the football he expected.

Other Heroes of the Fray.

Ellingwood and Underhill played stellar football for the Purple, while Kohler and Brightmire were in the battle all the time. Williams, who was sent into the game near the end of the first half, also played well, but it was apparent the Purple was under a pull and did not play any more football than was necessary to win.

It was a great day for Northwestern. Twelve thousand alumni and students of the institution were in attendance to celebrate the annual homecoming. They cheered all through the contest and after the final whistle did the snake dance around the field.

Hawkeye alumni and students also were out in numbers and the Hawkeye band was on hand to help in what was expected to be a victory which would upset the conference dope more than the results of last Saturday's games between Illinois and Minnesota and Ohio State and Wisconsin.

PENN BATTLES DARTMOUTH, 7-7; BERRY THE STAR

Quakers Come from Behind in Last Period and Rush Ball Length of the Field.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 11.—Howard Berry's brilliant play in the closing period of the battle between Pennsylvania and Dartmouth on Franklin field this afternoon enabled the Quakers to tie with the New Englanders, 7 to 7.

This brilliant athlete entered the fray at half back when Dartmouth was leading. His dashing play helped Penn to rush the ball to the twenty-five yard line of the Hanover collegians.

Here the Quakers' great emergency man dashed around the end, and, though tackled five times, managed to shake himself loose and plunge twenty-five yards to the goal line. Within the next five minutes Berry also intercepted two long passes by remarkable leaping catches.

Dartmouth was completely outplayed by the Red and Blue, especially in the second half, and only poor handling of the ball robbed Penn of a victory. The New Englanders' touchdown was the direct result of a Penn fumble.

Fumble Precedes Touchdown.

With the Red and Blue gaining consistently Light fumbled after making an eight yard plunge through the line. The ball bounded into the hands of Gerrish, the Dartmouth captain, on Penn's 38 yard line. He evaded the Quakers tackles and rushed to the four yard line before Bryant cut him down.

Here Penn stiffened its defense and it took four plays for Dartmouth to shove Cannel through the Red and Blue line for a touchdown.

Statistics of the game clearly show that Penn outplayed its rivals. It was a bitter battle from start to finish and while the play was clean there was plenty of roughness. The tackling was the hardest and cleanest ever seen on Franklin field.

Miller and Derr of Penn and Dussosoit and Cotton of Dartmouth made some marvelous diving tackles in the open. Aside from Berry the Penn stars were Bryant, Miller, Derr, and May, while Gerrish, Cotton, Dussosoit, and Cannel starred for the New Englanders.

Crowd of 20,000 at Game.

The greatest crowd of the season, more than 22,000 spectators, responded to the call of this game, Dartmouth also being represented by a fair turnout.

In the first period the play was all in Dartmouth's territory, but in the second period it swung the other way, Dartmouth forcing until Gerrish had a chance for a field goal, which he missed. In the third period Penn's fumble gave Gerrish another chance for a field goal, but he missed. Then came Light's fumble, which enabled Cannel to score a touchdown. In the fourth period Penn tied the score by its touchdown and goal. Lineup:

gridiron. The human snake of cheering, exhilarated students, led by the band, coiled and uncoiled itself in and around the goal posts, and finally gathered in a huge mass to cheer the beaten foe and its followers.

The Princeton host had counted on celebrating. Hope had run high. But the fifth defeat in six years was borne with jaws square and heads high. The disappointment of a game lost was tempered by the fight made.

Princeton Star on Lines.

Dave Tibbott was sadly missed by Princeton. His fame as an accurate drop kicker has spread the length of the land; he might well have changed the whole complexion of the game if he had been able to stand on two feet. But Dave was on the side line with a badly sprained right knee, which carries the drive for his drop kick. This added an element of pathos.

The Nassau kicker was injured in practice last Tuesday, just seriously enough to disable him for the game. Coach Speedy Rush had hopes to the very end that Tibbott might be used in case of emergency, but his hope was vain, and so Dave Tibbott lost his chance to win for Princeton.

Elevens Evenly Matched.

The teams were exceptionally well matched. The score might well have been a tie, measured only by what each showed in offensive power and defensive strength, and barring the mistakes which crept in.

Harvard did not look so finished or so powerful as against Cornell, possibly because a stronger foe was met. Neither team boasted an attack which could consistently break down the opposing defense and marches down the field on straight running attack were conspicuous by their absence. The general offense of each lacked continuity.

Harvard gained more ground by straight rushing and more first downs because of the speed and slipperyness of Eddie Casey, rather than because of a more concerted drive. Casey got loose for runs of fifteen, twenty-seven, fifteen, and twenty-three yards. Two were bunched in quick succession, but these were neutralized in a fumble by the same player a moment later, which almost cost the game. The other two long runs were widely separated.

Harvard Attack Stronger.

The Crimson offense was slightly more effective because of Casey's work and Horween's drop kicking. On the defense Princeton had a shade advantage; it was a bit more rugged and slightly stiffer. Lineup:

CORNELL'S RUSH AT FINISH BEATS MICHIGAN, 23-20

Shiverick's Third Field Goal Nets Points Which Defeat the Yosts.

ward passed it at least thirty yards to Maulbetsch, on the left side of the field. Maulie carried it to the two yard line before he was stopped. On the next play he went over for a score.

This pass play was a variation of one Yost has used for three years, but it was never worked in a game before by the same players. Smith had usually done the passing and Dunne the catching. On the kickout for try at goal the ball hit the ground, but Cornell was caught off side.

On the next attempt the ball was caught and Maulie kicked the goal.

Michigan was on the offensive through most of the rest of the period and was threatening a third touchdown when time was called.

Bands Give a Concert.

Between halves the Michigan and Cornell bands got together and played Louis Elbel's "Victors' March." Also a young man passed a contribution box among the Michigan rooters. It was supposed at first that the fund was to be used to buy crutches for the Cornell cripples Dr. Sharpe is always talking about, but it developed that it was to send the Cornell band to Pennsylvania. I contributed a dollar, as I will not have to be in Pennsylvania to hear it.

A Mr. Boyd took a Mr. Gracey's place for Michigan when the third period opened and a Mr. Taylor supplanted Mr. Jewett for Cornell. Cornell kicked off and Michigan punted on the second play. The kick was partially blocked, which proved fortunate for Michigan, as it made the Wolverines on side and they recovered the ball close to midfield.

Michigan Pass a Failure.

Smith, Maulbetsch, and Zeiger made two first downs, the only brilliant feature of which was a ten yard dash by Smith from a pass formation. On the Cornell twenty-seven yard mark, there was a fourth down with four yards to go.

Zeiger tried a short pass to Maulbetsch and would have gone away with it had not Maulie muffed the ball. He redeemed himself a moment later by intercepting Cornell's first forward pass at midfield.

Zeiger and Smith made a first down. Maulie carried the so-called pigskin to the Cornell thirty-seven yard line and there a beautiful forward pass was worked. This time Peach threw the ball twenty-five yards to the son of our governor, who made a nice catch and trotted behind the big red goal posts almost unchallenged. Maulbetsch's attempt at goal hit one of the uprights and bounded back.

Cornell Scores Touchdown.

Right after this score there was considerable excitement, for the Ithacans proceeded to shoot some passes of their own. They got the ball to Michigan's eleven yard line and had a first down there. In three efforts they were unable to gain an inch.

Then they tried another pass, which Michigan broke up, but the umpire said it was done illegally and penalized the Wolverines ten yards. With only a yard to go, Mueller took the pill over for Cornell's first touchdown and Shiverick kicked the goal.

We were reminded of old high school days by what happened just at the close of the third period. Shiverick got away a long punt which bounded over Zeiger's head and came to rest on Michigan's one yard line. Zeiger and a Cornell man both grabbed for it and both acquired it but nobody seemed to know what rule covered the case. A messenger boy was sent for Spalding's football guide and when he returned, in about fifteen minutes, the ball was given to Michigan.

Cornell Ties the Score.

The Wolverines made a bum kick from behind their goal line and Cornell seemed to have a touchdown at its mercy, but the Michigan line held solidly and got the ball on downs on the two yard mark. But there was another bad punt, and from the Michigan twenty-three yard line Cornell carried it over in five plays. Shiverick kicked the goal that meant a tied score.

In this crisis Mr. Yost withdrew Raymond and substituted the more or less crippled Sparks. The Cornell kickoff was short. It was Michigan's ball on its own thirty-seven yard line. Sparks got past Cornell's right tackle for eight yards. Then there was a successful forward pass from Smith to Dunne, and when Morrie was thrown he was on Cornell's fifteen yard line.

Three plays through the line netted only nine yards, and on the fourth attempt Maulbetsch was stopped a foot short. Shiverick then got off a beautiful punt that sailed clear over Zeiger's head and rolled to the Michigan one yard mark. Sparks punted out to the thirty yard line. After three feeble attempts to puncture the Michigan line Shiverick made this third drop kick from the thirty-two yard line and Cornell was three points ahead.

Michigan's Last Bid Fails.

It was a desperate situation for Michigan, and Zeiger tried all the plays. Forward passes followed each other in rapid succession, but Cornell was naturally looking for them and its defensive half backs took care neither Dunne nor Peach could get within reaching distance of the ball.

The oval went to Cornell on downs on the big red team's forty yard line and the mighty Shiverick punted it clear across the Wolverine goal line.

Sparks tried a run, but couldn't get away with it, and the last play of the game, an attempted pass to Dunne, was caught at midfield by Speed, the Cornell half back. Lineup:

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

By A. R. Metcalfe

PROGRESSIVE auction inquiries are always numerous at this season. Several millions of our citizens are apparently engaged in this form of recreation, although in the larger cities it is nearly extinct.

To begin with, there is "no sich animal." The Whist club of New York and the Portland club of London have consistently refused to recognize such a game, so that there are no official laws or rules to govern it. Any club can make its own rules and they are just as good as any other rules.

The game as it is commonly played is an absurdity. So long as the worst possible bidding or worst possible play loses nothing whatever a player from an institution for the feeble-minded would make as good scores as Elwell. In fact, a game played in such an institution should develop the highest scores of the year.

The game never can be of any account until plus and minus scores are used. If, for instance, the score at a particular table was 400 for one pair and 600 for the other, one pair should be minus 200 and the other plus 200.

As the game is commonly played, from a holding of king, queen, jack, ten of clubs and three worthless cards in each other suit a player could afford to bid seven clubs and would be forty-eight points ahead, even if he took but three tricks.

Auction bridge is a splendid game, but the progressive form not only does not develop good auction but would ruin the game of a really good player. Duplicate auction is far better and is making rapid headway.

West secure nine tricks.

North would better have allowed west to play three clubs, as the chance for game vanished when south refused to support the heart bid.

West took a long chance in bidding three no trumps, but the reward was game and rubber if he succeeded.

North was in constant trouble after the first trick, but west only won by counting the hands perfectly and managing the diamond suit with great ability. North could not gain either by discarding the king of diamonds or by returning the diamonds at trick seven.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—I enjoyed the Sunday bridge problem, but I couldn't understand why west should lead the jack of spades when he opened the trump suit in the third trick. Possibly it was because he thought north held the queen and would play it to force the king, but if that was his reasoning why did he play the king from the dummy? You said that his play was perfect.

I did not understand why east doubled instead of bidding two clubs, until I read that some eastern authority favors doubling instead of the two club bid suggested by you. When is the next bridge convention held and where, please? W. T. S.

Ans.—The lead of the jack of spades is part of what is called a criss-cross finesse. It is designed to induce the queen to cover if it is held second hand, but if that player does not put up the queen, the leader places the queen on the other side and plays accordingly. Four honors are required to make this play. There are no bridge conventions. The next meeting of the American Whist league will be held in July, but I do not now know where.

Geneva, Ill.—[To the Editor.]—A bids no trump. Second hand passes. Holding eight, seven, and two small diamonds, two small clubs, two small spades, and king, queen, jack, ten, and nine of hearts, what should B do? H. P. W.

Ans.—B should bid two hearts.

LOCAL CUEISTS TO PLAY DETROIT IN BIG CONTEST

Intercity Balk Line Match of 3,000 Points to Start at Mussey's Nov. 20.

With the Moore-Heal match for the world's three cushion championship out of the way, local billiard fans are looking forward to the big balk line match between Detroit and Chicago, which will start Nov. 20 at Mussey's room. It will be the biggest match of its kind staged in many years, the teams being composed of professionals and amateurs. Fifteen hundred points will be played in each city, the team scoring the greatest number of points winning.

The opening contest will bring together Welker Cochran and Clarence Jackson of Detroit, who will play 400 points. The rest of the games will be at 300 points. Dr. Harley Parker will captain the Chicago side and the other players in addition to Cochran will be Fred Conklin, former amateur champion, Wilson Henderson, and R. I. McGinnis. Detroit will present Arthur Seymour, former Pacific coast champion, Charles Heddon, amateur champion of Michigan, Corwin Huston, and Irvin Huston.

Interest in three cushion billiards will be increased by the return of Alfredo De Oro into championship competition. He is the next challenger for the world's title which George Moore of New York acquired last week from Hugh Heal of Toledo. Moore, after winning the championship tournament at Chicago, defeated De Oro, his first challenger, 150 to 144, on May 19, 1915.

Since that time the emblem has been held by William Huey, De Oro, Charles Ellis, Charles McCourt, and Hugh Heal. Chicago players who have seen De Oro play recently in New York say the veteran Cuban is as good as ever and predict he will regain the title when he tackles George Moore.

Indoor League to Meet.

A meeting of the newly organized Chicago Indoor Baseball league will be held tomorrow evening at the Windsor-Clifton hotel. The league intends to hold Sunday afternoon games in the different sections of the city. There are several franchises still to be granted to high class clubs, and application should be made at tomorrow's meeting.

SCHURZ IN LEAD BY WIN IN FINAL SOCCER SERIES

Northwest Siders Blank Lane In 2-0 Clash, While H. P. and Englewood Draw.

Schurz took the lead in the opening round of the final series for the Chicago High School Soccer league by defeating Lane, 2 to 0, at Bricklayer's field yesterday. As Englewood defeated Hyde Park in the opening game, these teams each get one point.

The Schurz-Lane game was a snappier exhibition than the opener. Lane attacked at the start and only a fine stop by Nelson saved a goal from a kick by Kuhl. Rieger scored for Schurz after ten minutes of play with a fast grounder.

Both Play Fast Game.

The rest of the half was full of fast play, but neither side counted. Play continued even after change of ends and it was not until the last few minutes of play that Mason put the game on ice with a shot that Lipps had no chance to intercept.

Kuhl and Topper did good work for Lane, Mason and Dodge starring for Schurz. Lineup:

Englewood and Hyde Park played a scoreless tie, two extra periods of ten minutes failing to break the deadlock. Englewood attacked the south goal in the first period and had the benefit of a quartering breeze. After a few minutes Nelson sent the ball into the Hyde Park net, but was called off side. The attack on both teams was scattering, and neither goalkeeper had anything hard to handle.

In the second of the extra periods Michaels made a good stop of a shot by Mooney, but Englewood took the ball down the field and Wolfe saved from a close range shot by Welman giving a corner kick. Lineup:

NOTES OF THE GRIDIRON.

Cornell-Hamburgs, who meet North Ends of Evanston for the county semipro football championship on Thanksgiving, will get their first real test this afternoon at Schorling's ball park. Four players, including Half Back Le Roa, will not be able to start for the C.-H. team because of injuries. The Cornell A. C. will meet the Wallace A. C. in a City league contest at 1:30 o'clock. The feature scrap will start at 2:30 o'clock.

Igorrotes will play Chandler Speed Boys of Evanston at De Paul field this afternoon.

South Ends of Englewood will oppose the Opal A. A. at White Giants' park, Twenty-second and Rockwell streets, this afternoon. A young lady attired in a football suit, whose name is not made public, will start the game with a kickoff.

INQUISITIVE FANS

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—On the day that Gardner hit the first homer in the world's series one of the evening papers remarked on the unusual feat of a right hand batter making a homer over the Brooklyn right field wall. Will you please advise whether Gardner hit right handed that day?

V. L.

Gardner batted left handed when he hit the ball over the right field wall in Brooklyn. He did not bat right handed at any time during the world's series.

C. J. Clarke, Chicago.—Chicago's Cubs won eight games from the Philadelphia Nationals this year. The Phillies beat the Cubs in fourteen games.

Troyer Bros., Wolford, N. D.—No pitcher was officially charged with defeat or credited with a victory in the last world's series.

Tennant, Ia.—[To the Sporting Editor.]—In a game played here recently the pitcher used resin on his hands and on the ball. At the request of the opposing team the umpire directed the pitcher to stop said use of resin, which he did, and the game was played out, being won by the visiting team, whose pitcher has used wrongfully [we think] the resin. At the close of the game the home team protested the game on the ground above mentioned, but the umpire ruled the protest was invalid. Was his decision the correct one? Is section 4 of rule 14 the only rule that would apply to the use of foreign substances on baseballs?

PETE HOWARD.

Ans.—The umpire's decision was correct. If he had refused to order the pitcher not to use resin after his attention was called to it, the game could have been finished under protect. Or you could have protested the game at the time the use of resin was discovered. But by waiting until the game was over you lost the right to protest. The rule mentioned is the only one covering the point, and it is sufficient.

Ball Player, Chicago: The last time the White Sox were in the lead in the American league was on Aug. 9.

E. J. C., Chicago.—The percentage of victories in baseball is figured by dividing the number of games won by the number of games played. Your problem of 29 games won and 25 lost gives a percentage of .537 if you divide 29 by 54.

DISCOVERER OF STARS DIES.

Canal Dover, O., Nov. 11.—Samuel Dunlap, who claimed the honor of having given Hans Wagner and Cy Young their start in baseball years ago, is dead at his home here. He was aged 60. Dunlap organized a team in Canal Dover and the nearby town of New Philadelphia, and hired Wagner and Young to play for him. He paid them their first wages as ball players. They soon developed into fast players and went to the big leagues.

MAROON SQUAD BEATS MYSTICS IN COUNTRY RUN

Midway Harriers Win Race on South Side by 25-53 Score.

The University of Chicago cross country team defeated the Mystic A. C., 25 to 53, in a five mile run in Washington park yesterday afternoon. Sydney Hatch, the star Mystic runner, finished third, being beaten by Otis and Tenney, two Chicago sophomore runners.

George Otis footed the distance in 26:41, which was exceptionally fast time considering the cold weather and stiff wind. Tenney was fifteen yards behind for second and Hatch trailed fifty yards in the rear for third place. Jones of the Maroons put up a great sprint at the finish and came within a yard of nosing out Hatch.

Snyder and Powers of the university team were fifth and sixth, the remaining places which counted in the score, and came within a few yards of crowding Hatch out of the first six.

SWEDES TACKLE JOLIET IN SOCCER FEATURE TODAY

KARLICEK SAYS COME ON, BLOUIN, FOR $1,000 BET

Accepts Bowling Challenge for Money Match to Take Place in a Month.

Chicago's first $1,000 bowling match in over ten years was clinched yesterday when Ed Hovorka, acting as Tony Karlicek's backer, accepted Jimmy Blouin's defi for a contest for that amount. The match will not be rolled for a month, as Karlicek has overtrained since the season started and is stale.

Blouin always has been considered Chicago's greatest money bowler, but his claim received a severe jolt from Hovorka in accepting the match when the Windy City league president asserted that Blouin's victories in money matches have been exceedingly few. Hovorka defied a crowd of Blouin's partisans to name any man who had lost to the Blue Island player in a big money match and it took five minutes for one fan to dig up Billy Flenner's name as a victim.

Once Beat Jimmy Smith.

Blouin's reputation as a bowler is assured, however, as he has always had a standing challenge out to any man in the country. Even the great Jimmy Smith was offered one match at the finish of the A. B. C. tournament at the Dexter Park pavilion four years ago that he saw fit to reject. Blouin later defeated Smith in a big contest that went less than eight games, the local man piling up a 237 average.

Entries to the Chicago Bowling association's thirteenth annual tournament will close next Friday at midnight, and it now looks as if the total will exceed last year's big entry by a wide margin. Last year over $5,000 was paid out in cash prizes, and a gain of at least $1,000 is predicted by those in the official circle.

Windy City Teams Entered.

Secretary Jake Mueller, 29 West Randolph street, is receiving entries and doling out dates to the early entrants. One of the largest entries received so far was from the Windy City, which has taken two entire shifts on Wednesday, Dec. 15.

Plans are being laid to hold a big tournament for the commercial championship of Chicago, leagues like the Bankers, Jewelers, Western Electric, Peoples Gas, and similar organizations having been invited to send their leading team on Jan. 1 to the Star alleys for a three game meet. F. R. Stahl of the Star alleys is getting up the tournament.

The Triumph of The Liberty

THIS unusual car has astonished every motorist who has driven it. It has instantly set a new standard which makes every hour in a motor car less work to the driver and more comfort to the riders.

Come into our showroom. Drive the Liberty yourself. Watch every movement of the Liberty and then wake up to the fact that you can get more pleasure out of a motor car than you have ever known before.

To show you how its superiority of design will benefit you, read these unusual features of this truly remarkable car:

Does your car steer hard? Steer the Liberty. Does your clutch throw hard? Try the Liberty clutch. Does your car ride hard in the back seat? Try the Liberty over the cobbles and the ruts. If you can't stop your car quickly with a finger pressure, at high speed, try the Liberty emergency.

We leave it to you—for you know the faults in your car as well as we do. That is the reason for the Liberty—an easement—a freedom from your troubles and complaints. Come in and see the Liberty—a car you will be proud to own.

LIBERTY SIX·$1095

The Liberty Gear Shift—and Ease of Control

Imagine a gear shift so sensitive and smooth that it can be shifted silently, with the finger tips alone—even the shift from 3rd to 2nd—at 25 miles an hour—a steering gear that responds to the slightest pressure of your hand—so important in heavy traffic—so difficult with the ordinary car. This ease of control makes it the ideal woman's car.

The Liberty Clutch

The lightness and flexibility of the Liberty clutch are astounding. It is so light that it can be thrown by a finger pressure—so strong that it exerts a ton pressure. Its adoption means elimination of clutch-throwing fatigue to the Liberty driver—for he throws only TEN pounds, against the FORTY he has been accustomed to.

The Liberty Emergency Brake

It stops the car instantly—no matter what the emergency—no matter what the speed—with a finger pull of one inch—and without a jolt. No other car carries this life and accident insurance feature.

The Liberty Springs

Because of their unusual balance and adjustment—the rider in the Liberty does not have to slow down for cobbles, tracks, pocky roads, or ruts. No matter how rough the road, the rider will not leave the seat. The spring movement is undulating—a gentle rise and fall—without the slightest pound or shock.

The Versatile Car

The Liberty is quick, agile and responsive. It is beautiful in its long, low lines, and in its comfort. The deep, wide driver's seat is so cleverly planned that the 100-lb. woman drives as readily as the 200-lb. man, and either is comfortable. It performs steadily and smoothly. A whispering hum is the only sound you hear. It is a truly quiet car.

BY OTTO A. ENGEL.

Englewood and Crane Tech, finalists last year for the Chicago high school football title, will battle again for the premier honors as the result of their victories in the final preliminary matches staged yesterday. Englewood crushed Harrison Tech, 64 to 0, and Crane eliminated Lane as a contender by taking a 14 to 0 scrap.

Harrison, with its anticipated strength, failed to show at any time. Left Half Back Besta suffered a broken right leg early in the fray. That accident may have had a distressing effect upon his teammates, but under no conditions could the Englewood team of yesterday have been beaten by any eleven in these parts. And at that practically only old fashioned steam roller football was used. Three times the forward pass play was called and from two of these touchdowns were scored.

Darkness Curtails Game.

Just what the score might have been if the full time had been played will not be known. But for the seven minutes cut off the last half because of darkness, Coach Baradell was certain that the century mark would have been approached. There wasn't any particular star, for the teamwork was the main thing and it showed itself by the consistent manner in which Englewood reeled off touchdowns. Two were made in the first quarter, two in the second, three in the third, and two in the last.

R. [illegible] again demonstrated that he is without a doubt the best place kicker after touchdowns in the league. He booted eight of them, but lost the chance for a ninth when the punt out was [illegible]. Thus far he has missed only [illegible] after forty touchdowns. Lineup:

Austin, 27; Senn, 0.

Austin, playing consistently, upset Senn, 27 to 0, at De Paul field. Sweeney went over for the first score on a plunge in the first period and Elworthy counted on an end run in the third period. Scott added two more markers in the last session. Fryer of the victors wrenched the ligaments in his left ankle and probably will be a sideliner for the rest of the season. Lineup:

Schurz to File Protest.

Senn eliminated Schurz, 20 to 14, from the northern lightweight championship race at De Paul field, but Schurz will not give up without a struggle, as Coach Berger intends to file a protest, the first this season. According to the Schurz instructor, Senn did not make its yardage when near the goal in the third period, but before he had a chance to protest to the officials the sticks were moved. Schurz went over for scores in the first and third periods, leading twice. Senn scored in the second and twice in the last period. Lineup:

Bowen, 21; Phillips, 0.

Alert football won for Bowen over Wendell Phillips, 21 to 0, despite the fact that both teams were equal in ground gaining ability. Dowding plucked a fumble from the air in the first period for a touchdown and later intercepted a forward pass for another marker. Edgren returned a punt and raced ninety yards through the entire W. WILLIAMS OF NORTHWESTERN FORCED OUT OF BOUNDS IN SWEEPING END RUN

LOYOLA BEATEN BY LAKE FOREST IN 21-7 COMBAT

BY CLARENCE E. ELDRIDGE.

The championship aspirations which Loyola academy has been so carefully nurturing were rudely but effectually jolted into oblivion yesterday by the formidable Lake Forest academy eleven, which defeated Loyola, 21 to 7. The game not only allowed the Lake county preps to drive appreciably nearer to the academic championship of the middle west but it settled decisively the much mooted question of the relative merits of the two elevens.

More than 5,000 spectators, most of them rabid partisans, paid their way into Weeghman park to see the bitter fight which the intense feeling seemed to presage. What they saw not the prizefight they had expected, but a clean, hard fought, and brilliantly played football game. Except for about five minutes immediately after the initial kickoff and a similar period in the fourth quarter Seller's lads from Lake Forest had a clear advantage.

Fumble Costly to Loyola.

True it is, the Lake Forest lads were the beneficiaries of one of the early "breaks" of the game. The play came shortly after the opening of the game. With its drive fairly under way, however, Loyola fumbled, close to midfield. Porter of Lake Forest retrieved the ball and raced forty yards for a touchdown—and the game was over.

Lake Forest's second touchdown came in the second quarter, Scott succeeding in crashing through both the primary and secondary defense in an off tackle play, and toting the ball about thirty yards for a score. The ball in this instance had been advanced to within striking distance of the Loyola goal by one of the feature plays of the game, a long pass, Bergen to Jannotta. Bergen heaved the ball far over the center of the scrimmage line, and Jannotta, leaping into the air, snatched the pass from the hands of a bevy of Loyola athletes. The final Lake Forest score came in the third period, Rogers carrying the ball over from the fourteen yard line on a smash off tackle.

Forward Pass Big Factor.

A well executed forward pass, Hardy to Fouse, gave Loyola its scoring opportunity in the fourth quarter. The aerial play carried the ball from midfield to Lake Forest's six yard line, and immediately a five yard penalty for offside took the ball to the one yard line. Lake Forest repulsed the next attack, but on the succeeding play Lake Forest again was offside, and the ball was down only half a yard from the goal. From there Hardy smashed through for the final count of the game.

For Lake Forest, Scott, Jannotta, and Bergen starred, while Kullman, Fouse, and Plunkett played most brilliantly for the losers. The game, although fiercely contested, was remarkably clean, fewer than half a dozen penalties being inflicted in the entire contest. Lineup:

ROLLER HOCKEY PLAYERS MEET AT DREAMLAND TODAY

Chicago is to see its first roller hockey match in many years this afternoon when the Dreamland and Riverview teams clash in the Dreamland rink on the west side. The match will be started at 2:30 o'clock.

The teams will be composed of six players, instead of seven, and each will carry two substitutes. As has been previously announced, the game played will be a combination of hockey and polo, played on rollers, with the regulation covered polo goals, the players armed with sixteen ounce sticks. EVANSTON HIGH WINS OVER NEW TRIER, 28-0, AND CAPTURES TITLE

BY PREP.

Evanston High won its fifth consecutive Suburban league victory yesterday and incidentally clinched the championship honors beyond all doubt. New Trier was the victim by a 28 to 0 count at Northwestern field in a morning contest. Evanston took the jump in the opening quarter and never was seriously threatened after Hellstrom went over for the first of his three touchdowns. In all he scored twenty-two points for the winners, kicking goals after each marker. Montgomery made the other six points.

Evanston by its victory is in a position to make a bid for the county championship when it meets Englewood next Saturday. Englewood became a finalist for the Chicago league title yesterday, but must defeat Crane, last year's runnerup, before it can wear the title crown for the second time. Lineup:

Bloom scored in the last quarter, when Kraucsunas raced ninety yards for a touchdown, but the marker was nullified by an offside play. Drake featured for Proviso with two touchdowns.

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

NOV. 7.

I LEARNED something tonight from Mrs. Grant which I could not hardly beleive until she proved it to me. I got home from the office early and Mrs. Grant came in to my room while I was getting ready for dinner and we were chatting about this that and the other thing and I made the remark that I did not see how a girl could run after a man like Miss Walters ran after Mr. Cooley.

"She is through running after him," Mrs. Grant remarked. "They are engaged to be married."

At first I thought she was joking me and I told her so frankly, but she said that if I did not believe it I should look at the ring on Miss Walters's left hand. So at dinner I looked and sure enough she was wearing an engagement ring.

There can not be but only one explanation and that is that either Mr. Cooley felt sorry for the poor girl and proposed to her out of the kindness of his heart, either that or else I have misjudged him and he has not got the refinement and good taste that one would judge by looking at him and talking with him. But I can not beleive the latter as my woman's instinct which is so strong in me seldom leads me astray when it comes to judgeing characters. It seems a shame that a man like he should waste himself on a girl that has neither character or refinement or looks and I know he all ready must of regretted his bargain but is too much of a gentleman to go back on his bargain. But I must not interfere though I can not bear to think of how unhappy he will be when he realizes his mistake if he has not realized it all ready. And of course I would not think of "butting in" anyway as it would break the girl's heart and besides I am through with the opposite sex forever.

NOV. 8.

Tonight after dinner I strolled idly in to the living room with the intentions of playing some soft classical record that would be in harmony with my own feelings. Mr. Olson had not come home for dinner and the Arnold boys went right up to their room to change their collars as they were going out some where. Mr. and Mrs. Davis remained at table chatting with Mr. Cooley and Mrs. Grant and Miss Walters went up to her room I suppose to visit the paint box as she was badly in need of a little color poor girl. So for a moment I was alone in the living room but only for a moment for Mr. Cooley immediately left the supper table and came in there too and I could not help from beleiving it was because he knew he would find me alone.

He saw me looking over the records and remarked:

"Well what is it going to be. Some dance music?"

"I told you I did not feel like dancing these days, Mr. Cooley," was my reply.

"But I think you might relent," he said. "I would swear from looking at you that you are a wonderful dancer and there are not any too many of them."

For a moment I hesitated and then I saw that it was foolish to be stubborn when there was a chance of giving him a moment's enjoyment. So I consented to dance with him and he put on a one step record, "Don't Bite the hand that's feeding You."

Oh diary what a wonderful dancer he is and how beautifully we got on together. For several moments neither spoke. Then I saw that the silence was becoming awkward.

"Mr. Cooley," I said, "I hear that you are in line for congratulations."

"Yes, thank you," he replied and I thought I detected a shadow on his face.

"I hope you will be happy," I said.

"Thank you again," was his reply.

"I think I know," I began, but could go no farther as I saw each of us knew what was on the other's mind, so I stopped speaking and gave his hand a slight pressure to show him that I understood.

Before our dance was over, Miss Walters came in and it was really pitiful the expression that came on her face when she saw Mr. Cooley whirling me around the room in his arms. I did not want to torture her and feigning fatigue, I asked Mr. Cooley to stop.

"I guessed right," he said when we had sat down. "You are a regular Mrs. Castle."

"And you a Mr. Castle," I said without thinking, and then could of bitten my tongue off for making the remark which I did not think how it would sound. Miss Walters turned pale under her artificial mask and I am afraid the roses rushed to my cheeks hard as I tried to keep them back.

"I think," I said when I could command my voice, "that I would better retire and leave you two to yourselves." And I went to my room.

Oh diary how I wish things might of been different. But now it is too late and I must never allow it to happen that Mr. Cooley and I are alone together again.

BOXERS ENJOY DAYS OF SPORT IN AUSTRALIA

Many Humorous Situations Come Up for Americans in Antipodes.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Way, way over in Australia, where the boxing game is flourishing under the hand of Snowy Baker, the man who succeeded Hugh McIntosh as impresario, the American band of glove wielders is having an interesting time outside as well as in the ring.

Snowy Baker has stadiums in Sydney, Brisbane, and Melbourne, and, naturally, has many fans in all these places. One of his friends, who is a shopkeeper and a rabid boxing fan in Sydney, approached him with a tale of woe recently.

"What's the matter?" Baker inquired.

"Well," replied Baker, "the thief probably will return it before long, for it won't be of much use to him where he's going, for I understand it registered only 125 degrees."

Jimmy Clabby, the Hammond [Ind.] middleweight, wasn't in Australia long before he learned there was horse racing there, which meant that James just had to string the binoculars over his shoulders, hike to the races, and place a little bet to make it interesting. That was the start, and now Clabby is going so strong on the turf that he is a real horse owner and sports his own colors. The American scrapper purchased the nag a short time ago, but we haven't heard of any wonderful victories by the Clabby one horse stable.

Among other things that Snowy Baker does is get out a weekly booklet containing news of the boxers. In a recent issue he has something to say about the censoring of news due to the world war. If this censoring business goes much farther, says the booklet, we may expect to see reports in the sporting papers something like this:

"Last Saturday at the ——, Bill —— beat Fatty —— in a twenty round clash. The former is a native of —— and has gained repeated victories over —— at ——. In his last contest against —— he received a kick in the —— which resulted in his being carried to the —— hospital at ——."

One of the features of a boxing card recently at the stadium was a blindfold match. Two glove wielders appeared in the ring, were blindfolded, and answered the clang of the gong. If some of the promoters in this country pulled this stunt it might be a good thing, for we have a few scrappers in the "perfesh" who can't find their opponents even with their eyes wide open.

Of course we have funny things happen in our own rings in this country. For instance, at a recent show in Colorado the announcer, a gent with a large voice, actually had the nerve to emit this before a big crowd of fans:

"John Sweeney, the local undertaker, wishes to issue a challenge. He is willing to box anybody, and doesn't care what they weigh."

Johnny Coulon, former bantamweight champion of the world, recently made a tour of the coast states, contesting in half a dozen bouts. In the various cities they have different laws. For instance, in Los Angeles Johnny found that to box in the four round bouts it was necessary for him to swear before a judge that he was an amateur. So when it came his turn Coulon had made up his mind that he was going to take a chance on "being an amateur."

He was ordered to raise his right hand skyward, and as he did so he got a peek at the judge, who smiled a knowing look at him. Johnny saw the stuff was off and threw up the sponge right then and there, admitting that he was a "pro." "Do you know, I think I saw that judge at my contest with Kid Williams, and he was some ringside fan, too," Johnny commented.

BEATING IN ERTLE BOUT ALMOST FATAL TO BYRNE.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Mickey Byrne, a Cleveland bantam, is on his feet following a long fight with death late Friday and early Saturday morning. The terrific beating that Byrne took at the hands of Kewpie Ertle of St. Paul at the Cleveland Athletic club Fiday night so weakened him that he collapsed and two physicians worked over him for hours before they finally brought him to his senses. Byrne took what is known in ring parlance as a "knockout on his feet." He went through his eighth round by [illegible]. The fight was stopped in the ninth after Ertle had sent two wallops to the [illegible]. Byrne kept his feet and went to his dressing room with slight assistance.

CHICAGO AMATEURS IN BOUTS

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Detroit and Chicago amateur boxers divided honors at the Detroit Athletic club, representatives of each city winning three bouts. Detroiters scored two knockouts. Joe Murray of Chicago bumped Fred Merkle around for three rounds. Harry Mueller upheld the prestige of Chicago by trimming Jack [illegible] in the 115 pound class. Eddie [illegible] of Chicago won over Jack Barry at 125 pounds.

Sol Osborne of Detroit won the decision over Joe Evett, another 125 pounder. In the 135 pound bout Joe [illegible] of Detroit, knocked out Jimmy Holleran in the first round. Elmer De Planche, Detroit 145 pounder, also stopped [illegible] Bittke in one round. The middleweight bout went to Chicago by default. Harry Forbes had charge of the invading boxers.

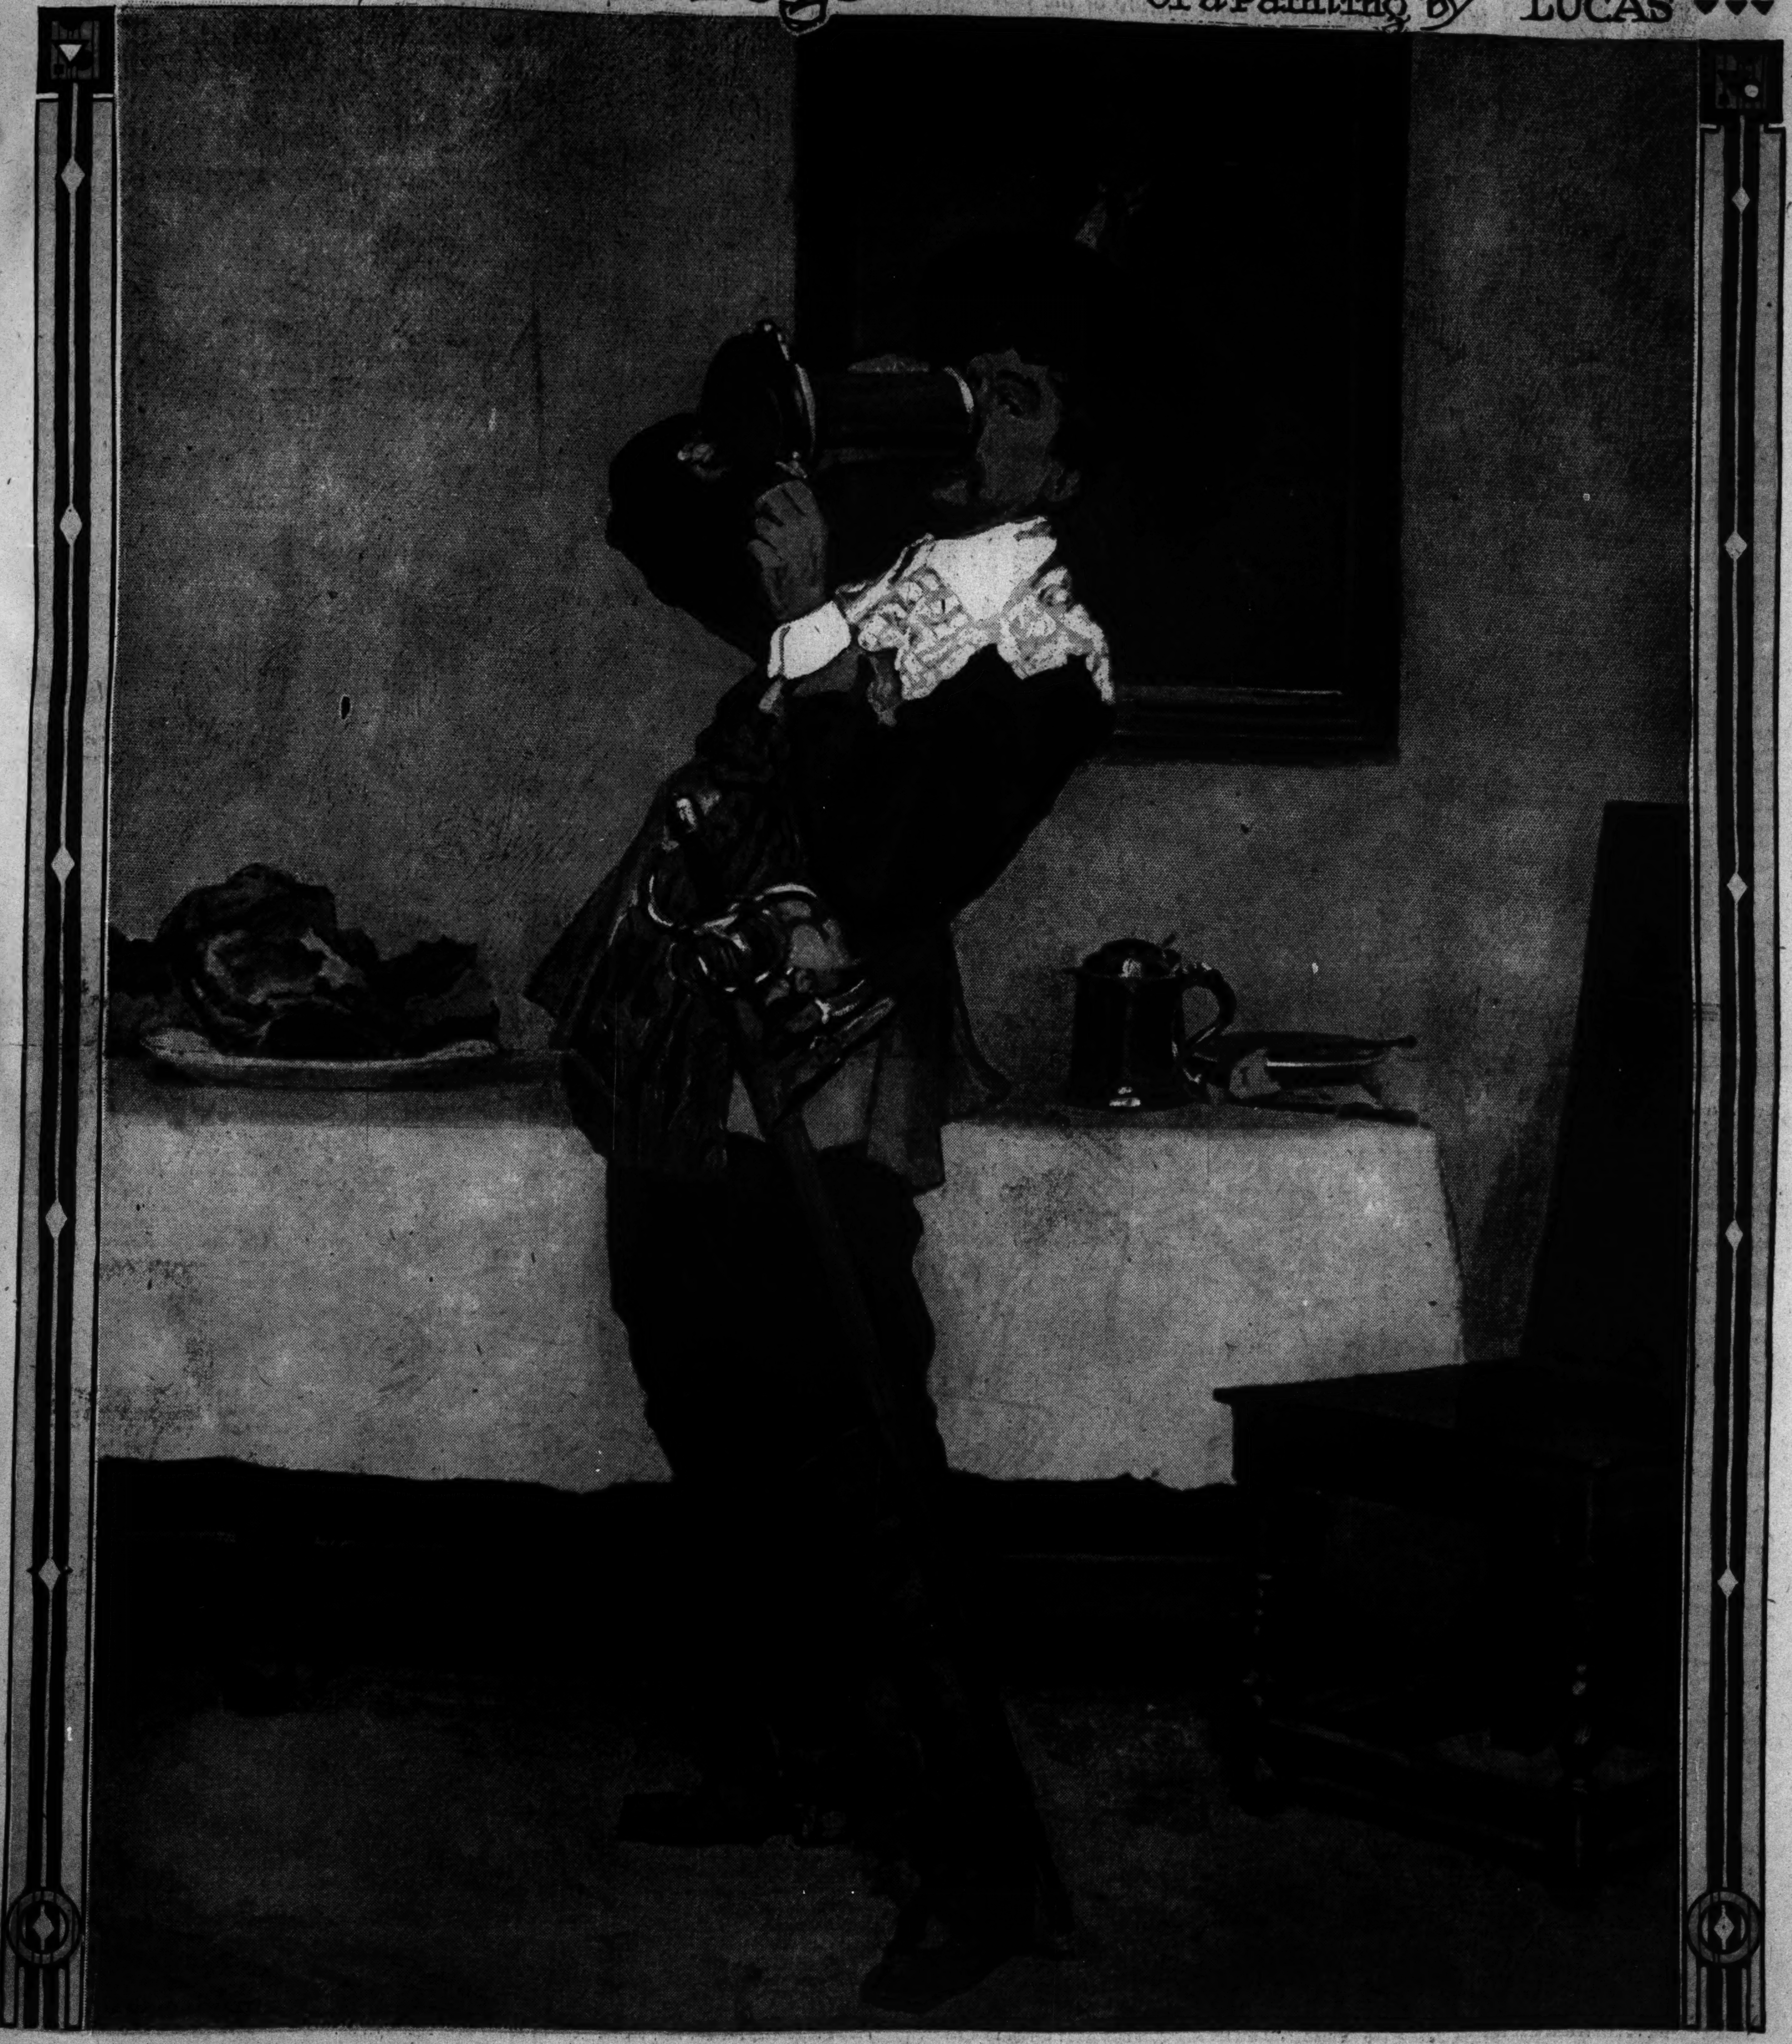
Down to the Dregs ▼ ▼ ▼ Reproduction of a Painting by J. SEYMOUR LUCAS ▼▼▼



"Down to the Dregs," from the picture by J. Seymore Lucas, R. A., in the Wolverhampton Art gallery. Size 18x22 inches. Presented to the corporation of Wolverhampton by Philip Horsman.

BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

THIS jaunty cavalier lived in London in the time of the Stuarts. From his ready sword at his side, his soft brimmed hat, his short doublet, and buff boots he may just have come in from one of the riots around the houses of parliament or he may be taking a long draft of ale before answering the call of the king to arms against the large masses of turbulent, angry people.

For it was in the middle of the seventeenth century that Charles the First of England and his royalist party fought out the fight with the common people which ended in the execution of poor Charles. And it was then that the word "cavalier" came into being. It was first hurled as a term of opprobrium against the royalists for the elaborate way in which they dressed themselves and for the fact that they were supposed to be guilty of much laxness in life and morals. The king's party promptly proceeded to adopt it as a term of honor and in retaliation applied the epithet "roundhead" to their opponents. When the restoration came the court party preserved the name and it survived until years later when the terms "Whig" and "Tory" came into existence.

Lucas' lifelong habit of historical accuracy is evident in the details of this painting. The cavalier's costume is absolutely accurate, nor is there any exaggeration in the way the man's soft locks are allowed to fall on his shoulders, nor the fashion in which he has draped his gay red scarf over his figure. The days he lives are for the most part days of lively excitement if not actual fighting, and there are none of the softer touches of a more composed life about the room. There is a suggestion of space and breadth to the place which Lucas frequently creates. The plain white walls are relieved only by a black framed picture, and the oak chair, half visible, completes the composition.

Throughout his career as an artist Lucas leaned decidedly to the historical type of painting. He enjoyed pictures of the past in which there was plenty of spirited action. He began his life as an apprentice to a wood carver, but he abandoned his career and prepared himself for the Royal academy. He exhibited his first picture there in 1872 and made his first hit there with "By Hook or Crook" in 1875. Another of his fine canvases is "Peter the Great at Deptford." He was elected associate in 1886 and academician in 1898.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

IN BLUE AND WHITE

by Berton Braley

She Wanted to See If He Was Falling In Love With a Picture—the Mental Picture of the Girl He Couldn't Have. And She Found Out.

EVANS had come to the city when he was 18, leaving behind him a lonesome little girl in a soft white dress and a blue sash, a little girl who was going to wait for Evans until he made good in the city and sent for her.

It took him much longer to make good than he imagined, for he discovered that what looked like a good job in a small town looked small by the big city standards. And he had begun acquiring big city standards early.

Yet he wrote faithfully and went back once or twice to visit, finding the girl still as sweet and patient as when he left. And each time he kissed her good-by and returned citywards secure in the belief that here was a maid worth waiting for. When he was 25 and earning $200 a month he decided to go back and get the girl in the white dress. He didn't get her, though, because she had married the village banker a month before he returned.

Evans went back to his job and wooed success instead of girls. Ten years brought him to $10,000 a year and a man's sized position in the world—and the girl in the white dress and blue sash had long ceased to trouble him, except as a sort of standard.

Despite the way she had failed him, he thought of her always as the type he would choose for a wife. Simple, sweet, ingenuous, unsophisticated.

"I like the city type all right," he used to say; "they're just as pure and straight as the country girls, but they're so sure of themselves, so keen, so alert, so secure in the world. They're irritatingly competent for any old situation. Good fellows, good companions—but a little too hard. The small town maiden is my ideal, but I don't want to go back to a small town to find her. Funny, isn't it? All my other standards are city standards, but on the woman proposition they're country standards."

Thus through the years he held always to a vision of a country girl in a white dress and a blue sash waiting for him at the door of a vine covered porch. Inasmuch as he hated suburbs and couldn't live in the country, it is strange that he had the vine covered porch idea, but somehow his mind's eye wouldn't visualize the girl with the background of a New York apartment. Nor did it occur to Evans how incongruous a girl in a soft white gown and a blue sash would be at dinner on the Astor roof—or would she? Perhaps she'd set a fashion, who knows?

And then one day he saw her—on Broadway, of all places! Not the girl back home, but the one she might have been ten years before. She was slim, and her color was the color of fresh roses, and her feet were clad in plain white shoes and her body in a soft white dress with a blue sash, while her head bore what, unmistakably, was a modified sun bonnet.

She was loitering along the busy city street in company with a bronzed, middle aged gentleman who was evidently a prosperous farmer, and the pair stopped and gazed in the windows as they sauntered, and frankly and with interest and delight tilted their heads back to look aloft at the towering skyscrapers.

Evans found his heart thumping as it had not thumped for years, and it took an added jump when the girl, turning suddenly, gazed level eyed at him, and he found that her eyes were blue like those of the girl who had married the banker.

As she turned again to her father, Evans felt as though the sunlight had been shut off, but it came on again in full flood an instant later when a man he knew joined the pair, exclaiming, "Why, how do you do, Mr. Stebbins—and Sallie! Just in for a glimpse of the wicked city?"

"Yes," responded Mr. Stebbins, with a bit of a country twang, "we farmers has ter look in on the big city now and then and stare at the buildin's. Specially when our daughter wants to come, don't we, Sallie?"

Sallie nodded, brightly, and at this juncture Evans' friend found himself greeted frantically by Evans, as though they hadn't seen each other for weeks. Introductions ensued.

"I hear you're just in from the country," Evans remarked, fatuously, and Sallie responded, "O, yes, we have to come down now and then to see what there is to see in the city. Sometimes I think we must seem awful rubes to those who stay in the city all the time. But father won't leave the farm for long."

"Nope," said Mr. Stebbins, with a queer twang, "us farmers has our cows and horses and chickens to look after."

"Been doing much sight seeing?" queried Evans.

"Not a bit," confessed the girl.

"Can't I show you around?" Evans offered. "I know the city mighty well—you see, I wasn't born here or I wouldn't know anything about it—and I think I'd be a good guide."

"O, goodie," said Miss Stebbins, "will you take us? Let's go on a seeing New York bus. The megaphone men are funny."

Evans' friend excused himself and went on. Evans gave up his day to taking Sallie—and father, but he was an incident—about his beloved city. He found them the most interested personally conducted party he had ever been with. They were keen for all the sights, they enthused over every view, they marveled at the bridges, the great buildings, the crammed streets of the east side, and when it grew dusk and the mighty skyscrapers began to twinkle out in their cascades of jeweled lights and Broadway began to flare and flash and flame in its night time iridescence, they paid the tribute of many ohs and ahs to what Evans thought—and what is—one of the most wonderful and inspiring sights in the world.

Evans took them to dinner, to the theater, and to a roof garden, and when the girl protested that she had nothing to wear and looked awful—he insisted that her white dress and blue sash were the most wonderfully beautiful combination in the world, and maintained she was a white rose in a garden of flaunting yellow chrysanthemums. And he danced with her on the roof garden and found that she danced perfectly, and he fell violently in love with her—with her simplicity and directness and the freshness and sweetness of her beauty.

Miss Stebbins, on her part, was not unsusceptible to the charm of this successful, cultured man of the world who piloted her father and herself about the city with such competence and aplomb. She liked his manner, his talk, his face, and his clothes. And she was quite crazy over his dancing and told him so.

There is no use dawdling over preliminaries, for Evans didn't. He took Stebbins and his daughter back to their hotel and made arrangements to call the next afternoon on Miss Stebbins and take her out in his car. Father was to be busy and could not come, but said he "reckoned" he could trust Evans with his little girl.

When Evans called he found Miss Stebbins dressed in a simply tailored little suit and a queer little motor cap that set off her face perfectly. She explained that this year the farm had been prosperous enough to afford them a car and she had made her father buy her a motor suit when they came in town. And she was mighty glad of it, because otherwise she would have had to wear one of her "country dresses," as she called them.

Evans found himself falling more and more in love with this girl with the country complexion, the big straightforward blue eyes, and the soft red mouth. The city seemed like a new world to her; she marveled at everything, at the parks and the avenue, at the crowds, at the everlasting stream of autos on the roads when they struck for the suburbs, and yet she talked a good deal of her garden at home and of the roses and hollyhocks and the wide porch vines. And before Evans realized what was happening to him he was babbling to her about the years of his work, and of the dream of the girl in the white dress and blue sash, and how Miss Stebbins fitted in it—and he proposed to her on the way home.

"But, Mr. Evans—well, Gene, if you like—this is only the second day I've seen you. You don't know me. I scarcely know you."

"Well, if you marry me we'll get better acquainted," he responded, with a whimsical twist to his mouth.

"Besides," she added, "I think you're in love with a creation of your mind. You're in love with a mythical girl with a blue sash and I happened to come along dressed that way and you said, 'This must be the girl.'"

"Perhaps I wouldn't have been so frantic to meet you," said Evans truthfully, "if I hadn't seen you dressed as you were, but since then I've forgotten almost how you were dressed. I could love you in an eskimo's costume, in a Worth gown, or a gingham dress. But"—he paused an instant—"if you do marry me I would like to have you wear blue and white a lot. Do you think you could stand the city, dear?"

"Father hates it," said the girl, "but I—well, from what I've seen of it, I love it."

"And you love me?" asked Evans.

"I—I don't quite know," said the girl. "It's really awfully sudden. I like you—but I must know you better. And, maybe, you won't like me after awhile. So you'll have to come out to see us soon, we're going home tonight, and then—then we'll decide."

And she wouldn't let him make love to her any more after that.

Evans viewed the rickety old buckboard sent to meet him with suspicion. Hadn't Sallie said something about a car? Then why hadn't they sent the car instead of this thing? The horse seemed a well fed and a well groomed beast, but the vehicle was bad. Nevertheless he mounted the seat with the driver and they started off. Soon they turned in at a huge stone gateway and followed the perfect drive for half a mile or so, then wheeled away from the big house looming up among the trees, and finally stopped at a smaller house—neat and well kept, but not impressive—some distance away. Out of this house came Sallie, in a gingham dress and apron, and her father, in overalls and smoking a corncob pipe.

"You'll have ter excuse us fer sendin' that there buckboard," twanged Sallie's father, "the car's bein' fixed and the other hosses and such rigs are bein' used. But ye're welcome just the same."

Sallie gave him a smile and a hand that was damp with dishwater.

"I've just been cleaning up from dinner," she said; "you see, we're not like city folks. We have dinner in the middle of the day. We'll have supper in about two hours. And after that I'll take you up to the big house. The lady up there wants to meet you ever since I've been telling her about you. You see, father sort of superintends this place for her."

During the afternoon Mr. Stebbins took Evans about the estate, which, he explained, was one of the finest in that part of the country. "I'm as proud of superintending it as if I owned it," he said. "Sometimes I forget and talk as if I did," he added, "like I did in town the other day. I reckon you city folks calls that fourflushin,'" he added.

Evans reassured Mr. Stebbins on that point. He patiently followed the farmer about the place, but he wasn't really much interested. He wanted to see and talk to Sally, and he was happy when at length they went back to the house for supper—a bully supper of fried potatoes and biscuits and dried beef in gravy, all of which Sallie proudly admitted she had cooked herself. After the meal Evans insisted upon following her out to the kitchen and helping with the dishes. And when she had tied the apron about him and he tied one about her—he attempted to kiss her.

"How dare you!" she exclaimed, "trying to kiss the cook!"

"But such a pretty cook," he contended, "and, besides, I love you!"

"Still?" she queried, "after a week?"

"After a week," he said. "So it wasn't just the moonlight that night in the car. Will you marry me?"

"Perhaps," she said, "but you don't really know me yet."

"I know you're the prettiest and sweetest and loveliest girl in the world, and that unless you fill my arms with dishes I'm liable to kiss you right off in spite of anybody."

She filled his arms with dishes.

"Seriously," she said, "I don't think you know me. And I won't answer you until you know more about me, that's all."

"Well, do you know about me?" he asked.

"Everything," she said. "I pumped Mr. Corthin thoroughly, and what I didn't get from him you told me. But you don't know anything about me—not a thing."

"I know enough to love you, anyhow," he responded, "and I don't need to know any more. You're the fulfillment of a dream, you——"

"That's just it," said the girl. "You're asking what you think is a dream to marry you, and I'm not a dream but a reality, and you may not care for the reality. Let's finish the dishes. I'm going to take you up to the big house, where you can meet the lady who owns it."

The lady who owned the big house was a beautiful lady indeed. Very tall, superb of bearing, with wonderful white hair and a gown that was the cunningest work of the costumer's art.

"This," said Sallie, hesitatingly, as she brought Evans into the drawing room, "this is Mr. Evans, the gentleman my father was telling you about." She seemed embarrassed, ill at ease in the presence of greatness. "If—if you'll excuse me, I'll go back home for a little while. I—I forgot something. I'll be back, Mr. Evans," she called as she disappeared.

Evans found he was just a little disappointed that Sallie wasn't more at ease with people of this impressive lady's type, for his own acquaintance included several, and it would be necessary for his wife to meet them. But he brushed the thought aside as disloyal—and anyhow, he argued, it would be easy enough to teach her confidence with her natural ability.

So he chatted affably enough with the grand lady for half an hour and then, at the sound of Sallie's voice, turned to greet her and her father—Sallie in an indescribable toilet of soft silken clouds and her father in faultless evening dress. Evans' mouth was wide open and his eyes stared.

Mrs. Stebbins smiled broadly.

"My husband and daughter," she said.

Evans stammered something, grew very red, then threw his head back and cried: "The joke is on me," and went to take the new Sallie and her father by the hand.

"But just why——" began Evans.

"We'll let Sallie tell you that," said Mr. Stebbins, with no trace of the farmer's twang, "it's her plan."

And the husband and wife walked out.

"Well," demanded Evans as Sallie came a little closer. She was very beautiful in these clothes, more beautiful than in soft white with a blue sash. "Why?" he repeated, "why?"

She looked up at him out of the direct blue eyes, a little subtler and not quite so ingenuous now.

"Do you love me, Mr. Man?" she asked.

He looked deep into her eyes and his heart pounded wildly. The perfume of her came to him fragrantly, her mouth was redder and softer than ever before. He suddenly took her in his arms and kissed that mouth, and she answered his kiss as warmly and gladly as he gave it.

"So that's all right," she said—after a while.

"Why all the play acting?" he recurred to his former question.

"I just wanted to see," she said, "if you were in love with a memory, a dream, a blue sash, and a white dress—or a girl. When we first met I saw you took us for regular country people, and I took a great joy in playing the part. Father did, too. He is awfully fond of talking like a 'hey rube' character anyway. And it is true that he loves the country and hates the city and that's why we live on this estate. And father really is a regular farmer, because he runs this place and makes it pay. Besides, I never had been around the places you took us.

"So that was the reason at first—and then, then I was in love with you just as soon as you were in love with me, but I wanted to find out, as I said, whether it was me you loved or a picture in your mind I happened to resemble. So I let you fall in love with the picture, and father helped me carry it out, even to taking the superintendent's house for a day—and then I planned this surprise. And—that's all. I'm not ingenuous and unsophisticated, and I have a country complexion because I play tennis and swim, and that soft dress and blue sash are the latest from a Fifth avenue modiste and cost $100. Do you still love me?"

"One question before I answer that," interposed Evans, "was that supper really your cooking?"

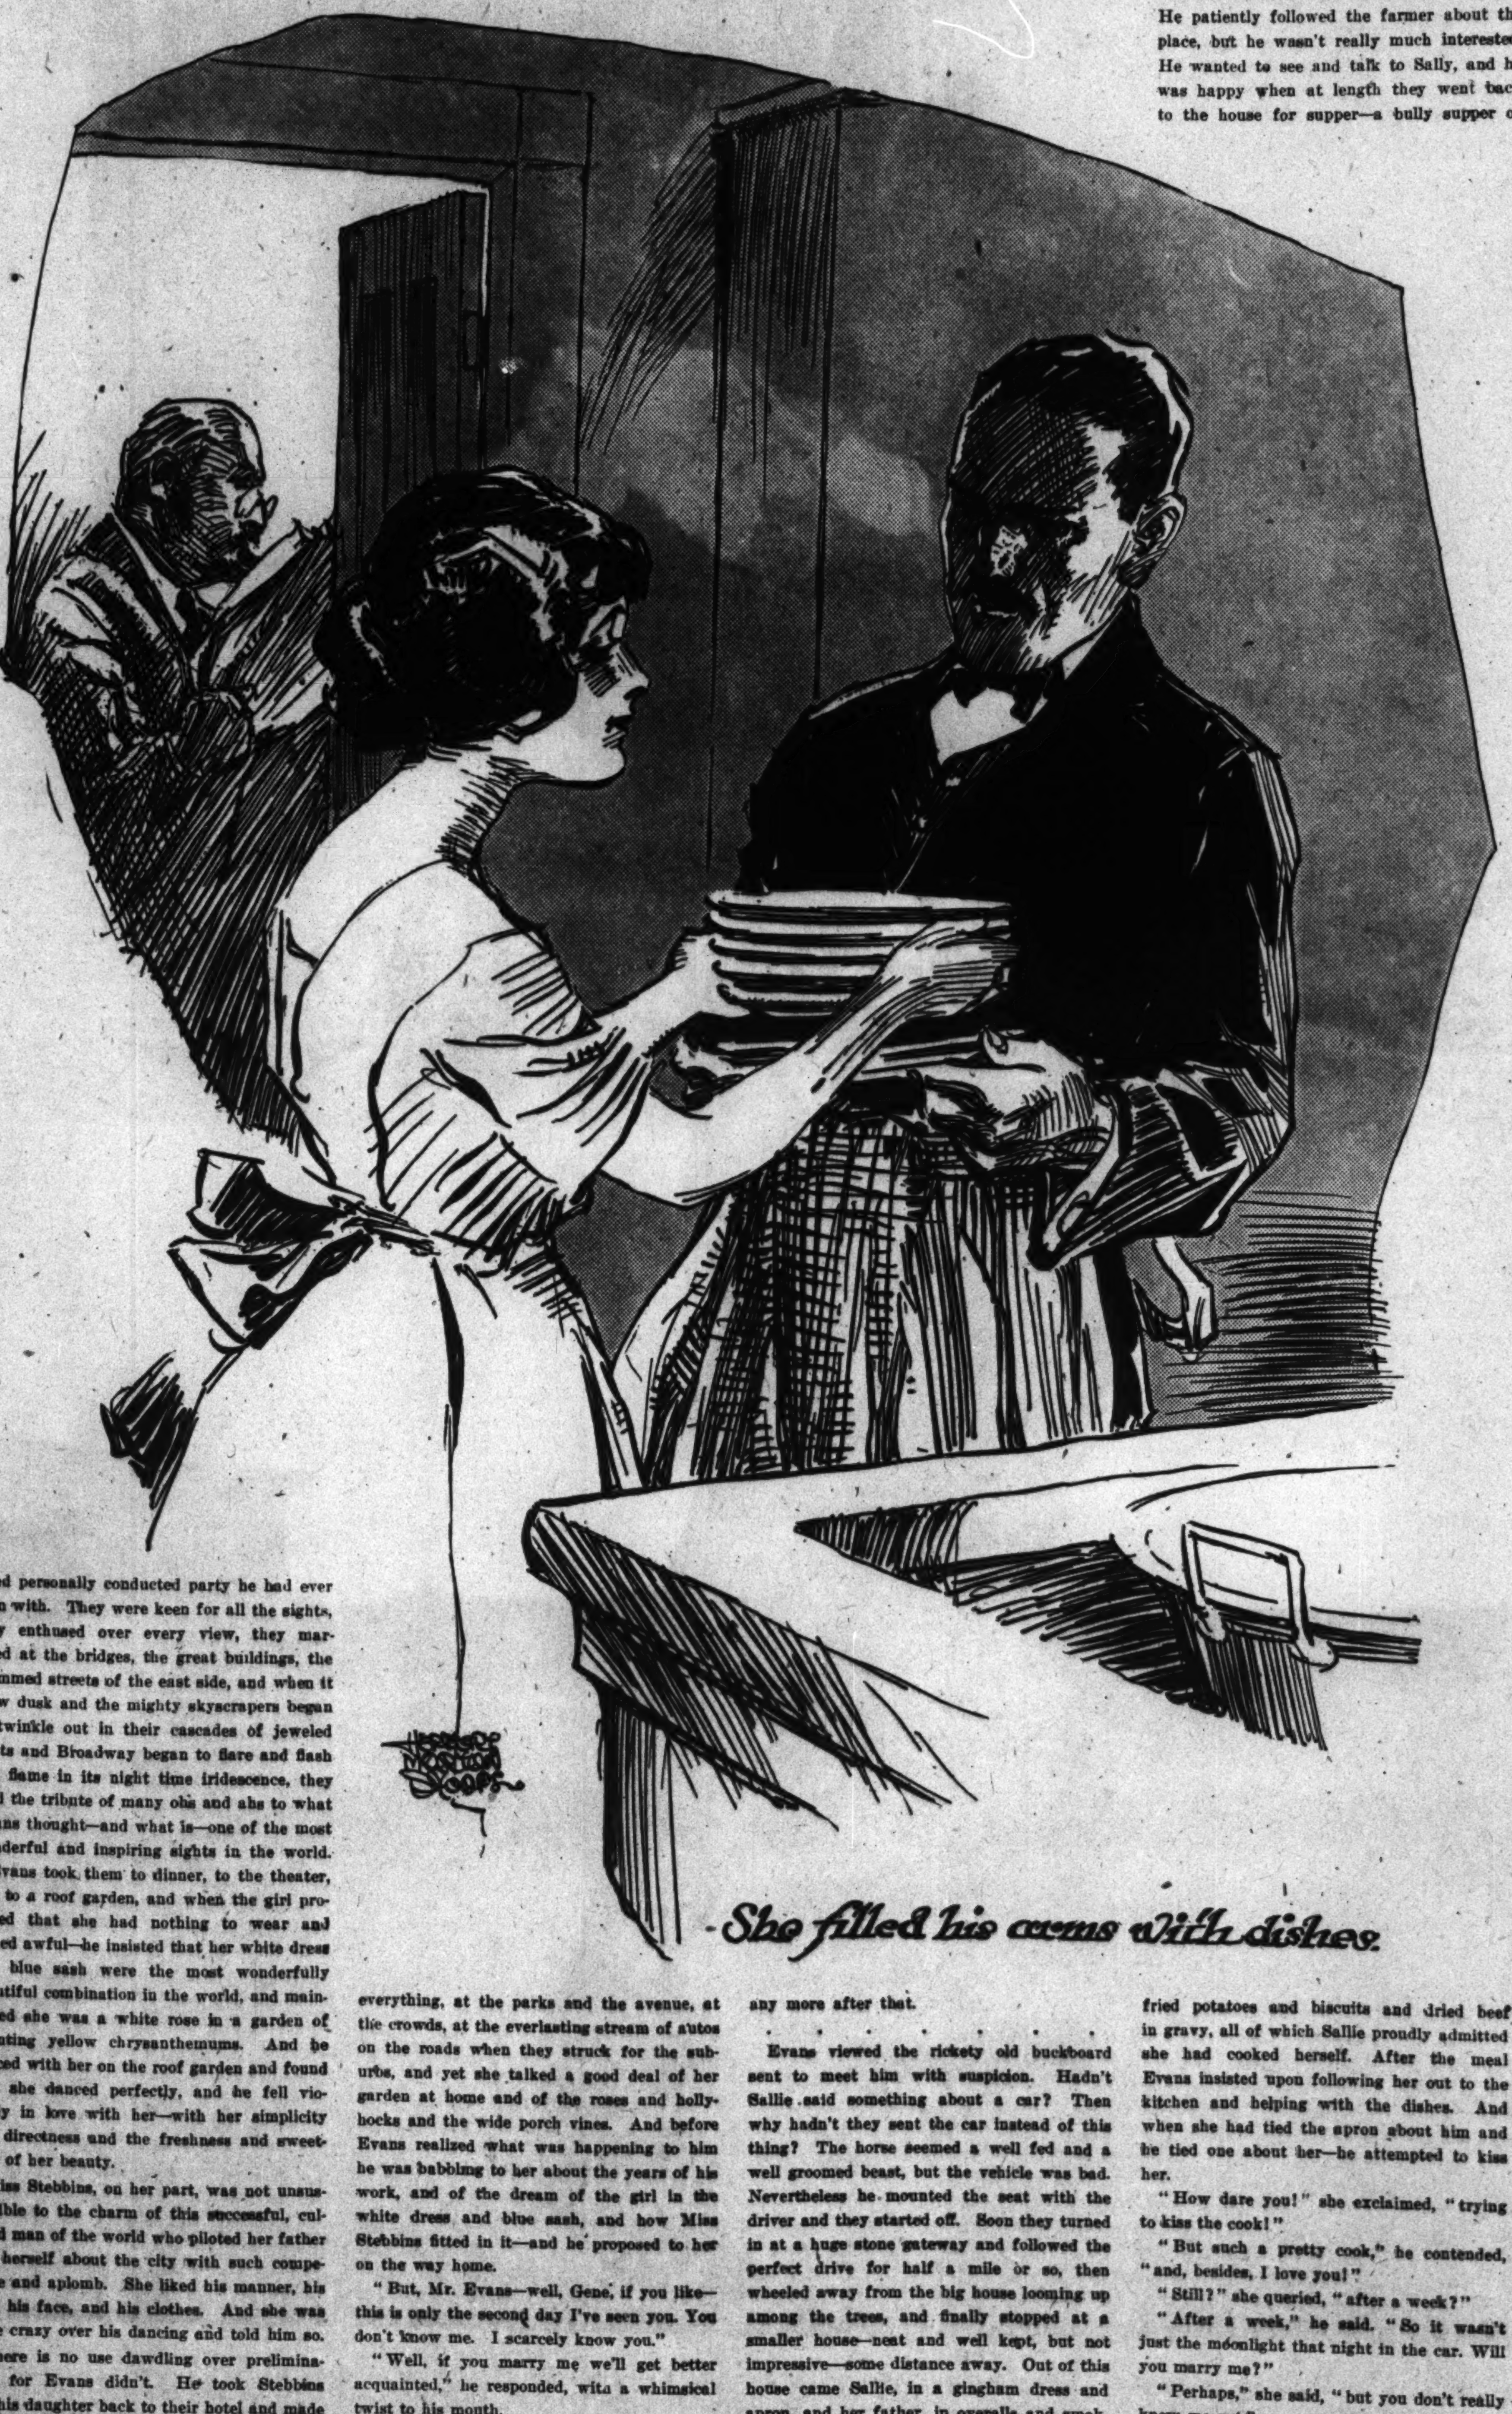
"Absolutely," she answered, "and I can do better than that."

"Then," he said, "I do love you. So long as that wasn't pretend."

"And if I weren't able to cook like that?"

"Why," he said, "if you weren't able to cook like that—if you weren't—if that, too, had been pretense, I think—I think—in fact, I am certain that I'd been able to hire a cook. I have a very good one now whom you can keep when we're married, if you like."

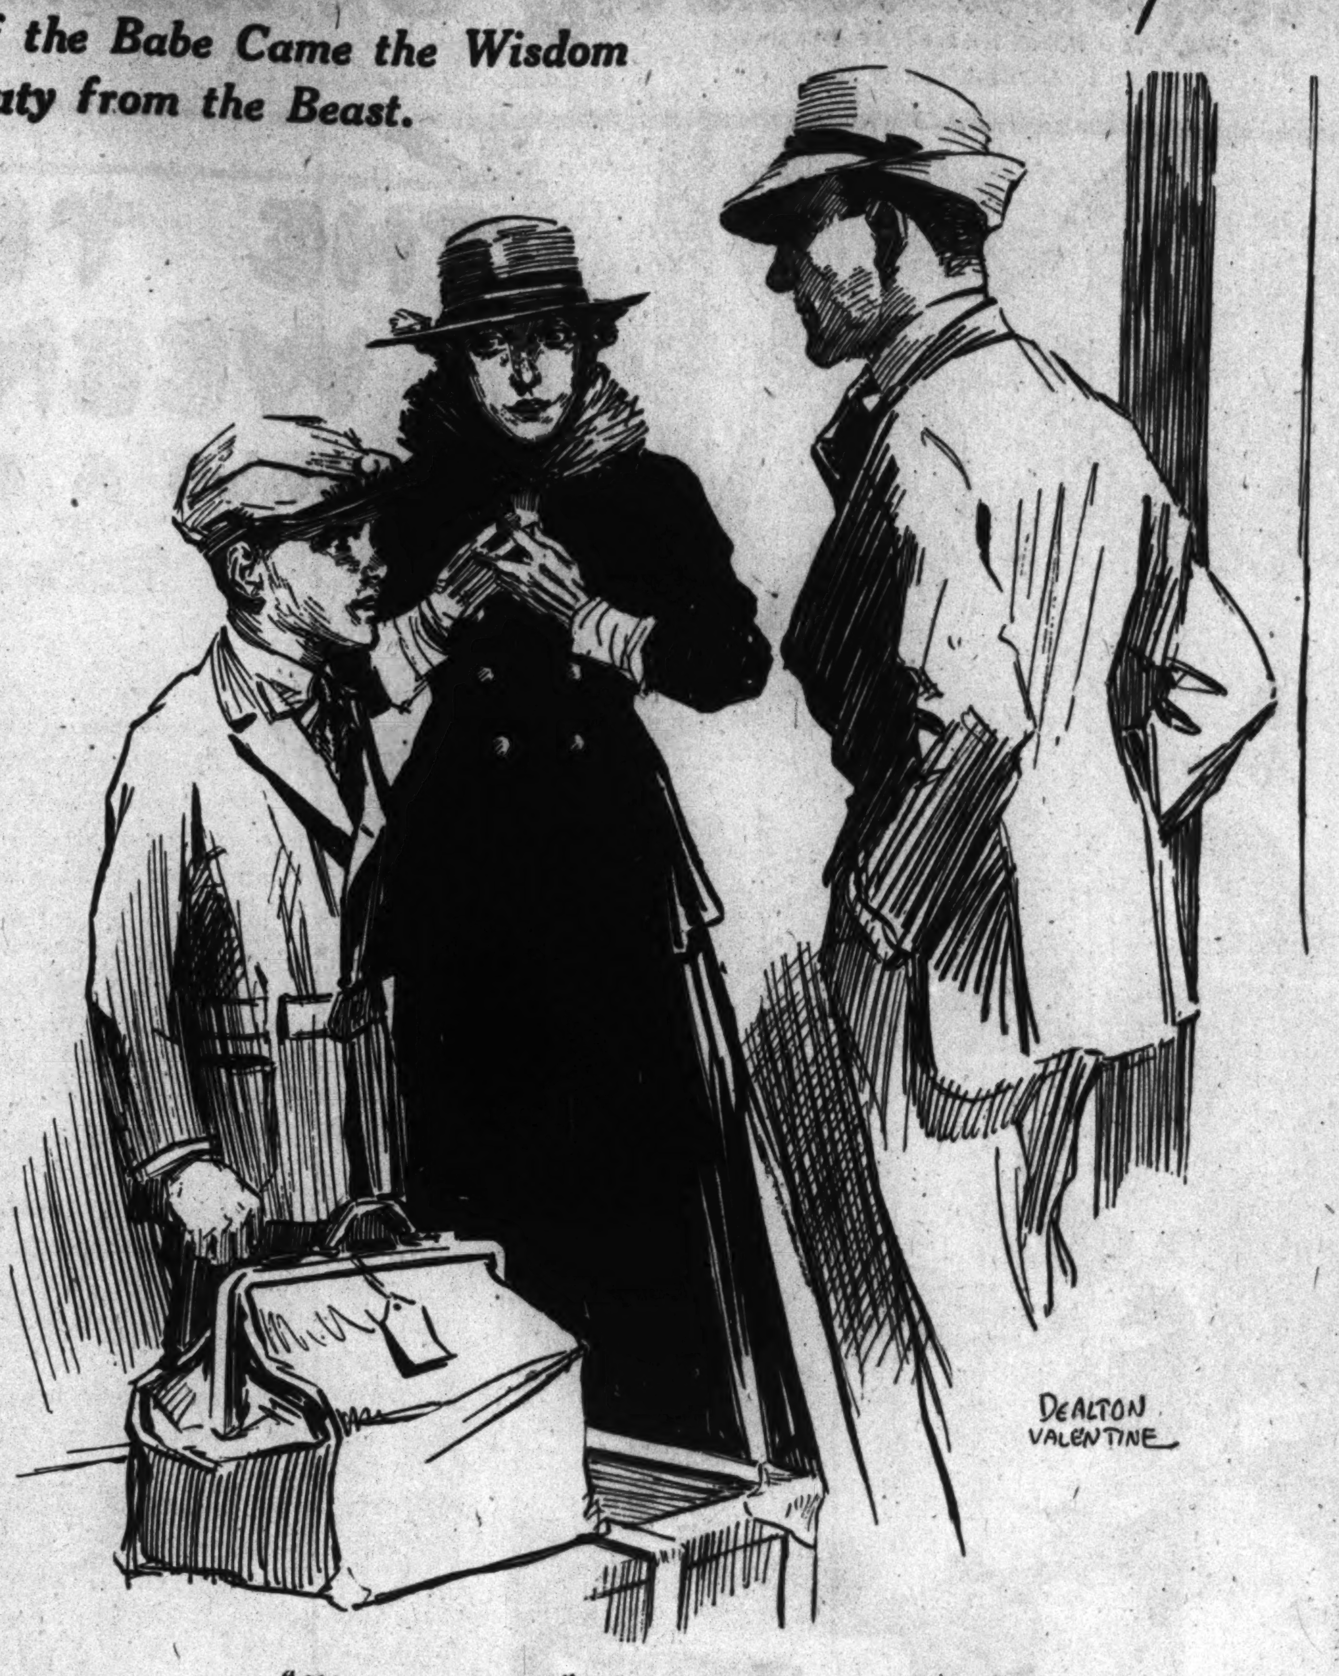
"And now, my dear," he kissed her, "won't you please go upstairs and put on that white dress with the blue sash, just for me? Then I'll know I have the dream—and the girl, too."



-She filled his arms with dishes.

HIS PERFECT VISION by Edith J. Hulbert

Out of the Mouth of the Babe Came the Wisdom That Saved the Beauty from the Beast.



"How dare you?" I began, doubling up my fist.

WERE it not for their biographers, great men would frequently be misjudged, but not so often as beautiful women.

Ever since I've known her, I've been aware that no one appreciated Mrs. Chamberlain; but it wasn't until yesterday afternoon, when the governor kept me in from hockey to wade through five chapters of Boswell's "Life of Johnson," just because old Davis had flunked me in eighteenth century lit, that I realized I had a sacred mission to perform.

It had fallen to my lot to write the life, or at least part of the life, of one who is a thousand times more misunderstood than that old stiff of a Dr. Johnson ever thought of being. But how in thunder shall I go about it? The "Rattlesnake Gulch Series" are all bully, but it doesn't seem as if the style is exactly suited to anything connected with Mrs. Chamberlain. Even the pen of a Marie Corelli could hardly hope to approach her.

Her hair waves—no, ripples I think is the word they use—making a stunning frame for her broad, low forehead, and starry eyes and tiny rosebud mouth. Her nose is like those on the plaster casts in the academy hall, and as for her complexion—just think of those white roses whose outside petals have a wee dab of pink where the sun has touched them, and you have a photograph of it!

Whew! Didn't I do up Joe Fuller the day he said "Powder and peroxide!" when she passed the academy at noon recess. He wasn't around again for three days, and when he did show up, he said I was a blithering idiot to think he meant it. I told him that what he meant had no bearing on the case—that I could not permit the name of any lady I respected to be mentioned at all in the midst of a vulgar crowd like the academy bunch.

You see, my Uncle Dick, who lives with us, is a clubman, and no end of a swell; and he rather fancies me; so I understand all about points of honor and how a gentleman should act when he's half seas over, and how he should always lie when the truth would embarrass a lady, and that sort of thing.

I was a little uncomfortable about the row with Joe, because, knowing the world as I do, I feared that if it got around, it would compromise Mrs. Chamberlain. When I told Uncle Dick about it, he looked at me seriously for a moment, and then said: "Let's see, Ted, you were 16 last April, weren't you? And Mrs. Chamberlain must be"—and he stopped and looked at me again.

"She doesn't look it, but she must be 25," I said; "she couldn't know so much and have such a ripping manner much before that."

Well, Uncle Dick simply yelled—why, I don't know. But my face got as hot as blazes and my eyes felt queer, and my shoulders went back the way they make you fix them in the gym. All of a sudden he sobered down and grabbed my hand.

"Beg pardon for interrupting you, Ted, old man," he said (he and Mrs. Chamberlain are the only ones who seem to realize that I am no longer a boy), "something screamingly funny just happened to strike me. I think you are right about Mrs. Chamberlain's age. She must be all of 25—nine years ahead of you, so your little passage of arms won't jeopardize her reputation. A plucky little knight-errant like you is not to be disdained by any fair lady."

What a pity that knight-errants are now numbered among the has-beens! It would be such a cinch to go around fighting for her, instead of trying to explain things on paper. The best argument in the world, I believe, is a knockdown argument.

But, alas, the path of duty seldom leads us in the direction we wish to go! If it did, we wouldn't have to have such beastly mean things done to us to keep us walking there. The only person I know who never steps out is Mrs. Chamberlain.

"Ted," she said to me one day; "we should never ask ourselves what we wish to do, but what is right to do."

The Beast laughed, and drawled in that nasty way of his, "Such sentiments harmonize beautifully with that baby blue frock you are wearing, and I won't deny it's your most dangerous color. But for the love of heaven, compromise on pale pink tomorrow, and a corresponding pose."

Oh, I forgot I hadn't mentioned the Beast before. In fact, I haven't told anything I started out to tell, unless I have chanced to convey to the mind of the intelligent reader that Mrs. Chamberlain is an angel of beauty and goodness, doomed to exist in the midst of a bunch that are—well, different.

She is married to a slum old sawbones who neglects her shamefully, and is, besides, downright brutal to her. Uncle Dick says the doctor is a good fellow, and he doesn't often slip up on things, but don't I know?

Didn't he leave his wife all alone in the house with only one maid the night the Tompkins' baby had croup, just a week after there had been sneak thieves in our street? And didn't that fragile, sensitive woman have a nervous headache the whole of the next day in consequence?

They needn't talk to me about the doctor. And the Beast is his friend.

One could never go near the place without finding him planted either on the piazza or in the library. He always called the Doctor "Horace, old man," and several times he had the nerve to address Mrs. Chamberlain as "Alice" in my hearing. I say hearing, because it wasn't exactly in my presence, but always when I was just coming around the corner of the piazza where they used to sit. Every single time Mrs. Chamberlain would say: "Be careful," or "You forget yourself," or something of the sort, and look very much annoyed. Then the Beast would mumble something under his breath, and look at me as if he would like to murder me.

Poor Mrs. Chamberlain! She probably had to stand for his impertinence when the doctor was around, for she always looked especially glad to see me at times like this, and did her best to ignore the Beast. But he was too plagued dense to understand that she wanted to snub him.

It was really through him, though, that I got acquainted with the noblest and most beautiful woman that ever adorned this part of the country.

I was scorching along the river road one day, wondering how I could work the governor to let me go up to Canada after big game this fall, when all of a sudden—zip! a red streak came around the south bend, struck the back wheel of my brand new motorcycle with about eight hundred horse-power, knocked it so high that the pieces are still on the way down, and gave me a good lift in the direction of Kingdom Come.

It took me an hour to get back, and the first thing I saw was the loveliest pale face with the saddest big blue eyes; and the softest, sweetest voice said, "Thank God, he still lives. His blood is not on my hands."

Things straightened themselves and after a bit I found I was in the doctor's office, and that he had been setting my collar bone, which had been split in the mix-up.

I found out, too, how the accident happened. They left me alone for a few minutes, and I heard the doctor's voice in the next room saying in very decided tones: "I shall question Rogers very closely, and if I find that he was exceeding the speed limit or was careless in any way, I shall discharge him."

Then Mrs. Chamberlain said, "Rogers was not there, Horace; Mr. Delafield was driving the car, and he didn't exactly understand the brake."

Though it seems incredible, he actually laughed—a little short unpleasant laugh, and came into the office shrugging his shoulders.

The mater happened to be in Boston, so they insisted on my staying all night, and after I had been put to bed in a great big blue room, and the doctor had fussed over me a little, Mrs. Chamberlain came and sat by me till I got to sleep.

It was positively thrilling the way she described her feelings when she realized that the car was actually going to run me down.

I wanted to tell her that I was sorry for the fellows that she hadn't run over, but I was afraid she would laugh. How I misjudged her!

She explained to me once after I came to know her better that every true sentiment, no matter how it was expressed, touched a corresponding chord in her nature. The Beast wasn't there to sneer, so I expressed some of my ideas about her as well as I could, and she didn't laugh a bit, but smoothed my hair two or three times and said, "Oh, Teddy," as if she were going to cry.

The queerest part of the whole thing, though, is the way the doctor manages to pull the wool over people's eyes.

Sis, as I hinted before, was clean daffy over him from beginning, and lately she is more foolish than ever. Although she is only 18 and just out of school, the mater let her join a gang of women that call themselves "the Neighborhood club." Of all organizations in Rockdale this is the most deadly, because you can never tell where it is going to strike next.

Just as sure as you cut across the measly little grass plot in front of the Baptist church, or put a microscopic '07 on the statue of Lincoln that adorns Court House square, you are nabbed by a fussy female who describes herself as chirman of the village improvement committee of the Neighborhood club, and talks to as if you were a child stealer.

It seems she is on a committee for the suppression of something else, for she goes slumming at the north end. I hold with Uncle Dick that young girls should be sheltered from contact with the seamy side of life. However, it is not up to me.

Well, one day she struck the doctor warbling to little chap with hip disease, that she takes fudge to; and to hear her describe his vocal gymnastics, you would imagine that he made Caruso sound like a rusty file. I know he never sings at home, although Mrs. Chamberlain is passionately fond of music. Why, she was awfully affected once when the Beast sang "The Rosary," and he hasn't any voice at all.

She doesn't play or sing much herself because her throat is not strong, and it makes her nervous to sit at the piano for long at a time, but she paints magnificently.

She has a studio at the top of the house, all draped in brown and yellow, with no windows except a skylight. The floor is covered with stunning rugs.

Once he said, "You ought to like orchids best, Alice, because so many men lose their lives trying to get them." She laughed in that sweet way of hers, and said: "O, that doesn't count especially, because they do not get them for me, you know."

As usual, he sneered, and she asked me something about the football team, as if she hadn't noticed his rudeness.

He came over and stood looking down at her for at least a minute with the queerest expression you ever saw. Then he said, in a tone that was just as queer, "Sometimes I believe you hate me."

She blushed, and I could see that there was a struggle going on within her between truth and politeness. But at last truth triumphed and she looked him straight in the eyes and replied, fearlessly, "Sometimes I believe I do."

You are probably thinking, gentle reader, that here was where he took the grand sneak, to be seen no more around the premises, but you don't know the Beast. He burst out laughing, stuck an orchid in his buttonhole, and lighted a cigarette without asking permission. If he had more brains so that he could get up really clever plots, I should say that he resembled the villain in "Hunted Down."

It took a big bunch working overtime to put that chap out of business, but only one was needed to call the Beast's bluff. Modesty forbids me to mention his name, but this is how it happened.

I had been over at the Chamberlains Friday night getting help with my French exercises, and I heard the doctor say that he was going to take the noon train to New York the next day, so as to catch the fast express to Chicago, and that he would take his grip with him when he went on his morning rounds, and to please have one of the maids pack it for him. Then he said that his address would be the usual one, and to order his breakfast at 7.

After that he stood in the doorway awhile looking at her in rather an expectant way. Perhaps he thought she would resent his going off so suddenly and leaving her all alone. But, however intense her emotions were, she repressed them in a masterly manner, and just said "Good-by," and went on with the French, so at last the doctor shook hands with me and went out.

The next day being Saturday, there was no school, so I wandered over there after lunch to see if I could do anything for her. She was out, so I went on my wheel over to the north end to carry a bundle to an old woman that sis has been treating to what they call the "friendly visiting act."

As soon as I struck the quarter I knew that something had happened.

There were little bunches of people all over the place jabbering away to beat the band, and some of the women were crying and waving their arms. The fellows that were coming out of Dig's saloon all looked as if they hadn't had the price of a beer, and he wouldn't chalk it up to them. I knew that a simple thing like a street fight or a man's knocking his wife a bit, wouldn't make this crowd turn a hair; so I stopped and listened. Of course it takes forever to make head or tail out of what that kind are saying, but I finally gathered that there had been a fire in one of those tumble-down shanties on Blinker's alley, where about five families live in each room. The house could be spared all right, and no one had been killed, but it seems that the doctor had turned up just in time to do the child-saving stunt, and had managed to get himself smashed up in the scrimmage. As near as I could make out, a balcony had fallen from under him, and when they separated him from the wreck he was unconscious, and no one could tell where he was hurt or how much.

The volunteer firemen had fixed up some sort of a stretcher and taken him home. If I hadn't gone around by Sycamore hill to give Syd Ryder a message from the football coach, I would have run plumb into them.

Naturally my first thought was for her. Where was she? Would she get home before he did? How would she bear it? Had some idiot already blurted it out without any warning, and given her a shock from which her sensitive nature would perhaps never recover, or was there a chance to have her told properly?

I broke away from the crowd as soon as I could, and took the short cut at top speed. They had taken the doctor the long way because it was smoother.

As I came in sight of the railway station who should I see, stalking up and down the platform with his hands in his pockets, but the Beast. I hated to stop, but it seemed mean not to let him know, so as I came up to him I slid off the bicycle.

"Mr. Delafield," I said, "you'd better get up to the Chamberlains as fast as you can. The doctor has been badly hurt. And, say, have you seen Mrs. Chamberlain this afternoon? She wasn't home when I came by an hour ago."

Before he had a chance to answer Mrs. Chamberlain herself came out of the waiting-room. When she saw me she flushed a little and looked rather nervous. I imagine she thought the Beast and I were having a row. We had come mighty near it more than once.

Quick as a shot he said, "Go inside, Alice, it is too windy for you out here." And she went without a word.

"You tell her," I whispered, "while I call a cab."

I sprinted down to the stand, got a good man, and was back inside of three minutes. The Beast was still walking up and down the platform.

"Where is she?" I asked. "How did she take it? Why did you leave her alone?"

"If you mean Mrs. Chamberlain," he drawled, "she is all right, and I will look after her. Run along, Ted, and do whatever you have to do."

His rudeness did not impress me much, for I was used to it, but I was a little puzzled for a moment. Then I thought I saw it all. He hadn't told her, and was not going to until she was in the carriage, and he thought he would do it better with me out of the way. I didn't agree with him, but I was willing to let it go at that, and started for my wheel.

Just as I caught the handle-bars, I happened to glance at the station clock. It was eight minutes of 2. In four minutes the New York flyer would come. Mrs. Chamberlain evidently intended going to town, and she wasn't the sort of woman to let herself be bundled into a cab under such circumstances without knowing the reason why. I dropped the wheel, and went straight up to the Beast.

"See here," I said. "This won't do! That down train is due in about two minutes, and unless things are explained a bit before then, Mrs. Chamberlain will be off on it."

"Well?" said the Beast, cooly favoring me with one of those long winkless stares that he thinks so fetching.

I was petrified for a second or two, then I broke away and rushed into the waiting-room. Mrs. Chamberlain was sitting close to the door on the farther side nearest the track. On the seat beside her was a swell morocco traveling bag, and I saw on a truck they were wheeling out of the baggage-room a trunk marked A. L. C. She must be going somewhere to visit. I walked straight up to her, and picked up the bag.

"You mustn't go to New York, Mrs. Chamberlain," I said, as gently as I could, so as not to startle her. "You must come home with me. I have a cab waiting."

"Why, what do you mean, Teddy?" she asked, suddenly turnig red and then white.

"Mean? He means nothing," said the Beast's voice close behind me. "It's one of his fool practical jokes—that's all."

"How dare you!" I began, turning around and doubling up my fist.

There might have been a real fight and a crowd, if it hadn't happened that just then the ticket-puncher yelled "Express for New York," and everybody in the station made a bee-line for the door—that is nearly everybody. There were three who didn't go. The Beast grabbed Mrs Chamberlain's arm, reached for the bag I had, and said, "Hurry, Alice!"

I held on to the bag, put my hand on her other arm, and whispered, "You don't understand, Mrs. Chamberlain. The doctor has been hurt in a fire. Let me take you home.

Just then the train whizzed in, and the Beast actually tried to pull her towards the door, but I kept my hand on her arm and stood stock still.

"Once for all," he said, in a low, hateful tone, "are you coming with me, or are you going to listen to that young idiot. You know perfectly well that the doctor went to Chicago on the noon train.

Poor Mrs. Chamberlain was as white as a sheet and trembling so she could hardly speak.

"Has anything really happened, Teddy?" she asked, so low that I could just hear her.

"There was a big fire at the north end, and the doctor didn't go to Chicago, because he was in it." I hesitated a second, and then blurted out, "He was nearly killed." It was brutal, I know, but I was so rattled by that time that I didn't know how else to tell her.

She gave a little scream and dropped back on the seat almost fainting, just as the train puffed out of the station.

The Beast deliberately turned his back on her, and said "Damn!" under his breath, but I don't think she heard him.

"Perhaps it isn't so very bad after all," I said, helping her to rise. "Anyway let's go and see. You were going to Chicago to surprise him, weren't you? Think how dreadful it would have been if I had missed you, and you had gone on and hadn't found him!"

"Dreadful, indeed!" said the Beast, and then, according to his regulation custom when decent people were specially serious, he laughed.

Mrs. Chamberlain gave him one long look of mingled sorrow and righteous indignation, and then took my arm.

"Take me home, Teddy," she said.

"Sorry to have missed the pleasure of escorting you to town," said the Beast, walking along with us. "I'll go on by the next train and send back your luggage."

I had to lift her into the cab, but with her usual sweetness she apologized to the Beast for giving him so much trouble. She held out her hand, but he didn't seem to see it.

"Good-bye," he said, "I don't believe you'll need me any more," and he shut the door, lifted his hat in his usual Johnny fashion, and walked away.

When we were fairly off, Mrs. Chamberlain's wonderful self-control gave way, and she cried so hard that I was scared out of my wits. She said all sorts of queer things, too, that I couldn't quite catch, about "retribution" and "kismet," and "revelations." I suppose the cleverest women talk tommyrot when they have hysterics.

That drive was the longest one I ever took. Yet I was so afraid that I might hear the worst, that I couldn't tell whether I was glad or sorry when at last it came to an end.

Before I was fairly on the ground though, Rogers came flying across the lawn, and I saw by the width of his grin that things couldn't be in such awful shape.

"It's all right, Mr. Chamberlain," I whispered, as I turned to help her out. But she didn't answer, and as she evidently wasn't able to walk, Rogers and I carried her up to the house.

"Only a matter of a couple of ribs and a bit of cut on the head," he said, as we laid her on the couch in the library. "Not the sign of a burn. He'll be as good as ever in a week or two. Don't be frightened, Mrs. Chamberlain."

She just moaned a little and didn't open her eyes. Rogers gave a short whistle and slid out of the room. I stood still and stared at her like a blockhead, and tried to rub her hands until Anne, the waitress, came in with wine, and cologne, and smelling salts, and other stuff.

Mrs. Chamberlain got up then very slowly—I could see it took all her strength—and held out her hand to me in that charming way she always does things.

"I shall never forget how good you have been to me, Teddy," she said.

Now, would you believe it? Instead of making a nice little speech about how glad I was to be of service to her and that sort of thing, I was so rattled that I just mumbled, "Oh, that's nothing; can't I take you to the doctor?"

He was on the big leather sofa in the office, and looked about the same as usual except for a bandage that came down over his forehead. When he saw Mrs. Chamberlain he smiled and held out his hand.

"Poor little girl!" he said, "you are quite pale. Forgive me for frightening you so."

Now, that was really quite decent of him, although not much more than was up to him under the circumstance, and I couldn't for the life of me understand why it should make Mrs. Chamberlain go all to pieces as it did. She actually screamed, "Oh, Horace! forgive you!"—as if she were in mortal agony, and dropped on her knees by the sofa and buried her face in the pillows.

The doctor looked scared at first, and then rattled. Then all of a sudden his eyes popped out as if he'd found a gold mine, and he lifted her head and stared at her as if he wanted to hypnotize her.

"Alice," he said, as if it hurt him to talk, "do you really care?"

I don't know what she said, for somehow I felt rather queer, and I took a sneak for home.

I struck Uncle Dick in the hall. He had been in town all day, and had just heard about the accident and was going over to ask if there was anything he could do. I told him he needn't bother, for the doctor was getting along swimmingly, and that I thought may be it was a good thing for him, since it had opened his eyes about his wife.

Uncle Dick looked as if you could knock him down with a feather.

"Good God! Ted!" he said. "Have you gone mad? It will kill him!"

"I guess you're the one that's gone mad," I said; "why will it kill him to realize what a magnificent woman she is?"

Uncle Dick grabbed me by the shoulders and gave me a shake.

"For the love of heaven, Ted," he said; "tell me what you mean."

I gave him the whole thing from the beginning and he never spoke a word till I finished, though he looked libraries. Then he shook hands with me, and told me solemnly that I had done well, and that he was proud of me, but that I must never mention the matter to a living soul—above all, not to the Chamberlains or to Mr. Delafield.

That idea didn't strike me at all, for I had planned to lay for the Beast, and thrash him at sight, and I didn't care who found it out. Certainly Mrs. Chamberlain wouldn't care after his disgusting conduct. Uncle Dick wouldn't give me any reason why not, either. He just got off something about its having to do with a technicality of the honor code, and that I would have to take it on faith, because another technicality prevented him from explaining it to me.

Of course when he put it like that, there was nothing for a gentleman to do but promise. So I did, but not gracefully. Then he made me wait while he wrote a note to Mrs. Chamberlain, and take it over.

I have been there every day since, but I have only seen her once, just for a minute. It was late yesterday afternoon, after I shook Boswell. She looked lovlier than ever, and said she was sorry to have missed me so often, but that the doctor couldn't bear her out of his sight.

The queerest part of the whole thing is that the Beast hasn't been in town since the day of the fire. I imagine it's because he is afraid I will knock him down for his confounded insolence to Mrs. Chamberlain and to me. Perhaps Uncle Dick knows.

THE TEENIE WEENIES

TACKLE A BIG JOB.

BY
WM. DONAHEY.

THE cellar under the Shoe house was quite too small to store the winter's supply of vegetables, so a great cave had to be built near by where the little folks could safely keep their winter's food.

"The cave has got to be a big one," said the Cook one evening as he and the General talked over the plans for the cellar

"Just how many vegetables have we to put in the cellar?" asked the General.

"Well," answered the Cook, "there's five potatoes, two turnips, three carrots—I only wanted to store away one carrot, but the Doctor says that carrots are a fine thing for the blood and that we ought to eat a lot of them, so I followed his advice, although I don't believe we'll eat one of them."

"That's right, that's right," said the General. "Carrots are a healthy food."

"Let me see where was I," continued the Cook. "O, yes, three carrots, one parsnip, and two apples."

"Don't you think that it's a mistake to put in two apples?" asked the General. "Last year we only had one apple and it spoiled before we could eat it."

"That was because we didn't know how to keep it properly," said the Cook. "But this year I've been trying a scheme that I think will work fine."

"What is it?" asked the General.

"Well, you see, when one cuts into an apple and the air strikes the juicy part it turns a reddish brown and begins to spoil, so that by the time we've had a half dozen meals from it, it is too far gone to be of any more use. Now, my scheme works this way. When I've cut off a hunk of the apple I'll have a thimble full of melted paraffin which I'll pour right on to the spot that has been cut, and this will keep the air out and preserve the apple."

"Me callie that muchie fine trick," cried the Chinaman, who had been listening to the conversation.

"O, you can't beat the Cook when it comes to doin' clever things," said the Dunce, who had visions of a slice of the juicy grape he had seen lying on the kitchen table.

For several weeks the Teenie Weenies worked hard at the new cellar, for it was a big job and the General wished to get the work done before the cold weather set in. The spot chosen for the cellar was in the side of a big hill, and the little workers slowly shoveled their way in, stopping every now and then to brace the sides with the heavy timbers which had been sawed for the purpose at the Teenie Weenie sawmill. As the Teenie Weenies dug into the hill the dirt was brought out in a car, much the way coal is brought from a mine, and dumped into a pile below, where it was leveled off by the Turk, who drove a mouse hitched to a big scraper. When the cave had been dug it was carefully lined with strong boards and the door at the entrance was so cleverly concealed that one could not have seen it no matter how closely they might have looked.

As the hill lay right back of the Shoe house, it was an easy matter to connect the cave with the Teenie Weenie house by a secret tunnel, so that no matter how hard it rained or how deep the snow should be, the Cook could get food without stepping outside.

BOUDOIR gowns are of great magnificence this season, for the woman of fashion has long since forsaken the simple things accepted by her grandmother in an age of less strenuous living. Today the robes d'interieur are so gorgeous in appearance that they rival the creations destined for dinner and other formal functions.

Various periods of dress have afforded inspiration for the evolution of these fascinating garments. Inspired by the Italian Renaissance are some of the liveliest models that, fitting rather snugly about the neck, fall from the shoulders in wonderful sweeping lines. Others reveal the acceptance of Indian ideas and their simplicity of style is cleverly offset by the primitive motifs, hand colored in rich strong colors, with which they are decorated.

The graceful Empire period has not been overlooked, and lovely negligees are fashioned on the lines made famous by the Empress Josephine. Comparatively little trimming is used on these exquisite creations, but when it is requisitioned, embroidery or plain bands of fur are chosen in preference to the lacy frills and billowy ruffles which the athletic woman heartily disdains.

Soft white lapin makes a pleasing trimming, while the lining, which comes into prominence when the woman who adorns herself with the gracious folds of the robe is seated, is of shimmering silver gauze. The sash, also of gauze, is weighted with silver embroidery and beads, to which a handsome fringe is attached. The cap that matches this origination is of white satin, enveloped in tulle, the headsize being adjusted by a band of silver ribbon with a row of silver beads that match the dangling strings at the side.

At the right is a gown modeled on medieval lines. The corselet bodice is of flesh color satin, from which the underskirt is also made. A deep pointed tunic subdues the shimmering tones of the satin and upon this graceful flesh colored drapery chiffon roses and rosebuds are embroidered in wool of matching shade. The sweeping train is also fashioned from the chiffon and weighted with embroidered flowers, while the pelerine collar is similarly adorned.

The chiffon mob cap is devoid of decoration, but at the center of the back a prim little bow is skillfully attached, and in sharp contrast with the small size of its loops are the long, gayly embroidered streamers.

Those who prefer the dress of the Turkish woman will appreciate the mode depicted in the center of the group. This interesting creation is of pale citron marquisette, the blouse-like overdress being lavishly embroidered with straw beads and gold threads which scintillate merrily beneath the lights that illumine the boudoir. Concealed beneath the overdress, but designed to be worn outside when so desired, is a girdle of green satin elaborated with embroidery in gold.

The headdress to accompany this robe is a charming creation. The citron marquisette from which it is evolved is drawn snugly about the head like a skull cap. At the back, however, it is finished with a deep scalloped frill, while the earlaps of generous size are richly ornamented with gold embroidery. Scattered about the crown are straw beads on whose satin surface gleam the soft tints of the opal. Two bands of beads encircle the head and their picturesque arrangement on the forehead recalls the dress of many an oriental woman.

Another simple but effective model in flesh color Georgette is straightly cut like the chemise dress. But an empire tendency is revealed in the high waist line, which is defined by a golden cord whose long tasseled ends are enlivened with gayly colored glass beads.

As fashion this season favors lines of unusual beauty, it is but natural that this tendency makes its appearance in all the realms of dress. The new collars reveal an austerity of style that is doubtless achieved by their being modeled along the lines of clerical dress. The monk's hood is used in many novel ways and has wandered so far from its original location on the cassock than in some dresses one finds the plaited tip extending down the front of the dress.

When its greatest length is towards the back one frequently discovers that a novel means of extension is achieved by a fan-like plaiting. Often cuffs are designed to match such collars, while the most varied materials are chosen for their fashioning. There are Georgettes, fine lawns, sheer organdies, and nets. While white always holds sway in the neckwear world, clever touches of color are sometimes introduced. Perhaps a spider's web may be wrought with thread of gold in one corner of the collar and wrought so finely that it does not in any way detract from the beauty of the shape. Or the younger girl may prefer a dash of bead embroidery in her collar of white flannel, while incrustations of spangles or pearl trimmings are not amiss on some of the smartest modes created for the women of fashion.

MEN AND WOMEN

In a will filed in New York the other day a rich grandmother left to her three granddaughters $10,000 each with the provision that they pass a cooking test, the conditions of which were made by the old lady before her death. Not often is woman promised remuneration so magnanimous for a knowledge of what it is the moral right of every member of the sex to posses. But it is a bequest to a cause that deserves many more like expressions of appreciation. For the good of humanity there is no greater force than that of a well cooked meal. Saloonkeepers time and again have acknowledged it their worst competitor. And when it comes to the question of equal rights for women any wife will admit that after a palatable, tasty meal her husband is easily convertible to her point of view on her right to that $25 hat or $75 gown which before the meal or after a badly cooked one he could neither see her right to nor need for.

Power of Good Cooking.

There is an old axiom to the effect that "he who talks of another's faults at the same time acknowledges a fault of his own." By the same process of deduction, are we not justified in believing that women who see shamelessness in a perfect piece of sculpture like that of Mr. Polasek's "The Sower," which stands at the entrance of the Art institute in Michigan avenue, or in an exquisitely molded figure of youth like that of "September Morn," are more in need of protection than the public whom they claim to be serving by their ridiculous protestations? Do they not acknowledge a mind besmudged with thoughts prurient and sordid? The protection of public morals presents an endless field of endeavor to our fair womankind—but cries of protest were more becoming the better sense of the female of the species if aimed at their own dress reform instead of that of September Morn's; if interpreted by example in absence from plays and movies that soil the soul and in a cessation from reading fiction that messes up the mind.

Some Misplaced Criticism.

"Beauty is nothing; it's brains that count with women as well as men nowadays," says Lina Cavalieri, one of the most beautiful of the grand opera beauties. Looking over the photographic roster of the songbirds of the Chicago grand opera one realizes that if beauty were the most valuable asset, competition would be far too keen to keep the salaries at their well known high figures for long. So there must be something else besides beauty and quality of voice. There must be the brains to use both. Without which the stellar rôles fall into other hands.

Brains That Count.

The same is true of woman in every field of endeavor today. A chorus girl may have brains in her toes, a pretty face, and a pleasing voice—minus the brains in her head, however, she keeps on working her toes and showing her pretty teeth in unison with thirty or forty others of her own mediocre capacity.

In the commercial field beauty is often not a desirable asset in the beginning. Most employers (and their wives) feel the mechanism of their establishments runs more smoothly without a pretty face to distract. But brains may surmount this difficulty, and how well they can do it is evidenced by the successful, good looking business woman who is common enough to be no longer a matter of comment.

Again, the brainless beauty may get from the male sex the attentions that mean a pleasant evening to him, but when it comes to offering her a half interest in his future a certain amount of gray material is necessary to cinch the title of Mrs.

The market value of today on female brains seems never to have reached a higher point from any angle or field you may view them than it has since the days when Rome ruled the world and women played a big part in the ruling.

To set tongues clacking busily let a widow or widower with grown and married children be seen at the window of a marriage license bureau. Everybody will be scandalized that he or she, as the case may be, is not willing to live in memories and to be resigned to reflecting on the pleasures of others.

The Second Marriage.

To a modern woman of perfect health, even though she be 50, the chimney corner and knitting have no more appeal than they had at 20. Any woman who has expressed herself and her individuality in her own home for years finds it intensely difficult to adjust herself to the cipherhood she can't escape feeling in the home of others, no matter if they are her own flesh and blood, nor how considerate the treatment.

Even more does a widower feel in the homes of his children that he is a fifth wheel, although his worst criticism of them might be that they were doing their duty toward him. But the friends of his children are not his friends. They are polite to him—impersonally polite to him. His friends are those met on the ground of mutual years and interests. This circle diminishes gradually through lack of freedom in entertaining them in a home other than his own offers.

When old age is thought of at all by a married man and woman it holds in prospect a beautiful, tender, congenial companionship which makes just that much more lonely the outlook after the bereavement which leaves a widow or widower.

It is a statistical fact that widowers remarry earliest who have been the happiest husbands. Instead of censuring the widower for what might seem a too rapid forgetfulness of his deceased wife his action might as easily be regarded as the highest form of flattery to the sex and to the deceased wife in particular.

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are Clear Headed.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

STILL of the genus Scorpio are you if your birthday falls during the week beginning today, and so you are apt to possess some of the peculiar traits of the animal after which this period is named. You love the ocean and like to bask in the sun on the side of a high and rocky cliff. If any one comes along to disturb your siesta, you are apt to be exceedingly "peeved," but instead of throwing out stings like your prototype, you make some cutting, biting remark.

One authority compares you Scorpio folk to our Puritan forefathers: "stern, forceful, liberty loving, dealing out severe justice, untempered by mercy, industrious yourself, and having no patience with those who are not, harsh in your criticism of others, but brooking neither criticism nor interference yourself." Fortunately this severity is tempered by a devoted love of home and a noble desire to be of help to mankind in general.

As a merchant you would probably succeed if you had a partner to look after the financial department, for, though you are a good buyer and have excellent ideas as to what will sell, yet it annoys you to have to keep track of money. So alone you are apt to meet with losses, usually because of misplaced confidence. Your traits just naturally lead you into political or public life, and people always feel confidence in your judgments, even though they be different from that of the majority. And you know how to keep your own counsel, so that no one can worm a secret from you, unless it be through the flattery route.

Your tribe is Simeon, meaning "He who bears or obeys"; your planets, the Asteriods and Mars. From the former you are endowed with great lung power, which gives added strength to the whole system; through Mars, patriotism, love of humanity, and the family. You possess in common with all the middle signs a great respect for the ideas and customs of the public and for persons of wealth and high position. With this trait comes a high regard for appearances and unusually good taste in dress.

As a surgeon or physician you will reach your greatest heights, for you have such skill with your hands, such magnetism in your presence, such cool, clear headed judgment, and such self-control that these qualities, coupled with the absolute confidence that you have in yourself, will make you almost phenomenally successful in this line.

In the ministry, too, these talents can be turned to the good of all concerned, only in this profession they take on a different color, so to speak. Here your quiet superiority of manner, your eloquence and tactfulness, and your fine command of language are what make you a success. It is perfectly natural for you to venerate book knowledge and to try to show how much you know along this line. If displayed in moderate degree, all these characteristics tend to make you a bright and interesting companion, so it is that you have many warm and devoted friends.

Sometimes the Scorpio women are apt to be "naggers," so watch out, for there's a strong vein of jealousy innate within you. And you women should also get over the idea that you must be perpetually the subject for flattery. It is true that most of you Scorpio people become so used to flattery that you succeed in deceiving yourselves and become indignant when told of your faults, a sure sign that the "shoe fits."

In spite of your naturally jealous disposition, your marriage relations are usually happy, because your partner excuses your foibles, knowing the genuine love in your heart. Vigro born, Aug. 24-Sept. 23, will probably prove most forgiving, but they will also mercilessly puncture the "bubbles of your pretense," yet in the kindliest way. Libra, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, may also prove congenial, as would Taurus, April 21-May 21, but your conjugal partner "par excellence" will probably be found in Cancer, June 23-July 22.

Besides the professions previously mentioned, you might also succeed as a lawyer, salesman, chemist, or musician. Your colors are scarlet, golden brown, and black; birth stone, topaz; most fortunate weeks, those beginning Feb. 19 and July 3, but be careful the week beginning April 13.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

Too Young for Love.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a sophomore in college and am 21. There is a young high school girl 16 years old that goes to the same church as I do and I like her very much. I have called on her several times at her home. I know she is too young to mention love to, but is there any harm in asking her to go out evenings with me? I am poor and am working my way through school. Her people are quite well off, but treat me kindly when I call.

"The girl acts like she is pleased when I come and I think perhaps she likes me a little.

"Of course, I am going to finish school before I think too seriously about her, but I would like to hear from you if there is any harm in asking her to go out evenings to good, clean places.

"BERT."

If her parents seem to have no objections to your calling and taking daughter out to entertainments now and then I see no reason why you shouldn't enjoy her company. Stick to your principles about keeping love out of the friendship now and don't go too often and upset your studies. I am sure that your love story will end, "And they lived happily ever afterward."

Don't Give Him a Knife.

"Dear Miss Blake: Kindly aid me in suggesting an appropriate Christmas gift for a man who has been my 'best friend' for two years. We are practically engaged, and he has always remembered me at all anniversaries. I am tired of giving him books. Do you think a pocket knife would be in good form.

B. E."

Don't give him a knife; I'm just old-fashioned and superstitious enough to suggest not giving anything with a "cutting" edge to one you love. Why not make the gift a billbook? Or as long as he is you "very best," you could give something even more personal like a silk dress muffler monogrammed, or cuff links or a desk set. And sakes alive, I almost forgot your picture mounted in a "booful" frame, if he hasn't been so honored as yet.

His Jealous Restrictions.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a boy of 16 and live in the city, but spend all my summers in a small country town I am in love with a girl of 17, who is beautiful. She says she is fond of me, but when I am gone she goes with all the other fellows, although she tells me she does not. What would you do about it?

N. K. B."

Foolish boy to expect an attractive young girl of 17 to sit with folded hands all alone, evening after evening, thinking only of you. I suppose that is what you do when you are home. If you start out in life being so ridiculously jealous, you will find that you are going to be deceived right along, because no girl will concede to such impossible restrictions as you seem to think you have a right to put upon her. When you are 21, and have found a girl who is willing to marry you, then you have the right, if you wish to enforce it, of restricting her company I hope your little country friend reads this answer because I think it will be good for both of you.

Now's the Time for Play.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16 and I dearly love a young man of 21. I met him at a basket picnic and I have liked him ever since.

"While out walking with him one evening we met a young girl friend of his, and I was told he had an appointment with her but went out with me. He has told me he does not care to keep company with her, and she is continually trying to meet him. His boy friends are trying to help her, because one of them wants to keep company with me. I don't care for him, and the other boy knows it.

"I think he cares a little for me, as he has often given me little 'hints.' He is dear to me, but I do not want to show my affection, and am so afraid that he does not understand me, as I am inclined to treat him cool at times.

"This young man is a perfect gentleman at all times, as he has lived in the neighborhood most of his life. Will you kindly inform me as to a way to treat him so that he will not think I am too forward or that I do not care for him.

"G. J."

Don't worry about his not understanding your feelings, because the very fact that you have accepted his attentions is sufficient proof that they are not objectionable to him. You are too young to be thinking about marriage, so just accept him in the light of a good friend and quit bothering your head about the other girl. Now is the time for you to be enjoying life in a carefree way; troubles will come soon enough.

Real Love Stories

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

WHILE taking my vacation in a little country town down in the state I was approached by a reporter on the village weekly paper begging me for an interview. He stated the townspeople were always interested in visitors, and especially when they came from Chicago.

Feeling a bit flattered by his courtesy, I thoughtlessly replied: "Well, go ahead; if you think there is anything about me that will be of any interest to your readers, fire away and see if I care."

He inquired first what my business was and I told him I was a police officer.

"Are you married? he asked.

"I am a widower with a child. My wife died a little over a year ago."

"Are you looking for another wife?"

"Well, I'm in no hurry, but when the right one comes along there might be something doing."

"Do you prefer the city girl or the country girl?"

"My experience impels me to prefer the country girl, for I think she makes the most desirable wife—for a poor man anyhow."

"Why do you think so? What are your reasons?"

"Well, I would prefer a girl that can cook well and above all one that prefers a real live baby to a poodle dog; a girl that can appreciate a cottage in the suburbs instead of a flat on the avenue; a girl that loves the society of her husband and children and prefers her home to the exclusion of woman's clubs and bridge parties."

The reporter thanked me and I considered the matter closed. Of course I expected to find a few lines possibly buried away in some obscure corner of the edition of the country paper. To my surprise I beheld in the periodical a half column on the front page headed in lines of largest type: "A Chicago Policeman Comes Hunting a Country Bride." There it was, all I had said and plenty more besides.

But still this was not the finish by any means. When I arrived in Chicago from my stay I was met by a Chicago reporter begging to enlarge on my notoriety and asking me to add more to what they had received from down in the country. I replied I was sick of it all and I wanted it to cease. He said I had gone in too far to back out now and the going was too good to stop, so I might just as well be a good fellow and let him have my photo to publish, and besides, he added, "You can't tell what the results may be; maybe in the end you will be glad." I replied, "And maybe sorry."

Well, the reporter won out. My picture was printed in a Chicago paper, and I suppose it went around the world, for I received letters by the thousands from everybody, everywhere, many from foreign countries. I also received many letters from bachelors and widowers begging me to share with them my mail, saying they didn't have the nerve to turn on the spotlight as I had, but would appreciate my generosity if I would split with them.

Letters came for a year after, and, to shorten a long story, one little country girl's appeal seemed to outshine all the rest. Short and to the point, saying she had seen my photo in the Chicago paper and I looked good natured, so if I was interested answer. I answered the one in all the thousands of letters, exchanged photos, made a date, and we were married in less time than it takes me to write about it.

Results after three years of married life: I have the dearest wife, the best housekeeper, the fondest mother to the sweetest baby boy 18 months old that ever lived, and with no misfortune Mr. Stork will visit us again before this year is over, and you bet he'll receive a royal welcome. Our home is a paradise and our prospects look like "happiness forever and ever after."

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

SUGARS AND SUGARS.

Do you know what sugar is? You are rather well versed in one food branch if you do, because cane sugar, with that also made from the beet, has long monopolized the word so that we have to define other sugars by saying maple sugar, milk sugar, fruit sugar, etc. If you know you are also able to cook more economically in these times of high costs.

Last summer there was held in Chicago a three day hearing on a food subject, reports of which have been printed in three free booklets with the title "Proceedings of Hearing Before Illinois State Food Standards Commission in the Matter of Investigation of Corn Sirup (Glucose) and Its Use in Foods."

On the third day, June 23, Miss Laura A. Cauble said:

> Sugar in the diet does nothing but furnish energy. It never helped build a bone, it never built a bit of tissue, it hasn't anything to do with keeping the blood right, so you have to consider it purely as an energy food. When I speak of sugar I use the word in the chemical sense, that there are at least three sugars in common use—honey or levulose, glucose, and sucrose or cane sugar. It is interesting that cane sugar or sucrose should preëmpt the name of sugar. That is because sucrose has been on the market for a long period of time. It has no more right to the name sugar than glucose or honey. The word sugar is the common name for the whole group.

Miss Cauble might have added that the scientific name for the starches, polysaccharide, indicates that these, too, are sugars, when the word is used in its widest sense to include all carbohydrates.

At this hearing on the use of glucose or corn sirup as one of the least expensive foods, considering its energy yield, there were present and testifying such leading world sicentists as Dr. Ludwig Hektoen, Dr. Victor C. Vaughn, dean of the medical school of the University of Michigan; Dr. Anton Julius Carlson, whose book on "Control of Hunger in Health and Disease," has appeared this autumn, attracting prominent attention, and many others of the learned world, as well as state food commissioners, grocers, preserve makers, and food manufacturers.

The verbatim report of the proceedings contains 206 pages in all. I have felt it my duty to wade faithfully through every word of this, but the ordinary reader may cut out much and simply read with great benefit to their general eating knowledge what such people as Dr. Vaughn and Miss Cauble have to say. The latter, as I understand, has done such an eminently practical thing as work out a balanced luncheon, a penny luncheon, perhaps, though I have not looked up the matter, for 70,000 children in the public schools of New York City.

At the hearing in question each person was asked when introduced to give certain facts about themselves, and Miss Cauble, giving her full name and address, added: "Scholar in nutrition, Columbia university, 1909 and 1910; head of the department of home economics, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pa., 1909-'12; in charge of the bureau of food supply of the Association for the Condition of the Poor, 1913-'15; made a special study of the food supply of England in the industrial cities during the summer of 1912; doing private research work under the direction of Graham Lusk, professor of physiology, Cornell university medical college."

Does this record not make you believe that what Miss Cauble has to say of the use and amount of sugar in the diet, the social value of the discovery and introduction of an abundant food supply, corn sirup in candies and other foods, cost of foods in proportion to total earnings of workingmen, definition of jam, better processes and better products, the place of ripe fruits in the diet, and other things is worth having? I should like to have every reader get this free matter on sugar in the diet by such eminent authorities.

Dr. Hektoen and Dr. Carlson, I have the word of the latter, undertook a study of this food material in a perfectly disinterested way. The latter describes what they did thus: "The experiment planned by Dr. Hektoen and myself consisted in feeding a group of rats as a control group on bread, another control group on bread plus a certain amount of cane sugar, and the experimental group on the same bread plus a certain amount of glucose, exclusively on this diet for a period of about six months."

But any one may know from Dr. Carlson's new book that he does not confine his experiments in eating to rats, but uses himself and other men interested, so what he said about digestion of sugars at this hearing is highly interesting and valuable. As he favored glucose we have a great argument for the use of this inexpensive food product.

Any one who will read pages 263 and 405 of Prof. Sherman's "Food Products" will find arguments to convince them that to discriminate in the way some people do against this cheaper sugar is not wholly reasonable. When we have an absolutely perfect diet, containing no products that have been sophisticated by manufacture, we may reasonably shut out glucose, and also cane sugar for the same reasons.

A great many grocers will not carry pure glucose or corn sirup, yet they always carry one of the several corn sirups of a special brand. It is straining at a gnat. It is fortunate for the poor man that they carry these sirups, because used in moderation they furnish a high fuel food, higher per pound than any bread made. To use more sugar than the digestion can care for is always dangerous.

There are no end of arguments for glucose, which is intermediate stage between starch of bread and cane sugar. It is rather wonderful that so eminent an authority as Dr. Victor A. Vaughn will say: "I know of no one of scientific attainment who has ever found any fault with the use of commercial glucose." Yet even a grocer's clerk will feel that any one favoring this product must be working in the aid of its manufacturers, while he will recommend with gusto the product of some other manufacturer as worthy your attention.

Marmalade with Corn Sirup.

This favorite marmalade is more laboriously and expensively prepared than is necessary. It can be cooked on the day started, and it will be lighter and prettier because of the use of corn sirup.

Wash and slice as thin as possible, skins and all, one grape fruit, one orange, and one lemon. The last part may be cut across in fine strips, as it is almost impossible to slice to the end. Measure whole and add three times as much water. Put on to cook, and when it comes to a boil, cover and turn fire low. Cook until tender. If cooked in an open kettle too much of the water evaporates, as well as the volatile oils of the fruit so necessary to fine flavor. To each cup of the cooked fruit and water add one-third of a cup of corn sirup and two-thirds of a cup of sugar.

It is far better to cook this in small portions. It is then light and brilliant in color and more palatable. More of the volatile part of the fruit is thus retained. If a thermometer is used, much time and care is saved. Cook to 220 degrees.

Candy with Corn Sirup.

Substitute in any candy recipe part glucose for the water prescribed, having in mind that the more corn sirup you use the longer beating it will take if you wish the candy to granulate like a fudge or fondant. On the other hand, if too much is used they will not granulate at all, though with just a little less you can get the smoothest of possible granulation. Half a cup of corn sirup to two cups of cane sugar is a good proportion for this latter effect, unless you let the candy get too cold before beating it. The more glucose you use the hotter a fudge or fondant may be when you commence to beat. Hot sugar cooked to fondant stage will become as hard as a rock if beaten when hot.

The dried fruit jams often freshened by apple and lemon are made as often in some households as those of fresh fruits. We have long since learned that it is better to give our fruit a thorough cooking before adding sugar, less wasteful and more wholesome. Here is what Miss Cauble says of the old and new methods:

> They put the fruit in the kettles, pound for pound with sugar, cooked it nearly all day, and its fragrance filtered through the house. They took nearly every volatile oil out of it and there was little or no flavor left. It was dead sweet, the delicate brightness of flavor lost, just as the aroma of the coffee was. Under unfavorable conditions of production it was caramelized fruit conserve. I know this because I ate my mother's and my grandmother's jams.
> The open kettle process has passed. We know a better way now. We need to make our fruit products as good as we can make them. We put the fruit in our cans before it is cooked and we close them and we steam them; then we pour the juice off and add to it whatever proportion of corn sugar with or without the addition of any cane sugar to give it the food value and flavor which is suitable to you or to me or to any one else who wants to eat it, boil it up, and put it back on our fruit, which has been cooked carefully to develop the pectin and to retain every volatile oil the fruit possesses.

There are excellent free booklets of recipes put out by the manufacturers of corn sirups. These recipes are not only for candy and preserves, but for puddings, etc.

FLOWERS THE TONIC TO PUT COLOR IN YOUR LIFE

says Antoinette Donnelly

MAUDE MARTIN EVERS

If you missed the Antoinette Donnelly series telling how she reduced Mrs. Eva Lane thirty-six pounds in six weeks, or how she added twenty pounds in five weeks to Miss Helene Barnett's weight, or how she corrected a head of dry, thin, and falling hair, and an oily scalp with dandruff, send a stamped, addressed envelope and the information will be mailed to you. Any other questions pertaining to beauty and hygiene will be gladly answered.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Did it ever occur to you that there is a relation between the flowers that grow in pots on your windows and your own spirits? Do you know that, unconsciously or not, you are affected in no small degree by the blossoms and their state of prosperity? If the flowers come out well and bloom as they should bloom you are correspondingly elated. The sight of them tranquilizes your nerves. The odor soothes the temper. The presence of cheerful growing things makes you content with the earth and your load upon it.

Haven't you among your acquaintances a friend—a dear, good, kind happy woman—who revels in her window garden? In the winter it is filled with lovely growing things when all other windows stare bleak and bare into the colorless streets. In the summer time it is much prettier than any other window on the street. Enter the home at any time, summer or winter, and you meet a cheerier note running throughout the whole house than in the flowerless house next door.

It isn't just a happenchance that the dispositions of the former householder are happier. A woman who revels in flowers is generally a gentle soul, always cheerful, kind hearted, charitable, and endowed with many happy virtues.

The influence of flowers in a household is of inestimable value. If you were fortunate enough to have attended a little country school in years gone by the memory of that little red geranium in the window hovers around your happiest recollections, doesn't it? The brightest spots in the lives of tenement dwellers is often centered around that same humble but brilliantly cheerful flower.

Lack of space may make it impossible in crowded city homes for plant cultivation of any great proportion. But there's hardly a home that cannot afford window space for one bright flowering plant at least, and it is worth while cultivating.

Even granting the lack of space for one single growing plant, there is no place so humble but has room for a single rose, a carnation, a lily, or some other single flower, from which fragrance and benefit may be inhaled.

The deadly effect of colorless indoors as a steady diet is beyond comprehension. Your disposition, beauty, and your whole outlook on life is spoiled by it.

There is a physical tonic about flowers and harmonious bright colors. I had an experience in the furnishing of my living room that brought this lesson home to me quite forcibly. My walls, to begin with, were done in a rather cold gray. I bought dull blue window drapes and my furniture was done in grays and blues corresponding with the wall and window color scheme. I used to find myself after sitting in this room a half hour possessed of a depression which I could not account for from the source of any physical ailment. One day I ran across a remnant of a brilliant orange velour which I made into a table runner and a large pillow. I painted a little vase a color to match this velour and kept it filled with marigolds or some other brilliant yellow flower, and presto! I discovered immediately what was responsible for my fits of melancholy. The dash of color gave the blues a run for their lives!

If economy is the reason for depriving yourself of the purchase of the flower tonic, yours is a shortsighted viewpoint. I don't mean that you must have roses when they are $1 apiece nor violets at a corresponding cost. For 5 cents or 10 cents or 15 cents at most, there is not a season of the year when you cannot buy a flower that will help to vary the complexion of your life. In my opinion a bowl of fresh flowers brings better returns in the long run than the interest on the saving resulting from the lack of them. The more commonplace the furnishings the more monotonous the home surroundings, the greater the need of the flower as a tonic.

The action of flower perfumes has been compared to the action of alcohol. Upon certain temperaments certain flowers will provoke a sort of intoxication. Again, the most soothing influence is produced by other flowers. The rose, for instance, is claimed to be just the thing to promote good temper. It has been known to drive away nervous headaches. Any flower which lends a soothing influence to the nerves has a subsequent invigorating influence upon them.

In the scheme of beauty getting wild flowers have a distinct mission. The odor of the wild flower is said to make one unselfish. There is that about it which purifies the thought, makes the mind peaceful with the world, and brings about an unselfish frame of mind. The woman who is soul weary; the woman who is sordid in spirit and who realizes it; the woman who is growing more and more tainted in mind and spotted in speech, from association with evil, can go out and gather wild flowers and come back younger in spirit by ten years and happier than she can ever remember.

Some doctors send their patients out into the fields to pick flowers, sure that they will come home bright and pretty of face, and old people are sent to rejuvenate their youth.

You have, undoubtedly, experienced the vanishing of your attack of blues by spring violets. Their sweet smell acts as a tonic upon the heart. The Easter lily, which has a strong odor, while not stimulating, is cheering. The fragrance is good for the spirits. Hyacinths have a way of making low spirits rise.

Flowers in the sick room are rarely prohibited entirely. It is necessary to choose them in view of their effect upon the nervous system. First aid to an early convalescence the rightly chosen flower is. Flowers of delicate perfumes act favorably upon the nervous system and experience shows that the varieties of brilliant colored flowers are strongly appreciated by the sick. Flowers of penetrating odor should not be admitted.

Answers to Inquiries.

ETTIE: THIS IS THE FORMULA for tonic I had Miss Inez Hahn use in my work of correcting the oily condition of her hair. Resorcin, forty grains; water, one and one-half ounces; alcohol, one and one-half ounces; witch hazel, one and one-half ounces. She used this twice daily when massaging her scalp. I shall be glad to send you full instructions on the treatment of oily hair infested with dandruff if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

WORRIED: THE OBVIOUS THING to do in your attempt to get your hair and scalp in good condition is to find out if your sick hair condition is due to some definite disease which is undermining your whole health. Following an acute illness, it often happens that a rapid loss of hair results. This occurs most commonly after typhoid fever. The prospect of regaining lost hair in such cases is usually good. In a few months' time it often returns to its former abundance. Highly nervous and overwrought persons are apt to suffer a loss of hair. The remedy naturally for such cases must be first to overcome the nervousness and varying health conditions. I shall be glad to send you my treatment for falling hair if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope. It is much too lengthy to even outline in this column.

MRS. MAE F.: THE MEASUREMENTS of Venus de Milo are: Height, 5 feet 4 inches; weight, 132.2 pounds; head, 21.3; neck, 12.5; chest, 33; bust, 37; waist, 26; hips, 38; thigh, 22.5; calf, 13.2; ankle, 7.4; knee, 15; upper arm, 12.5; forearm, 9.5; wrist, 5.9. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to send you the exercises for reducing the waist and hips that I gave Mrs. Eva Lane in reducing her weight thirty-six pounds in six weeks.

MRS. BERT P.: IN TAKING A COLD dip the immersion should not last longer than from three to fifteen seconds. You can accustom yourself to cold baths by sponging off in cool water, gradually decreasing the temperature of the water until you are able to take a plunge and immediately react. Take a cold bath as soon as you rise in the morning, having the bathroom warm. Afterward rub briskly with a Turkish towel and exercise for a few minutes.

WAITSTILL: YOUR LETTER WAS so hastily written that I could not make out whether you were five feet seven, five feet ten, or five feet eleven. A girl five feet seven at the age of 17 should weigh 132 pounds. Five feet ten, 144 pounds, and five feet eleven, 148 pounds. Can you get the information you want from this?

ANXIOUS: RIBBED OR RIDGED nails are usually caused from a run down system or uric acid in the system. I think it would be well to consult your physician about it. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for removing blackheads and pimples if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

ELEANOR: IF YOUR NECK IS BEginning to get wrinkled massage it night and morning with a good skin food. Rotate the muscles firmly in a slanting direction from under the chin toward the shoulders, and from the middle of the throat backward and upward toward the ear. A simple remedy for chapped hands is washing them in water mixed with cornmeal and fine castile soap. Follow this rubbing with olive oil or lanolin and then wipe off. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to send you my treatment for dry hair and the exercise for reducing the waist.

ETTE: IF YOU HAVE THE PROPer utensils I see no reason why you cannot make your own cold cream, but I think it is much better to use the ready prepared face powders. A good rouge will not injure the skin if you first apply a cold cream and then wash your face before retiring at night. My formula for greaseless cream is tragacanth, 80 grains; glycerin, ½ ounce; boric acid, ½ ounce; oil of bergamot, 5 drops; oil of rose, 1 drop; oil of lavender, 2 drops, and water enough to make one pint. Dissolve thoroughly with moderate heat. Apply freely to the face, using some friction or massage, and then wipe off with a soft towel. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for a face bleach if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING·HAND

Farm Home for a Dog.

"I WISH to thank the kind friends who sent us so many magazines and so much reading matter. We appreciate it all greatly, and I have made many friends through correspondence. I wonder if it is too late to ask for the watchdog that Mrs. C. M. H. mentioned in the Corner and for which she wished to find a home. We could give him a good home and care; he would also have several thousand acres of prairie lands to roam on. I am alone so much, as distances are great, and I would appreciate a good watchdog and would be willing to pay expenses in order to get him. The only crop we have raised this year is Mexican beans, and I would be glad to send some of them to Mrs. C. M. H. if she could use them. J. A. T."

I am glad the response to this correspondent's request for reading matter was so prompt and that the correspondents she has secured through the Corner have been satisfactory. I regret to say that the watchdog she desires has been given away, but I hope some one else may have a dog to bestow for the sake of getting him a good home.

Helene Has Another Friend.

"Although I have been reading the paper in which your Helping Hand appears for many years, it was just a short time ago that I read one of the letters. It happened that the heading of this letter attracted my attention and I immediaely wrote you for the address. I have received some interesting letters from the writer of the letter referred to, as well as a splendid letter from her little sister. I now read your department even before reading the news, and I find many helpful, interesting letters. I only wish I could help each one who asks for it and I shall try to help as many as I can. The letter from 'Helene's Mother' appealed to me especially, even though I am not a mother. All children have a place in my heart and it will afford me great pleasure to brighten Helene's sad days as much as is in my power. I may add that the recipes are appreciated also, as I am a housekeeper. I will pass on a few of my recipes some day, as an exchange of recipes and ideas is helpful to all housekeepers. I. L. W."

The addresses requested have been sent and I am sure we shall be delighted to receive the recipes referred to. The pleasant words of Mrs. I. L. W. do me good and will gratify other Cornerites.

On Bible Prophecy.

"I would like some books, tracts, etc., on Bible prophecy. If some one who has these books does not care to give them I would be glad to have them as a loan and return them. I am alone in the world and needy. I can't buy books, for I need food more. Any kind of religious books will be gladly accepted, and I will be so grateful if you can help me in this matter. I am shut in, needy, and sorrowful, for all my dear ones have gone to the better land. J. P."

So many and such varied interests are represented in the Corner that I venture to hope that these books may be forthcoming. It is natural that an invalid whose loved ones have all preceded her to the next world should be interested in works that deal with that future towards which she is looking.

Her Pet Theory.

"I would like to say to the Cornerite who asks if one should settle bills immediately or run an account that I would like to advise all most emphatically never to get into debt. It may not be half as inconvenient to you to pay as you buy as it is to the other fellow to have to wait for his money. I consider going into debt dishonest. One has no right to buy what she has not the money to pay for at once. This is a pet theory of mine, and I feel sure I can never change my ideas about it. "AUNT MAUD."

We are always glad to hear from this correspondent, and her words are always those of wisdom, whether you altogether agree with her or not. I think she is decidedly on the safe side when she advises housekeeprs to pay as they go and not to run into debt. The principle is sound and sensible.

Thanks Unknown Giver.

"I have just received a package by mail and I do not know from whom it comes. I want to thank the giver with all my heart and the whole Corner as well. My little girls were much delighted to get the Kewpies that some one sent, and especially the hair ribbons. We did not get any letter at all with this particular package, and I surely want to know who sent them. You cannot imagine how grateful I feel. I have received some useful things and they are of so much help to me. I would like to thank all who have been so kind and thoughtful of me through the Corner. I have answered all who remembered the children and thanked them, except the sender of this one last parcel, which contained no address. Only one person in my home town answered my request, and she came out to see the children. She gave them so many nice silk pieces and hair ribbons, and we are warm friends now. I never will forget the Corner and its good work. S. E. C."

I wish on my own behalf to thank the Cornerites who have been so generous to her. It only proves again what I have often said before of the graciousness and good will of the constituency. I trust the friend who sent the anonymous package may see this acknowledgment and know how much pleasure she has bestowed.

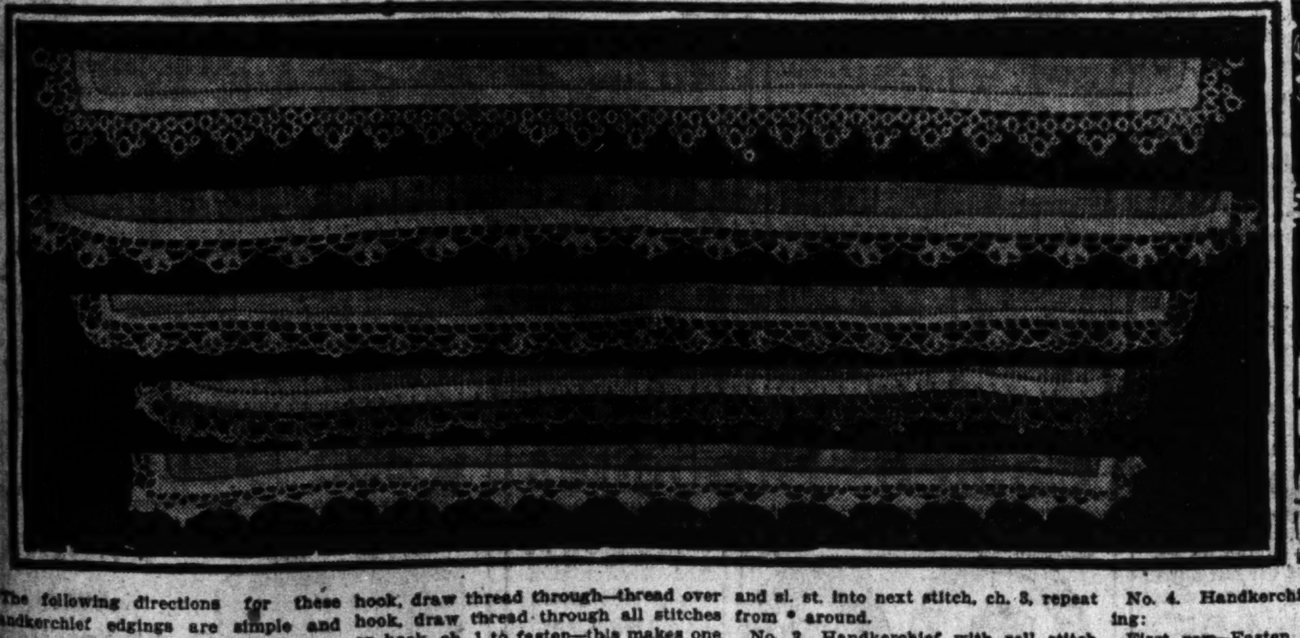
Formula for Rose Beads.

"I am going to try to join your Corner, as I have read it for some time and think it is grand. I saw that some one wanted the recipe for making rose beads and the one I send is the real rose recipe: Gather one gallon of roses. Pick the stem and hard center out of the flower, only use the petals. If they are a little wilted or dry it doesn't hurt. Grind them six or seven times in a little sausage grinder so that the result is fine. Spread the dough out on a piece of iron or old tin—a piece of old rusty stovepipe will do. Let the leaves remain there about thirty-six hours, then grind them again three or four times, and roll the pulp into round balls a little larger than you wish the bead to be when completed. Run a pin through the center of each bead and stick on a board. Let them stay there about three days, or until they are dry and hard, and then string. The beads need no perfume mixed with them, for they always remain fragrant. I wish pieces with which to make quilts, as we were burned out a year ago, and I haven't money enough to buy covers. Any old articles in the way of worn out clothing which could be cut up into quilt pieces would be welcome. I have three little children and there will soon be another, so almost anything in the line of pieces would be appreciated. I have several beautiful coleus plants of different colors. I would gladly exchange these or give them to a lonely person who is not able to buy flowers. "R. M. T."

I hope there may be some persons who will care to send her some of the pieces she wishes and also perhaps some small contributions toward the wardrobe of the prospective arrival. I shall be glad to send her address to those who wish to help her or to take advantage of her offer of plants.

Crochet Handkerchief Edgings.



The following directions for these handkerchief edgings are simple and accurate. There is no gift more acceptable in the long list of inexpensive remembrances for Christmas than a prettily edged handkerchief. No. 100 thread should be used.

No. 1 handkerchief with roll stitch edging.

First row—Fasten thread to edge of handkerchief, and make open meshes with chain of 3 between all around handkerchief.

Second row—Sl. st. over first open mesh, * ch. 3, sl. st. over same mesh, ch. 3, skip 2 open meshes and over the next mesh make a cluster of 6 roll stitches with a picot between the third and fourth rolls [thread over hook 8 times, hook through mesh, thread over hook, draw thread through—thread over hook, draw thread through all stitches on hook, ch. 1 to fasten—this makes one roll stitch]; skip 2 open meshes, sl. st. over next; repeat from * around.

We therefore arranged for this interesting exhibition of all of the above sets so that our customers could drop in and see The Encyclopaedia Britannica and The Century Dictionary before the last sets have been sold, in the form which has so greatly increased their convenience and added to their attractiveness.

Bright Sayings of Children

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Jack was sitting near his uncle at the breakfast table when his mother came in and placed some bread before the uncle's plate. Jack watched his uncle as he sat silently hurrying through his meal. When his mother entered the room again Jack said: "Mamma, I guess I'll have to thank you for bringing Uncle Harry that bread."

My father always cut my little sister's meat, and one Sunday a friend came to dinner. My sister asked, "Anna, aren't you ever going to get married?" To this our friend replied, "I don't think any one wants me, Eleanor." And the little girl said ,"O, Anna, don't you want a papa to cut your meat?" A.

Marjorie and Vivian are accustomed to ride on a street car when visiting grandma. The other day they were playing street car with chairs, Vivian being the conductor and Marjorie the passenger. Their mother noticed Marjorie kept standing holding on to one chair and said: "Marjorie, why don't you sit down?" And she replied: "No man's got up yet." A. N. B.

Mae had played hard that morning, and as a result was much soiled. Coming up to me, she said, "Aunt Jude, is it morning or afternoon?" I told her it was still morning, and she replied, "O, dear! I thought it must be night, I'm so awful dirty." J. M. F.

Driving in from the country Marion's mamma wanted to put the robe over her, as it was getting rather cold. As it happened, her mamma pulled the robe over Marion's head, when Marion said: "Mamma, don't cover up my face; I'll miss all I see." W. S.

Annalie had started to school for the first time, and every morning her mother gave her a clean handkerchief and told her not to lose it. But nearly every night she came home without it. After this had continued for some time Annalie came home one night with a handkerchief that wasn't hers. Upon being questioned by her mother the little girl replied, "Well, I lost so many handkerchiefs I fot I'd better take the first one I got hold of." E. L. S.

My nephew came in from play much satisfied with himself for having given Lyman, his playmate, a beating. His mother chided him for striking some one smaller than he and told him the next time he felt he had to fight she hoped he would take some one his size. He retorted: "Well, Lyman's head is as big as mine and that's where I hit him." I. R. L.

My little niece called the other day, and, knowing that children always are ready for something to eat, I gave her a piece of cake, fresh from the oven. She ate this with much enjoyment, and when finished she said: "That cake is awfully good. It tastes just like the cake my mother makes. She must have given you her pattern for it." M. M.

The Worst Slam I Ever Got.

Sometime, somewhere, somebody gave you a "slam" that nearly bowled you over. Tell the worst one you ever received. The stories must be original, written on one side of the paper, and confined to 300 words. Address them to Slam Editor, "The Sunday Tribune." For every letter published "The Tribune" will pay $1. No letters can be returned.

A Cheering Resemblance.

I was calling upon a married couple in the neighborhood when the man remarked to me:

"Every time I see you you remind me of my sister who died last year." His wife added: "It is true that you do resemble her; she died of tuberculosis. I never saw her but once and then she was in her casket; but you do look so much like her." E. F. J.

Lines to an Expert.

I was an expert stenographer and typist, but my chirography was exceedingly poor. I had been employed for several weeks, and was getting along famously when the "boss" asked me to write a certain dictation in longhand. After I had completed the letter he took it and struggled over it for a minute or two, then, throwing it down on his desk, he shouted: "You look like an American, you talk like an American, but I'll be darned if you write like one!" But I got even with him for that slam—I married him, and the bank is able to decipher my "John Hancock." M. O.

Went Almost Crazy.

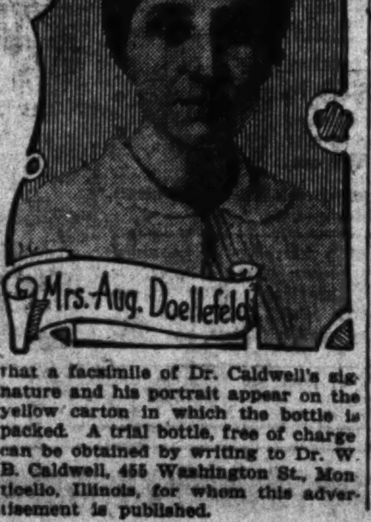
I attended a performance of the "Round Up" with my husband several years ago. He is a good husband, with the exception that when we attend the theater he has always a great deal of business affairs between the acts. This particular night he had promised to be good.

We had not been seated more than ten minutes when he thought of the most important telephone call. I reminded him of his promise. After the first act he was most persistent, after the second desperate, but I remained firm, reminding him continually of his promise.

In the third act of the play there is a character that goes insane in the desert from thirst. The actor that portrayed this particular part did so exceptionally well. Thinking that I could penetrate the gloom, I spoke to hubby, saying, "Isn't that splendid?" To my horror he growled out loud, "Humph, if that fellow was half as dry as I am he would have gone crazy in the first act." And every one near us heard him. MRS. H. J. B.

At Her Party, Too!

I gave a luncheon on my dining room porch. All the ladies came in their best clothes, and while in the midst of the luncheon the porch on the flat above was being scrubbed and the water spout broke and down came the dirty water all ove. my guests, all over the meal, all over the floor, all over everything. To say that I was embarrassed is putting it mildly. O. S. F.



Keeps Her Children In Perfect Health

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the Family Laxative for Many Years.

Mrs. Aug. Doellefeld of Carlyle, Ill., recently wrote to Dr. Caldwell at Monticello, Ill., that she had used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in her home for a number of years, and would not be without it, as with it she has been able to keep her four children in perfect health.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that acts on the bowels in an easy, natural way, and regulates the action of this most important function. Nearly all the sickness to which children are subject is traceable to bowel inaction, and a mild, dependable laxative, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should have a place in every family medicine chest. It is pleasant to the taste and children like it, and take it readily, while it is equally effective for adults.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold in drug stores everywhere for fifty cents a bottle. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure you get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois, for whom this advertisement is published.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

BETRAYING A CONFIDENCE.

EVERY girl who works has at some time or another in her career a problem to solve which directly concerns her position and brings to her mind the question: "Just how much allegiance do I owe my employer?" Sometimes the way is pointed out to her without much difficulty and a decision in the right direction is not long in forthcoming. But often the circumstances surrounding the problem bring complications which cloud her judgment and make its solving a difficult matter. Or, as in the case of Miss F. Y., as set forth in the following letter, the complications are sometimes merely of her own imagining and a word from another person is all that is necessary to set her aright:

"Dear Miss King: I am asking for your advice after vainly trying for two weeks to come to a decision by myself.

"For eight years I have been the head bookkeeper for a firm of merchants. It is not a colossal concern, but one of fair size, doing a substantial business. Only high class salesmen are employed and all are well paid. One of these salesmen has been attentive to me for the last two years; has taken me to the theater and out to dinner numberless times, and has kept me supplied with flowers and candy, and is always remembering me with some thoughtful and pretty attention. He is a friend of my brother and it is on this account I accepted his courtesies in the first place, but in the course of our friendship I have become really attached to him.

"He is the star salesman of the house, gets a better salary and more privileges than any of the other men, and is in line for the managership of the concern. He rarely talked business to me and until two weeks ago he never questioned me regarding my work for the firm. Then he asked me in an offhand way, and as though it were of little consequence how I answered him, to give him some specific information about the financial affairs of the firm, which knowledge I hold in the strictest confidence. It is something which no one except the members of the firm and I, in my capacity of confidential bookkeeper, knew and when I refused point blank to tell him he dropped his indifferent manner and teased and begged and, I am ashamed to admit, even bribed me to tell him.

"For two weeks he has been after me to tell him, saying that it will mean so much to him to find out and at the same time giving me his word that he will not use the information I give him to the detriment of the firm. He does not explain, merely asking me to trust him on the strength of our sincere and close friendship.

"When I am listening to him I am sorely tempted to tell, but when I am away from him I realize that he is asking me to commit a dishonorable action.

"I would have asked my brother's advice or have gone to one of my friends, but I could not tell them without revealing the identity of the man. This I have determined not to do, as in spite of the advantage he apparently is taking of me I am still attached to him.

"I have never known him to lie or do anything that was in the least dishonest, and my brother, who has known him for years, speaks highly of him. Do you think his assurance that his knowledge of these figures cannot possibly injure the firm, but will be of great benefit to him, is any excuse for me to tell?

"I realize that I have not the right perspective on this situation and need a word from some one disinterested to clear my judgment, so I have promised myself that I will abide by your decision, for which I thank you in advance. F. Y."

As far as I can gather from your letter, Miss Y., there should be no question about your keeping your own counsel concerning the affairs of the firm which employs you. You say your position is a confidential one and that the information your friend seeks is of a confidential nature, therefore you have no right to divulge this to any one, no matter what excuse he might give for wanting to know.

Since you were strong enough to resist his appeal for two weeks you will probably have no great difficulty in finally putting an end to his persistence. If by refusing to betray your firm you lose this man's friendship you ought to consider yourself well rid of him, as he seems utterly unworthy of your esteem.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

IMPOSING ON GOOD NATURE.

THERE have been times in the lives of all of us, even the best, when we have come dangerously near a desire for homicide. These are the occasions when we hurry to get some article wanted for immediate use and find that it has been borrowed and that the borrower has forgotten to return it. There are few things so exasperating as this, and when the usurper brings back the object with a sweet smile and a "hope that you haven't needed it," it is difficult to control the temper.

Mothers come in for more than their share of this imposition. Their rooms can always be used for leaving odds and ends; their things are more than half public property anyway, and besides, "Mother is so sweet she wouldn't mind." Poor mother! And though all of them object, most of them are at heart so generous and kind that they do not care to show enough resentment at this rudeness; for such it really is.

What is one person's private property should never be borrowed without his knowledge, and then only when absolutely necessary. One of the best mottoes ever coined is: "Neither a borrower nor a lender be."

MRS. L.: The following makes a good menu for a small luncheon: A fruit entrée; clear bouillon with crackers; broiled chicken, peas, French fried potatoes, hot rolls; head lettuce with French dressing and cheeseballs and crackers; chocolate ice cream and assorted cakes; coffee en demi-tasse.

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

HELEN M.: It is not correct to separate the different parts of a chicken salad sandwich. Cut through the three layers with your knife. No reply is necessary to a wedding announcement. If possible call on the bride as soon as is convenient after the date on the "at home" cards. It would be proper for you to telephone your friends to ask them to an informal shower for a bride-to-be.

B. T.: If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I will gladly mail you the names of some good books on etiquette. A man should always rise when a woman enters the room. He should allow her to precede him on entering or leaving a restaurant.

* *

X. Y. Z.: You should not refer to your wife as "Mrs. Z.," but as "my wife" or, in intimate circles, as "Helen." To an evening wedding a man should wear evening clothes.

* *

H. T.: You are correct in thinking that a social note or a letter of introduction given to some one to deliver should not be sealed. On a man's visiting cards he should not omit the "Mr.," but it should not be used on his business cards.

How I Won My Mate.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

A Hero by Accident.

I won my mate by cowardice. As this is perhaps the only instance of this in matrimonial history it may be worth telling.

I am desperately afraid of mice. I was calling upon a girl whom I had determined to make my wife when a mouse ran across the floor. The girl was no more scared than I, but she was quicker and gained the nearest chair before I could reach it. I ran for another, tripped over a rug, and sprawled on the floor with a resounding thump. As I fell the unfortunate mouse ran beneath my hand and the blow killed him. I scrambled up, and, horrors! the dead rodent was entangled in my fingers, and I held him aloft.

That settled it. She thought I could eat 'em alive. Her wn terror kept her from noticing my agitation, and after that the progress of my courtship was easy. By eternal preparedness in the way of numerous traps around hte premises I have thus far succeeded in keeping from her the knowledge of my weakness. I hope she does not see this story. A. C.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

Almost Spilled the Peas.

Before our recent marriage my husband led me to believe he was a Chesterfield. He frequently took me to fashionable restaurants, where he overawed me with the strictness and accuracy of his table manners. This morning in reaching for the bread I accidentally jarred his' arm. To my surprise 'e sourly remarked: "You must be careful when a fellow has a knife in his mouth." E. U.

Perhaps It's Both.

My husband is a traveling salesman. Before we were married he would bring me daffodils, violets, or the latest book or music. Now he brings home a bag of sweet potatoes and wants them candied, or writes me ahead of time and says: "Do you suppose there is an unemployed chicken running around that you could induce to be fried?" Such is married life. I hardly know whether it's me or my cooking he 's in love with now. H. A.

CHILD GETS SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

Look at tongue! Then give fruit laxative for stomach, liver, bowels.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm children and they love it.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.

Curls for Girls

How to keep locks curly and wavy for days and look natural too.

Girls! Try this!! Before curling or waving your hair with pins, papers or a heated iron, just moisten each strand with atalpa water and you will be delighted how natural the curls and waves appear and how long they last in spite of wind, dampness or perspiration. A few ounces of atalpa water will cost very little at any drug store and there is nothing better to help retain the curls and waves or to soften, gloss or fluff the hair and to make it look thick and abundant.—Advertisement.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My trouble started in the form of little pimples and the whole of my body except my feet, hands, and face was affected. The pimples grew into large, hard, sore eruptions. They itched and burned something awful. I could not sleep at night, but would lie and scratch all night.

"I suffered for six months until I sent for Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Three boxes of Cuticura Ointment and three bars of Cuticura Soap completely healed me." (Signed) Earnest Langdale, Northwestern Business College, Beatrice, Neb., March 7, 1916.

Oily skin and shiny nose

How to correct them

That bug-bear of so many—an oily skin and shiny nose has various contributory causes. Whatever the cause in your case, proper external treatment will relieve your skin of this embarrassing condition.

Begin tonight the following Woodbury treatment. You will feel the difference in your skin the first time you use it.

With warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for a few minutes with a piece of ice.

This treatment will make your skin fresher and clearer the first time you use it. Make it a nightly habit and before long you will see a marked improvement—a promise of that lovelier complexion which the steady use of Woodbury's always brings.

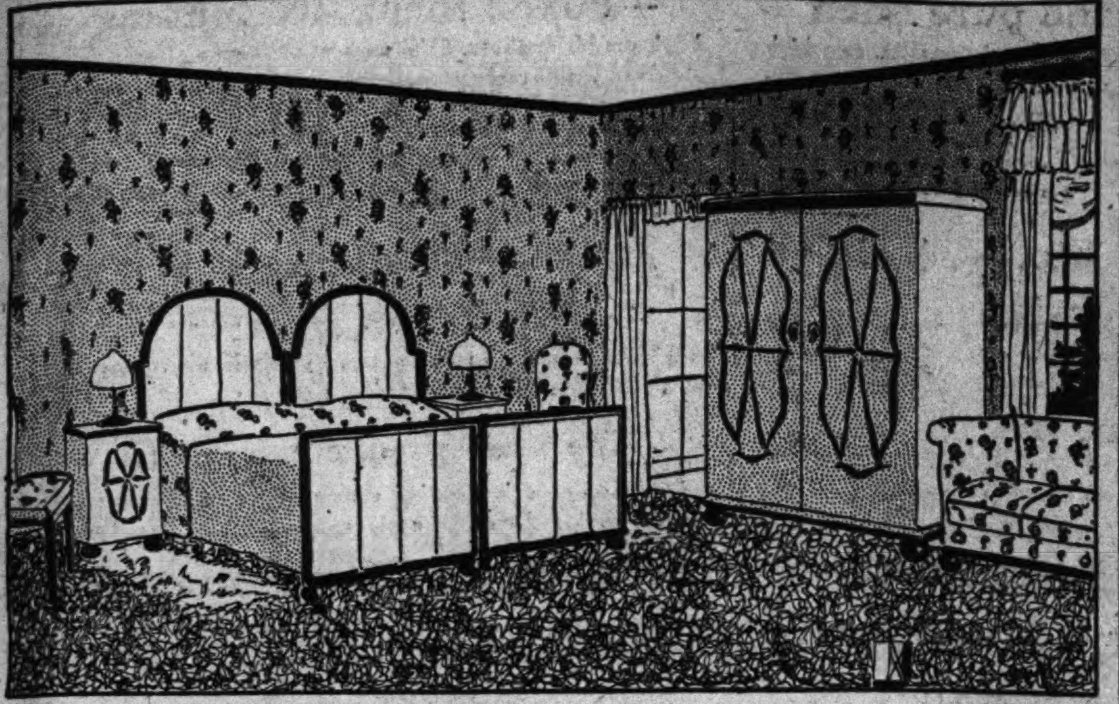
Do this today! A 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap is sufficient for a month or six weeks of this treatment. Go to your druggist or toilet counter today and get a cake. Begin at once to get the benefits of this treatment for your skin.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is for sale by every dealer and druggist in Chicago and, in fact, by dealers everywhere throughout the United States and Canada. Made by the Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ont., Canada.

The Home Harmonious

New Spring Styles in Wall Paper.

Anita de Campi



Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

IN the early fall every year manufacturers of wallpaper from all over the country come together for a convention to show their new products to the wallpaper dealers. Then within a short time after that the dealers send in their orders, and according to the size of the orders the success or failure of patterns is fairly assured. So that to any one familiar with these facts, predicting that the wallpaper fashions are going to be for the spring of 1917 would be like betting on a sure thing.

Certain styles become more pronounced or are entirely discarded—certain novelties crop into prominence, and there are emphatic changes in types and decoration, as well as in finish and above all in color.

A notable omission will be that of all sorts of freak papers. No more violent black and white combinations—no more cubist and futurist designs, and but few of the weird looking things called "modern art" designs. These are quite, quite passé. Black and white are still to be used, but with peculiar modifications. Mostly the blacks are softened into gray by having a powdering of white dots on the black ground. Or where the black and white are not tempered in this way, colors are introduced in combination. For instance, where a perpendicular wide band made up of bold black and white checks, alternating with a band of plain white, was used last year, the same ground this year, will show a floral stripe in full color running down the white band. But even allowing for such modifications bold patterns are losing their hold. The tendency will be towards more and more conservatism.

The truth is that the lack of dyes which is so bitterly protested by the trade may be a blessing in disguise—for garish tints are now more or less impossible in fact as well as in fancy. As to colors, pastel shades are indisputably in the lead, tan, taupe, buff, putty, pearl, and dove color are all eagerly accepted. The most noticeable favorite is blue, and green is being treated like a fairy tale stepchild.

While there is a dearth of fabric papers, these having been all imported prior to the war, imitation fabrics are plentiful. Scenic papers are now printed in a deceptive imitation of tapestry. They come in sectional strips which when put together measure into panel spaces of 120 inches wide and 80 inches high. These things are considered a triumph of the wallpaper printers art. It cannot be questioned but that at stage distance they would pass for genuine loom work. Bronze and gilt papers are not tabooed for lack of favor, but because bronze and mica powders are scarce. This rarity may enhance their value.

An old fashioned paper which it seems funny to see revived is the "flitter paper" that was used "when mother was a girl." It is a figured paper—floral most often, with bits of polished gilt rubbed in, into such spots as the centers of flowers. Papers of the same period that were more highly esteemed, the pressed and embossed paper formerly indicative of wealth, have passed away completely.

The papers that will enjoy the highest vogue and quite replace the solid colored and self-colored oatmeals, etc., are the floral papers printed on a white ground. These recommend themselves irresistably for upper chambers finished or furnished in white or light enamel. The reproductions in paper of old fashioned chintzes are the darlings of the season.

Certain peculiar features of decoration appear from season to season. The novelty is frequently not so much in the material as in the method of its application. This year "cut out" borders are not in favor, but "binders"—that is, narrow band borders—are simply the rage. These are used to mark wall spaces off into panels. Sometimes in the corners of the rooms the binders themselves are made into panels by being run together in a series of perpendicular strips. Sometimes they are run on just below the moldings.

Set combinations of ceiling, side wall, and border have seen their day. Some excellent ceiling covers are to be shown and the fad in these is to have ceilings alike throughout. It is a good idea, too, because it often "keys" rooms together that would be too sharply contrasting otherwise. The same trick obtains in the use of binders. The papers and hangings may differ widely in adjoining rooms, but be adroitly brought together by the use of the same binder throughout.

Scenic and verdure papers are good. Stripes are still used. Large picture panels are liked, but scenic borders no longer elicit enthusiastic admiration.

Pictured friezes are used in nurseries. They are dropped from the picture molding, to about three feet from the floor, are usually varnished and used in conjunction with washable papers. As these are supposed to take the place of pictures in the rooms the picture part must be at least thirty-six feet long without repeating itself. It is no more desirable to have the pattern repeated than it would be to frame the same picture and hang it on several sides of the room. The children would rightfully protest. These friezes must be flat in treatment, bright in color, and gay in character.

Many of the new papers are washable. Some forty inch ones, when applied to the wall, look like nothing more or less than the heaviest enamel. These are highly glazed, especially excellent for rooms requiring sanitary conditions—for bathrooms and kitchens particularly.

The accompanying sketch shows a bedroom furnished in two tones of old rose enameled furniture. The paper is of a chintz pattern, with little rose and mauve flowers and blue green leaves. All of these colors are repeated through the room. The entire floor covering is of blue green Wilton carpeting. The draperies and lamp shades are of mauve, sunfast, and the little chairs and sofa are upholstered in real chintz, exactly matching the paper.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. W. H. F.: I should not advise you to stain your wood if it is light and of a good quality, but see that all of the colors in the papers, draperies, upholstering, etc., with which you furnish your home shall be touched with tan. In choosing chintz, for example, choose that printed on a tan ground rather than on a white ground. Omit the draperies in the doorways during the hot weather, adding them if necessary for winter use. Certain shades of Venetian red much softened would be lovely with your woodwork. One or two reed chairs would be nice, but do not furnish the whole room with reed. A Chippendale library table would be good. A mulberry striped velvet would be nice for your davenport with the mahogany furniture.

LOIS B.: If you lower your bedroom molding it would have the effect of lessening the height of your room. Use light yellow chambray curtains. Yes, I should think a candlestick would look well on the table. Have you seen the painted glass ones? Why not buy one or two of these and try painting them yourself?

G. B.: Do you really mean a vestibule, or is the place you describe an inside hall? If it is a vestibule of course it should not be furnished at all; if it is an inside hall, panel it part way up and if possible arrange a closet in it for wraps. Have the inside door match the outside door. The chief rule that is being followed in placing articles on dressers and dressing tables is to make no great display. The simpler the arrangement the better. Yes, gray would be nice for your living room. Choose a soft shade of Italian red for your dining room furnished in oak. Let the red be well tinged with tan.

L. L.: Thin white voile curtains with over drapes, or inside curtains made of light gray and white striped silk or sunfast would be attractive throughout your apartment.

MRS. R. J. H.: I regret that your letter was so long unanswered. My advice to you would be to go to a first class dealer in paint and get instructions with whatever materials you buy, as the handling varies according to the products you use.

Suitors' Mistakes Contest.

Did you make a mistake that cost you the one you wanted to win more than any other? Was it an unkind remark, a selfish deed, a mean or careless one, an error or tendency of your past come to light? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Mistake That Cost Me the One I Wanted Most to Win." Address Doris Blake, Chicago Tribune.

Keeping Watch on a Rival.

For a long time I had been calling on a young woman in the village and I thought we were as good as engaged. An out of town suitor arrived one day and the boys sure did guy me. That evening in my jealousy I passed her house and, seeing the curtains were drawn down, I tried to peek in. Of course I was caught in the act by a neighbor, who told it as a joke. I later tried to square myself by saying: "I wanted to see if you treated them all alike." She said she did the ones who were too inquisitive and jealous, and that I could continue to peek in if I ever wanted to see her again. C. M.

Rush the Preliminaries.

My mistake seems to have been that I waited too long before asking the girl I loved to be my wife. I knew that she loved me, but I was not in a position to support a wife and so I never said a word about my love, and the girl has since told me that she thought I had never wanted more than friendship from her. She has now married another man. So my advice to suitors is to make the preliminary step as short as possible after you have fully made up your mind. Then, if necessary to wait, have the engagement a long one. E. R.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

25 cent bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Come the Singers Again: Greeting!

By Frederick Donaghey.

THIS is the day set apart by tradition, six years aged, for printing something in the way of greeting and good-will as to the Opera. It is customary to reaffirm that Chicago is, above all things else, a musical community, and to silence those who utter doubt by making a sweeping gesture in the direction of our æolian annals with their twenty-six rubrics, each indicative of an Orchestra year.

Essential to the ritual of this ante-Opera Sunday is, as I recall precedent, a paragraph of solemn admonition that civic welfare is in some way involved in our attitude for the next ten weeks toward what's going on in the Auditorium. The out-of-town buyer, it should be made to appear, charts his itinerary with respect to leit-motifs rather than good old supply-and-demand, despite many superficial reasons for believing that he possesses an intuitive affection for Mr. Ziegfeld rather than Mr. Campanini.

Also, I suspect, there is generally a measure of polite but stern reproof for past neglect of the Opera, even while such reproof observes the incaution of confessing that there has been neglect. I take the liberty of refraining from subscription to this part of the annual ceremonial. When, some seasons since, that operatic rounceval, Mr. Oscar Hammerstein, opened up in denunciation of Manhattan for its indifference to his well-meant effort to reduce the intake of the Metropolitan venture, he was silenced by a sapient somebody's saying that the public cannot be scolded into buying tickets.

Having long held to this view as an article of faith, I abstain from even tentatively suggesting that notable elevation of brow is incompatible with nonpatronage of Mr. Campanini's entertainments. Many a fair emprise of the stage has choked and succumbed in the inspissate vapors given off by the eager and incredible persons who explain, from time to time, that their approval is a stamp of intellectual worth.

Priggery in matters of music affects the cant that Opera is æsthetically unworthy. True culture, it seems, does not concern itself with sung drama, and is, in music, on speaking-terms only with the sonata and its more rarefied variants. Bizet is not, in the inner cult, a stepping-stone in the climb from Berlin to Brahms, and chastity is not in the soul of that aspirant who asks for a Puccini stop-over to break the journey from Jerome Kern to Vincent d'Indy.

There is high propulsive power in this line of blither, sending both opera and music—to observe Mr. B. L. T.'s pet distinction—nicely along the Via Dolorosa of empty seats, diminishing returns, and annual deficit. It serves to label all good music, whether written for the opera-house or the concert-hall, as a punitive pastime, and to give to the word "symphony" a connotation not essentially unlike that which we associate with a lazaretto.

A summary of reasons why Chicago should give at least the same measure of support to its Opera as to its Orchestra would make eloquent if, perhaps, inutile matter for more white paper than is available for the subject. That what is loosely called "grand opera" is not accepted as a perfect art-form is about the most piffling of reasons to the contrary.

I have never been able to discern wherein opera differs from what is called "poetic drama" as a persuasive form of artistic expression. Manrico singing his woes through the tower lattice or Lucy Lamentmore going loco in a contest with the clarinet is not, unless we accept the convention of the form, more absurd than Hamlet soliloquizing or Gloster stopping dead-center in front of a street-drop to explain to the audience his past, present, and contemplated takings-off of an assortment of royal and unsuspecting kinsmen.

That the Opera, given annually for a fixed season of ten weeks, is an item in Chicago's list of assets does not require demonstration beyond the simplest formulæ of mercantile arithmetic. While I suspect that the out-of-town buyer and cognate visitants with expense-accounts are not in easy possession of a definite enthusiasm for Debussy or Montemezzi, they are commercially victims of the allure exercised by a city in which opera is, in season, a nightly diversion.

I seem unable to put my finger on any line of resident merchandising which is not benefited, if only collaterally, by the relighting of the Auditorium from mid-November to mid-January. Even the keening of the theater-men when the Opera is reanimate is inspired by a fallacious tradition: in Chicago and New York City practice as an entrepreneur of the tuneless drama, I found the box-office most flourishing when the singers were in most formidable opposition.

Chief of Mr. Campanini's attributes that may be extolled is a certain gluttony for work: he will have, if he carry out his tentative schedule, given at the end of ten weeks not fewer than seventy performances. I am agreeably remote from error, I feel, in figuring $5,000 as the minimum cost of the average performance. That his prospectus thus intimates an expenditure of at least $350,000 is, doubtless, not the least interesting aspect of the enterprise, while it may serve to inspire respect for opera as a Chicago industry.

The season is to bring back at least two of the most gifted artists of the singing-theater in Miss Garden and Mr. Muratore. The former, we shall find, remains what she has long been—the most talented of our showmen, save only Bernhardt, and, unlike the French actress, still bipedal. Mr. Muratore is, in most of his facets, the First Tenor. There is, I understand, a widespread belief to the contrary, having to do with Mr. Caruso; but that is hardly a reason why I should go farther in qualification: tenors are matters of fact rather than of opinion.

The exotic Miss Farrar, too, comes back, in her new guise as the wife of an inexplicable actor whom she encountered, it seems, in what Mr. Hammond regards as her favorite retreat, the Lasky studio. Miss Raisa, a dim remembrance of three seasons ago, is to amaze us, Mr. Campanini insists—and his affirmations are indorsed by the pontifical Mr. Caruso, himself—as a dramatic singer whose like has never been.

From the rehearsals come nice reports of the new Tuscan tenor, Mr. Crimi, and a hint of something more than what the pleonastic Mr. Wilson calls "incomparable adequacy" in the strange baritone, Mr. Rimini. Also, we are told by those who have heard her in practice, Miss Galli-Curci is destined to renew the vogue of that bel canto which Donizetti, Bellini, and Rossini had ever in mind as they sat at the clavichord.

Theater Letter from New York.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It was about eight years ago that the founders of the New theater in New York formally dedicated the already historic pile at the corner of Sixty-first street and Central Park west to the cause of better drama. It was a most liberally endowed institution, you may recall, and by far the handsomest and richest showhouse in America.

It was hoped then that it would not only serve as an inspiration to American dramatists but create as well new standards in the allied arts of the theater that should have their effect in every theater in the country. The most wonderful prophecies we have ever read were spoken in behalf of its mission and the glorified hope of its backers.

But we were not ready for the New theater. At least New York was not ready. And after a weary struggle its founders decided the game was not worth the candle nor the New theater's mission worth what it was costing, and so gave it up.

Since then there have been innumerable attempts to "save" it. Light opera has been tried there, and grand opera in English; spectacular drama, vaudeville and musical shows. But still the deficit has been the outstanding item on the yearly balance sheets, until the attempts to salvage the building, long since named the Century, have become more or less a joke.

This season the founders decided that a supreme effort should be made. Something heroic would have to be done to popularize this playhouse, something that would attract not only the Broadway crowd and the hotel transients but the playgoing native as well. They looked about for the most successful producers of popular entertainment on Broadway and discovered Florence Ziegfeld Jr., creator of the "Follies," and Charles B. Dillingham, who had just injected new life into the Hippodrome.

These arch specialists in what many people want to see when they go to the theater seemed a likely pair to tie to and they agreed to undertake the job. As showmen Dillingham and Ziegfeld have one or two big ideas in common. They are agreed, first, that a row of stunning girls, handsomely gowned or discreetly ungowned, will attract a bigger crowd than any other exhibit that can be offered in the playhouse, and, second, that so long as the "show business" is a sort of circus business anyway, the manager with the biggest circus, the most animals and the greatest display of glittering spangles will get the business.

Money, with them, is something that should be spent to attract more money. They are the plungers of the profession. They never figure the cost of a feature; merely its effect. And each of them has spent in his time not one but many fortunes on experiments. They have first ordered and then discarded enough scenery to fill a dozen storehouses, and enough costumes and accessories to outfit a department store. They were, then, a wise selection for this particular task.

This week the Century theater was reopened under their direction with a musical entertainment called "The Century Girl." A fortnight hence they will add to it another midnight frolic on the roof of the theater. And with these two in combination there will be offered in the original home of an endowed art the most spectacularly expensive burlesque and musical entertainment the stage of America has ever seen.

Its success at this writing is colossal. As high as $50 a pair was paid for seats the opening night—a price forced up, it may interest you to know, because several of the founders of the New theater helped themselves to tickets before the sale opened and left comparatively few for the regular rounders.

From being the deadest of theatrical properties the Century has become a sort of Mecca. The twenty blocks that formerly separated it from the real theater center at Times square have suddenly dwindled to a mere step or two, or, at most, a half dozen turns of a taxi's wheels, and a very slight jolt to the meter.

As entertainment this new affair is exactly what might have been expected of it—a combination "Follies" and Hippodrome; save that added to the exhibit are the finest samples of Josef Urban's decorative stage art so far displayed.

He has remade the interior of the playhouse, adding enough gay hangings to the richly somber walls to lighten them and enough lights to display the hangings at their best. With the huge Century stage to work with, particularly the revolving inner stage, he has produced several remarkable scenic effects.

He sets the first scene with a "celes-

The Players: Their Plans and Prospects

By Percy Hammond

WALLACE M'CUTCHEON, who used to teach dancing at the Blackstone, is home from the wars, bearing a major's commission and many shrapnel wounds. He left the top of his head somewhere in France, and was otherwise abraded and contused in the fighting for the allies; but he plans to rejoin them after a period of healing and recuperation. Mr. McCutcheon enlisted with the British expeditionary force as a private and was awarded his promotions for valor on the field. He is from Cornell and a member of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity.

Laddie Cliff, the young vaudeville dancer; George Grossmith, the English musical comedian, and M. de Max, Bernhardt's leading man here in 1906, are among the allied armies' recent reinforcements, while Cyril Maude's new son-in-law, Maj. William La Touche Congreve, has received for courageous conduct in battle the D. S. O. and the Victoria cross.

Miss Annette Kellerman, the well known tank and film artist, proposes to extend her revenue producing activities by an excursion into the lecture field. An impressario of the lyceum bureaus has persuaded her into the rostrum life.

William Rock of Mr. Ziegfeld's "Midnight Frolic" was impudent to a Negro elevator boy in New York last week and was assaulted and battered therefor to such an extent that he was consigned to an hospital.

Although rich beyond the dreams of avarice, the merciless Mr. George V. Hobart announces that finishing touches have been put to a new "morality" extravaganza called "Happiness." It will be one of next spring's productions.

"An Old Sweetheart of Mine," the play fashioned from the verse of James Whitcomb Riley, no longer exists as an entertainment after a tour of the middle west. It was withdrawn last week in St. Louis.

"Bunker Bean," a Chicago success, is to give way this week at the Astor theater in New York to "Her Soldier Boy," a Chicago failure.

Lou Tellegen, "the gifted," and his drama, "A King of Nowhere," reached their angle of repose in Detroit last evening. Mr. Tellegen is the husband of Miss Geraldine Farrar of the Lasky studios.

The season of "Common Clay" at the Olympic nears its end. The Misses Dolly in "Their Bridal Night" probably will be sent hither by Mr. Woods to take the place of the Harvard Prize Drama.

Miss Rose Winter left the cast of "Fair and Warmer" at the Cort last night, and will be succeeded this evening by Miss Helen Gill. It is said of Miss Gill that she is a brunette and a graduate of Neff college, Philadelphia. She played the rôle of "Passion" in that favorite drama of the American clergy, "Experience," last season.

In his new play, "The Masquerader," Guy Bates Post will essay a dual impersonation—that of a member of parliament addicted to morphine and a young writer of novels. On the authority of Mr. Post's press ambassador, Mr. Post in this play "will wear evening clothes for the first time in several seasons."

The comedy touch at the close of "The Great Lover" was not in the original manuscript of the play but was the result of an afterthought of the star. "I had planned to end the play with the parting of Paurel and Ethel Warren, thus sounding a note of pathos at the final curtain," says Mr. Ditrichstein. "But when we were rehearsing George Cohan said: 'Always leave them laughing when you say good-by; you have every woman in the audience infatuated with you all through the play, why have it end sadly?' So I thought it over and decided that, as Jean Paurel is a great flirt, we would have him engage in the little telephone talk at the finish that has proved one of the most effective bits in the play."

One of the players in "Katinka" which, with T. Roy Barnes, will come to the Garrick next Sunday, is Albert Sackett, Miss Julia Sanderson's father. His role is that of "Petrov, an old servant."

In Washington Thursday night Mme. Bernhardt played Shylock, wearing the full regalia of the usurer, including the whiskers.

As to the pictured ladies of the week's drama, both are, in a measure, celebrities. Miss Ferguson is held in such esteem by the undergraduates of at least one great university that they regard her as the First Actress. Miss Hedman belongs in any correct list of most comely performers in the American theater. She is not a stranger in Chicago, although, unlike Miss Ferguson, she has not yet known the distinction of having her name in the lights. She is among the reasons for seeing "The Boomerang," kept until now from this community by the fact that New Yorkers kept on paying to see it.

MATTERS of MUSIC

EFREM ZIMBALIST, a violinist who is lately come into uncommon popularity, will be the soloist of the sixth program of the Chicago Symphony, Friday afternoon and Saturday night. He will play, for the first time in Chicago, Mr. Stock's new concerto.

The program otherwise will be made up of Handel's Concerto-Grosso in F-major and Brahms' first symphony—the first Brahms of the season by the Orchestra. The organization played this symphony in six programs under Theodore Thomas, and this week's will be the sixth under Mr. Stock.

The Flonzaleys Tomorrow

The Flonzaley quartet, which must be included in any competent list of the ablest chamber-music organizations in the world, will tomorrow afternoon, in The Playhouse, give the first of a series of four Chicago concerts, under the management of Messrs. Wessels and Voegeli. Explanation has already been made in Tomorrow's program is made up of Emanuel Moor's prelude and fugue in E-major, Mozart's quartet in C-major, and Glazounow's quartet in D-major (opus 1).

tial staircase." Think of that—a pathway from above down which the women of the ages—Queen Boadicea, Cleopatra, Helen of Troy, Joan of Arc, Catherine of Russia, Marie Antoinette, Empress Josephine, and Barbara Frietchie—advance to be in at the birth of Hazel Dawn as the Century Girl herself. A "celestial stairway" leading to the stage of the "Follies!" Hasn't that in itself a delicious suggestion of burlesque?

His most picturesque scene is an elaboration of the ocean grotto effect he used first in "The Garden of Paradise" and later in one of the Ziegfeld entertainments—a scene of wonderful beauty here set in the center of the big revolving disk with mermaids aplenty and schools of shimmering goldfish, banks of animated coral beds and dainty choristers with turtle shells on their backs.

And his most stirring effect is gained with a patriotic finale also displayed on the revolving stage in which an endless parade of flag-draped beauties and white-satined men of warsmen pass in review, maneuvering over terraced steps of deep blue and seeming to walk toward a limitless sweep of country, with a deep saffron sky at the horizon.

For the children—and this is distinctly a Dillingham touch—there is a huge copy of "Alice in Wonderland" from the illustrated pages of which the characters step to take part in a mad revel at the finale, when the King and Queen of Hearts give their ball, while from the foreground a fringe of stage youngsters look on in pantomimed amazement.

The biggest laugh is earned by an inspired burlesque of the Russian ballet—"The Ballet Loose." The principals are Leon Errolski, Marie Dressleroff and Harry Kelloski, the theme "The Stone Age," the music a Victor Herbert travesty of Stravinsky, and the scene a wonderful mountain side extending backward and upward a good forty feet into the flies.

The dance of the cave men and the cave ladies, with Miss Dressler appearing as Petite Publicbuildingsky and Mr. Errol as Waldorf Dryginski, is the most wildly hilarious hit of travesty that so far has been accomplished in this neighborhood, and when at the finale the courageous Dressler slides on her well padded tummy from the top of the miniature mountain to its foot, the audience fairly rocks in its seats.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE.

TO THE THEATREGOING PUBLIC!!

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 12th, 1916

I wish to call your attention to the fact that for a limited engagement beginning tomorrow evening, I am bringing to Powers' Theatre the Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes comedy, "The Boomerang."

Contrary to a custom that has been followed in the past several years by most theatrical producers with a popular New York success to their credit, I have steedfastly refused to organize and send out any duplicate companies in this play. I realize that I may be sacrificing much in taking this stand, but I feel positive that the theatregoers of the few cities to which I am sending "The Boomerang" will appreciate the excellence of the company which I have kept intact ever since the play's first performance at my own New York playhouse one year ago last August. Many of you have no doubt witnessed a performance of "The Boomerang" in New York and will be gratified to know that Arthur Byron, Martha Hedman, Wallace Eddinger, Ruth Shepley, Gilbert Douglas and Ida Waterman still head the cast and will appear at Powers' in the same roles with which they have been continuously identified.

Feeling that you will appreciate this effort to give you the best in my power, I beg to remain,

Faithfully yours,

DAVID BELASCO

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE.

The Selig-Tribune—Semi-Weekly

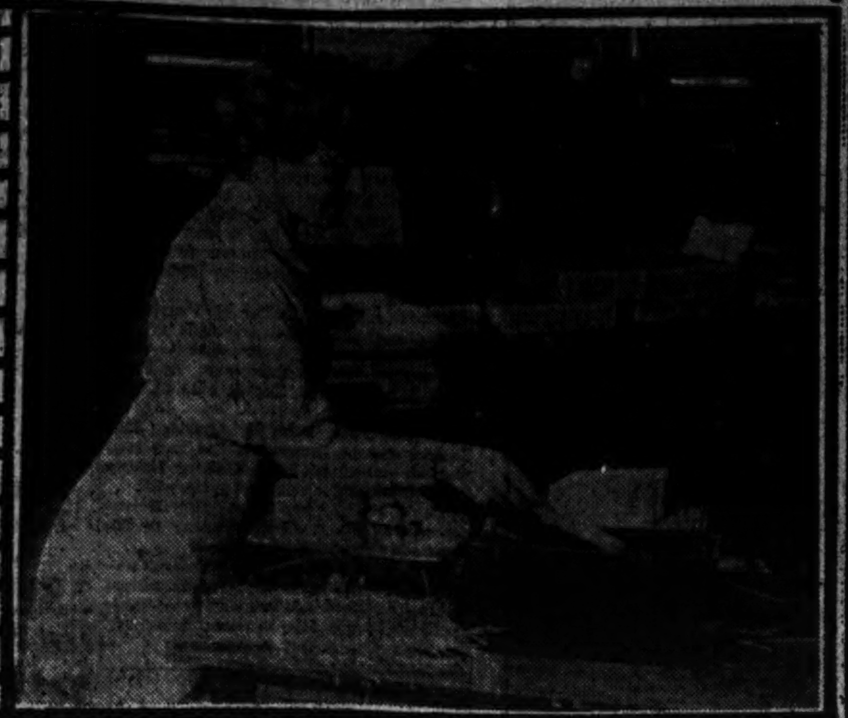
The World's Greatest News Film.

In the two issues this week are shown:

Number 90

BABY VICTIM CHRISTENS AMBULANCE.

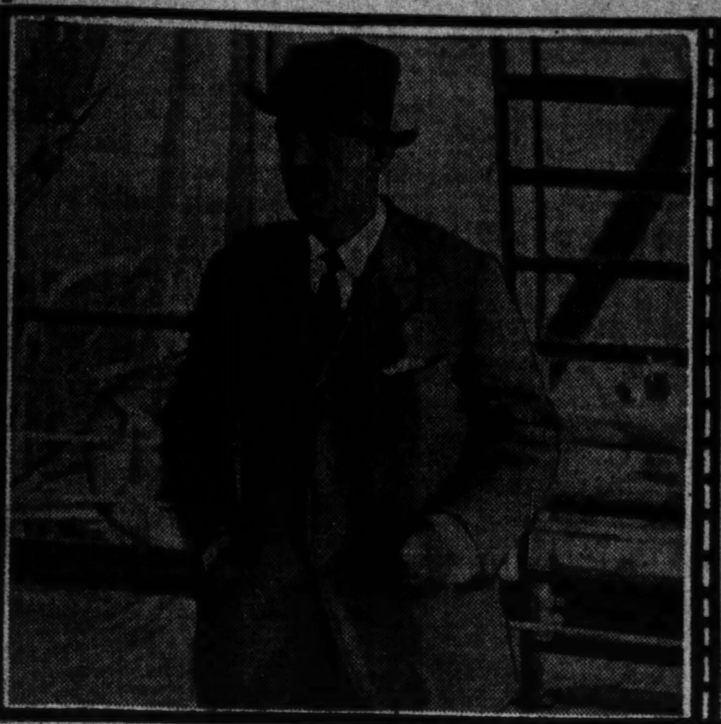
A tiny victim of infantile paralysis, Allen Anderson, aged 4, in New York City, christened a new Militia of Mercy ambulance by breaking a bottle of milk over its fender. The little hands could not manage it by themselves so his nurse aided. These autos are used for the transportation of infantile paralysis cases.



DID YOU NEED A PETTICOAT?

You were, quite likely, one of thousands of women who were victimized by a chain letter scheme, whereby you were promised a silk petticoat for 10 cents if you would write five letters to your women friends. The film shows what the fraud did to the post office at Washington.

Number 91



CAPTAIN ERNEST SHACKLETON, EXPLORER.

Captain Ernest Shackleton, bronzed and sturdy, with the fine lines about the eyes brought there by earnest peering into the horizon, is back from his Antarctic explorations. He arrived in New Orleans, La., the other day. The film shows a "closeup."

THE CAPITOL GETS WASHING!

It may or may not have been the mudslinging of the recent campaign that brought a battalion of men armed with cleansing apparatus to the nation's capitol and set them busily to work. Fact is, though, they arrived and now the capitol at Washington has a nice, clean face.

Miss Young Is Not Like the Lily of the Field.

By Mae Tinee

If you ardent fans have the idea that Clara Kimball Young spends most of her time when not working flying around amusing herself, take a deep breath and let another idea sift through. With all New York at its midnight best going to theaters and cabarets, this favorite of the shadow stage is tumbling into bed, too tired to do anything but just sleep. Here's her usual daily program:

Rises at 7:30 and breakfasts at 8, dictating between mouthfuls.

9 a. m.—Arrives at her studio, where she dresses. While waiting to be called she consults with dressmakers, directors, etc.

9:30—Begins work. From then on until 1 p. m. works steadily, making frequent changes of costume.

1 p. m.—Lunches.

2:30 to 5—Continues work.

5 p. m.—Motors downtown and visits milliners and modistes before the stores close.

6:30—Dines at home.

7:30—Visits various theaters where "The Common Law" is being shown and delights her audience by appearing in person, or, when not visiting the theaters, slips into a negligee and reads scenarios until bed time.

Sounds terrible, doesn't it? Really, though, you know the happiest people are the people who are busy all the time.

When Cartoonist King announced in his Sunday comic page that the water pressure 20,000 leagues under the sea amounts to 158,400,000 pounds per square inch, he said something and he started something. Every mathematical shark who read the announcement has been trying to figure it out for himself. Mr. King is being besieged with questions from every known source where arithmetic is a hobby.

Much indignation is being felt by the motion picture people round about Hollywood because of a paper containing some 2,000 signatures of citizens, property owners of that beautiful suburb, who complain that "the motion picture industry is a nuisance."

Permission was granted to Director J. P. McGowan to use the camps of a lumber company in the production of "A Lass of the Lumberlands." He also obtained permission to use its incline railroad for whatever purpose he might see fit. The railroad is approximately 1,700 feet long and in that distance rises 1,400 feet to the top of a range of mountains.

Bessie Barriscale is proudly exhibiting these days a telegram received from the Democratic national committee addressed to herself as the president of the woman's branch of the Woodrow Wilson Independent league of the Ince Triangle studio at Culver City. The telegram reads: "Accept for yourself and women associates our congratulations and appreciation of your efforts to aid in the reëlection of our splendid president."

Vivian Reed of Selig has consented to pose for the Selig-Tribune semi-weekly wearing the newest fashions displayed by that pictorial in its elaborate fashion department. She's known as the girl with the "million dollar" smile.

You will soon be able to see William S. Hart in another of his famous "bad man" parts. "The Devil's Double" is the name of the picture.

DOROTHY: So far as I know Marguerite Clark uses her own name. In private life Billie Burke is Mrs. Florens Ziegfeld. You are entirely welcome.

"What are you going to do about this child?" It's tragically young and tragically unhappy Jack Pickford as the hero in "Seventeen" who wants to know.

Clara Kimball Young

This actress, it is said, works harder than the traditional hodcarrier.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

ANXIOUS INQUIRER: Your criticism was a just one, I think. I, too, have wondered why a cast is flashed on the screen and then flashed off without giving the audience time to read it. Probably just thoughtlessness on somebody's part.

J. H. G.: There are times—!

BROWN EYED SUSAN: When applying for a position you should ask for the studio manager. Yes, Essanay and Selig companies still have studios in Chicago. No. Yes. No. Edna Mayo is in Chicago. She is 23 years old. Indeed, you have not asked too many questions, Brown Eyed Susan. I'm awfully glad to have heard from you.

MARTINI: They don't drink "regular drinks" during the filming of a picture. Reason? Well, reason it out on your own little reasoner.

DIMPLES: Yes, I know just how it is! Ernest Truex is 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 120 pounds, is 27 years old, and is a blonde. James Morrison is with the Ivan company, is 5 feet 8 inches tall, is 28 years old. Neither is mar-

ELEANOR J.: Henry Walthall is living in Chicago at the present time. The Essanay studio in Chicago is located at 1333 Argyle street; Clara Kimball Young is married, but has no children. Francis X. Bushman is married and has five children. Your conundrum is vurr' good.

MRS. W. E. M.: No, Billie Burke has not two children. She has one daughter—a vurr' vurr' new daughter. She was never married before becoming the wife of Mr. Ziegfeld. Marguerite Clarke is not married. You are entirely welcome.

A. A.: "Will my kindness extend so far?" Yes, A. A.; as far as the east is from the west, so far doth my kindness extend, but you'll have to send me a stamped, addressed envelope for the article I have on scenario writin and a list of firms that accept scenarios.

ERATO: What does your name stand for? Marguerite Clarke is 4 feet 10 inches in height; she is in her 30s. She was on the stage before going into motion pictures. I think that she was especially good in "Silks and Satins," "Still Waters," and "Mice and Men." No, I know nothing about the picture you mentioned.

WOULD-BE PRODUCER: The principal faults in productions are, it seems to me, the things they do or the things they leave undone. You are entirely welcome.

N.: If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope, I'll be delighted to send you the printed material I have on the doubling process.

Pauline Frederick and Marguerite Clarke, it is said, absolutely refused flattering offers to return to the stage and have signed new contracts with Famous Players.

INTERESTED: In "The Thousand Dollar Husband" Tom Forman took the part you mentioned. You're welcome.

We do hate to say it, but Myrtle Stedman should not let herself acquire any more avoirdupois. She was too pretty and charming to allow the good things of life to tempt her in the ways of fleshpots. It's always too late to get fat.

MR. L: Thank you so much for what you didn't do.

BLARNEY: Sure an' I love soft soap! Any time you have something nice to say you send it along and let me worry about the time it takes to read your letters, but don't let it all be Blarney. Be meaning what you say once in a while. Yes, the pictures of the actors you mentioned have been in the "Frame."

H. E. G.: No, Florence La Badie is not married. One of the latest pictures in which she appeared was "The Fugitive." Theda Bara says she (Theda) is 25 years old.

Mabel Normand, feeling the need of a business man at the head of her company, has engaged Harry L. Kerr as studio manager. Mr. Kerr is a well known executive in the motion picture field of Los Angeles. He's as long on system as Mabel Normand is on temperament.

S. A. G.: I will mail you the printed article I have on scenario writing and a list of firms, if you will send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope. No trouble at all.

The name of Robert Warwick has been added to the latest of Selznick Pictures stars. He is the first male star to be acquired by Mr. Selznick for his new enterprises and will, it is said, be presented along lines identical to those in operation by the Clara Kimball Young, Herbert Brennon, and Norma Talmadge productions.

It is said that eighteen buildings reproducing the old market place of mediæval Verona, built for the production of the Metro "Romeo and Juliet," were destroyed by a great storm just as the pictures were about to be taken, and had to be entirely rebuilt at a cost of more than $25,000.

Gay Parties Out to Hear Returns on Election Night.

By Mme. X.

THE pace quickens; society is on its first lap of the winter's race and is running already in fine form.

Last Tuesday, election night, was a gala occasion. There was hardly any one left quietly at home. Those who did not give dinners in their own menages were entertaining or being entertained at their clubs or at restaurants. It was more like a Mardi gras festival at New Orleans than a fateful national struggle. The loop streets were packed with people tooting horns, flicking teazers, whirling rattles, roaring, shouting and carrying on like college crowds at a football match.

Dense and noisy as the throngs were they were, nevertheless, as docile and good natured. An American crowd is the most decent, amiable assemblage of human beings in the world.

The height of downtown fervor and the point of densest humanity was at the intersections of Dearborn and Madison streets, where thousands of men and women watched THE TRIBUNE bulletin board returns. It was a Hughes crowd, as shown by the roars that greeted election returns in his favor, though the loudest bellows were evoked by the bulletins recording results of the women's vote in Illinois. Those who have been working for suffrage [which nowadays means woman's suffrage] in this state are quite satisfied with the women's record in this recent test of the state's newst citizens.

The Saddle and Cycle club was one of the gayest gathering points of those society folks eager for election returns. Every inch of space was taken. Even the long, glassed-in corridor, overlooking the moonlit lake, was filled with small tables to accommodate the diners. There was much good humored raillery between the Republicans and Democrats present. We do not take our politics so fiercely as the English take theirs. Over there a home ruler ordinarily never breaks bread with a Unionist, or a Conservative with a Liberal, though at present the war has leveled all such barriers.

Opera Season Opens.

At women's luncheons and over afternoon bridge games politics has been the only theme for weeks. Henceforth the talk will be divided between local gossip, domestic affairs, the allied bazaar, the opera, and winter sports.

Tomorrow is the opening night of the opera and there will be a calling to the colors of all Chicago's social cohorts. The historic old Auditorium has been scrubbed and swept for this occasion. A new crimson carpet is the only attempt at decoration, except for a rather fearsome repainting of the women's rest room. Boxholders will be rejoiced to know that the pink glow of the electric light globes—Mrs. John Carpenter's amelioration of the prevailing glare last year—has not been seriously crippled by the manipulation of the cleaners.

There will be some improvements in the internal and external management—the achievement of Leicester Spaulding—which are worthy of note. Instead of being interrupted by a visit from one or more social newsgatherers and having to give in muffled, indistinct tones the names of the box occupants, accompanied by directions as to spelling and correct initials, each box host or hostess will be handed a paper and pencil, on which he or she will be asked to write the names of entertainers and entertained.

Arrangements for arrival and disperal of vehicles will also be better regulated than ever before. An extra detail of traffic police has been promised by the city and at each of the three entrances of the Auditorium—Michigan and Wabash avenues and Congress street—there will be doormen with checks. Heretofore this service has been limited to the Congress street entrance. If any of the three avenues of ingress is crowded the police will divert the motors to another door, which will much expedite both arrival and departure of audiences.

While the sale of boxes isn't up to that of last year, the sale of seats has increased enormously and the main gallery, hitherto a difficult proposition, has disposed of large blocks of its central section to season ticket holders. Many women's clubs and musical organizations have bought season seats there.

Boxholders in 1889.

A comparison of the boxholders of the coming season with those of the opening opera season when the Auditorium was first built in 1889 is of interest to the old Chicagoan. Then as now Mrs. George M. Pullman had a box; then as now Mr. and Mrs. R. Hall McCormick had a box; then as now Mrs. Augusta Lehmann had a box; then as now Mr. and Mrs. Martin Ryerson had a box. But there the two lists diverge except in such cases as those of Mark Cummings and R. T. Crane Jr., boxholders this season, whose parents were boxholders in 1889.

Gone from Chicago, or from mortal ken, are such formerly well known families as the Torrences, Doanes, Trumbulls, Dents, Fullertons, Nickersons, Fernando Joneses, McKindleys, and Allertons. But that was twenty-seven years ago and in twenty-seven years a city like Chicago, grows, expands, and develops tremendously.

This year's list of boxholders is representative of the city's social pillars. Among them are the Ogden Armours, Watson Blairs, Cyrus McCormicks, John Bordens, James B. Wallers, Robert G. McGanns, Walter Brewsters, Julius Rosenwalds, John J. Mitchells, Samuel Insulls, William G. Beales, Stanley Fields, John Spoors, John S. Runnelises, Edward L. Ryersons, and John P. Wilsons.

Although they have been away three years and more the Harold McCormicks have always the same box, not a once a week box, but an every night one. Good and loyal citizens are the Harold McCormicks.

Two Affairs for Charity.

Tuesday night will be distinguished by two affairs for philanthropic purposes. The Civic Music association's fall festival concert takes place that evening at Orchestra hall, and will be a great occasion. Be sure to go if you love music and Chicago. What this association is doing in fusing and humanizing various sections of the city it would take too much paper at the present price of wood pulp to describe. Furthermore, the concert itself will be a musical treat, with its program of folk songs, orchestral pieces, and Mme. Claussen's singing.

The women who are interested in that pioneer among social centers, Eli Bates house, have secured "The Boomerang" at Powers' theater for Tuesday evening, and hope to make a goodly sum for their none too full coffers. As "The Boomerang" was one of the last winter's big New York successes, it will doubtless have an equally great appreciation here. At any rate, Mrs. Russell Tyson and her committee are counting on a full house Tuesday of representative people.

It is pleasant to go to a theater where nearly every face in the audience is more or less familiar. That is one of the compensations for paying more than the regular price for a ticket. Another is the knowledge that you have been gently separated from your money for an excellent cause.

Chicagoans in Europe.

Several of our wandering fellow citizens are lingering in foreign climes and threaten not to come home this winter. Among these are the Roy McWilliamses, who will be extremely missed if they don't return for the season's strenuous program. It seems possible that Mr. McWilliams was turned from his natural affection for his native place by the pains and fatigues he endured in working out the rôle of villain in the Casino movies last spring, when he was spared few humiliations and discomforts.

Mrs. McWilliams, whose good taste is proverbial, has been commissioned to buy two or three thousand dollars' worth of French objects of art and luxury for the allied bazaar.

The McWilliamses have been spending most of their time at their villa at Bidart at the foot of the Basque Pyrenees, where this barrier between France and Spain dips into the sea, a lovely spot.

The Peter Dudleys are other fellow citizens who will probably not return to Chicago this winter. Mrs. Dudley is completely absorbed in her work in a Paris military hospital and Mr. Dudley is assisting actively in various American enterprises in France to aid the suffering there.

Mrs. William J. Calhoun, who sailed yesterday on the Espagne, will also devote herself to help our sister republic by working for the American Fund for French Wounded. She will join her niece, Miss Mary Root, at Paris.

Mrs. Calhoun leased her house in Astor street to the William P. Martins for the winter, but before doing this she arranged to leave some of her priceless Chinese curios at the Art institute, where they are now on exhibit. Connoisseurs pronounce Mrs. Calhoun's collection of chineseiana as ranking next in point of quality to that of the famous Freer collection in Detroit.

Miss Katherine Dudley, who has been spending the summer with her sister, Miss Helen Dudley, just outside of London, is planning now to come home. Miss Helen Dudley is working in a hospital supply organization, having given up active nursing for this less arduous work because of her health's breaking down.

Miss Katherine Dudley gives in a late letter a vivid account of the recent Zeppelin raid, when one of the Zeps was destroyed and dropped to earth a blazing mass. Miss Dudley, together with all the inhabitants of that part of London, watched the end of the air battle and, as the fiery fragments fell, the multitude sent up a great shout of joy, men, women, and children exulting in the spectacle that meant torture and death to other human beings. She says, as do all other visitors to England, that the English are not in the least in terror of the German airships. But each raid adds to British hatred and resentment and postpones any after the war rapprochement.

Ryerson Home Nearing Completion.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson was one of Chicago's faithful citizens who came back especially to vote last Tuesday; also incidentally to make final arrangements for the completion of her new house in Lake View avenue.

Wherever Mrs. Ryerson is she is an active, vitalizing force, a force that is always working for the good of the community. Last summer she and her equally brilliant daughter, Miss Suzette Ryerson, were the principal agents in collecting a fund of $212,000 to transform the orphan asylum at Cooperstown, N. Y., near which is the Ryerson summer home, into an up to date vocational school for boys and girls, the dependent children of New York state. The original asylum was started and endowed by Susan Fenimore Cooper, the daughter of James Fenimore Cooper, the famous writer.

The site is a beautiful one overlooking Cooperstown and the buildings are to be added to, enlarged, and altered by the best architect that can be got. The children, 150 of them at a time, are to be clothed, sheltered, fed, and trained to some practcial avocation.

The Ryersons expect to eat their Thanksgiving dinner in their new house.

When romance sweeps three fair daughters from one home, and all of them plight their troths in one week, it is little wonder that friends of the entire family flock about to offer congratulations en masse. That is what happened to the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. R. McAuley of 5948 Midway park, whose three daughters announced their engagements yesterday to their wide circle of friends. Miss Annabelle McAuley is to wed Dr. J. Henry Roth, Miss Eleanor McAuley has chosen Dr. H. Nelson Orr, and Miss Josephine McAuley will become the bride of J. Mathew Paisley. The weddings are to be celebrated as one, and the unusual event will take place in January.

FUTURE EVENTS

Plans for the annual ball of the Bachelors and Benedicts on Nov. 29 are shrouded in mystery. The utmost secrecy is being maintained by the committee in charge, but the chairman, Arthur G. Cable, yesterday admitted there would be several unusual features. According to custom, there will be few debutantes in the invitation list. It will be a ball rather of the younger married set. Instead of a dinner dance, as in seasons past, this year's event will be a ball with supper, but there will be many dinner parties preceding it, among those entertaining at private dinners being Mr. and Mrs. George R. Nichols Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen Jr. Miss Lolita Armour will be guest of honor at the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Laurance H. Armour. Vocational Bureau Committee Needs Scholarship Funds

By Hazel Whitaker.

SOMETIMES it's the quiet, good turn that needs most to be brought to light, and so it seems with the work that the scholarship committee of the joint committee of the vocational bureau is doing. About five years ago the bureau was organized and promoted by some of Chicago's far sighted citizens who realized the necessity of giving children who had reached a working age a chance to make better livings under improved conditions.

The work of the bureau grew to such an extent that it was last year taken over by the board of education. This change in nowise affected the field of the scholarship committee, because its work will always be in the nature of educational charity; in fact, the change has increased the number of applicants, hence the need of more money for these scholarships.

For this purpose a series of entertainments has been planned, the first of which was given recently by Mrs. Mabel Wing Castle. The next is to be given on Thursday evening at the Chicago Beach hotel. Miss Julia Cooley will read some of her poems, to which Miss Edith Lobdell will play original accompaniments, and Mrs. Harry Lobdell will sing some of Miss Edith Lobdell's compositions. The tickets are $1 and can be purchased from the chairman, Mrs. Addison W. Moore, 5730 Blackstone avenue. Over 600 have been given out to various clubs and the committee is hopeful at least that all these will be taken.

Two hundred and thirty-nine individuals and representatives from forty-one prominent women's clubs go to make up the personnel of the joint committee, of which the scholarship committee is a part. The school board consults with this committee in regard to the activities of the bureau.

It is estimated that every year from 12,000 to 15,000 children leave school to go to work at the age of 14. Between 14 and 16 is a stage when few employers will hire children, and if they do the wage is necessarily low, for ninety-nine times out of a hundred the children are in no way prepared for any definite line of work.

Most of the children of this age are referred to Miss Anna Davis, who has been in charge of the bureau since its opening. She, with her assistants, investigates the home conditions of every child thus applying, as well as the working conditions into which the children are sent. From all the number applying last year, seventy were chosen by the scholarship committee to be kept in school, either because of unusual intellectual ability or because they were physically unable to become wage earners.

The cost of keeping each child in school is about $10 a month, which amount is paid directly to the family. This expense has always been borne by individuals or by various clubs, some of which support as many as ten children. Most of the boys thus sponsored receive technical or commercial training at the various high schools; the girls learn to sew at the Lucy Flower school, the University of Chicago settlement trade school, or the Hull House trade school. The lowest wage accepted by Miss Davis for her protégés is $4 a week, the average received $6. At this the demands of the employers for trained help far exceed the supply. During September over $100 was paid out to families by the committee and this amount will increase as the season advances.

The vocational luncheon is held the second Friday of each month at the Woman's City club, with an average attendance of seventy-five. Mrs. Addison W. Moore is chairman of the scholarship committee; Mrs. Sarah Hobson, vice chairman; Mrs. Payson S. Wild, secretary; Mrs. James W. Thompson, treasurer. The other members are Mrs. C. D. Wescott, Mrs. Robert A. Millikan, and Mrs. Harry A. Bigelow.

Miss Edith Lobdell

Miss Julia Cooley will read from her poems and Miss Edith Lobdell will play original accompaniments to these for the benefit of the scholarship fund of the vocational committee. The entertainment will be held at the Chicago Beach hotel on Thursday evening. These same young women will entertain the members of the College club on Wednesday evening with a program based on Miss Cooley's masque, "The Builders of Walls," which won first prize in a recent contest.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. X

Debutantes Out of the Limelight for the Present.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—With a wedding, an engagement, and an injunction accomplished among society women last week, not one of whom will ever touch again the age that divides the young from the old, which is 40, the debutantes are rather in the background for the present.

Mrs. Henry Flagler will be married on Wednesday to Robert Worth Bingham. Rumor here had it at first that the wedding would take place in Palm Beach, at the home in which she lived with her first husband. This, however, is false. The marriage will take place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones, 5 East Sixty-first street. However, the Rev. Dr. George Morgan Ward, rector of the Flagler chapel in Palm Beach, who had so often preached for her late husband and comforted him and sat with him, will perform the ceremony.

The couple will furthermore divide their time between New York, Louisville, home of the bridegroom, and the residence in Palm Beach of the husband who is no more.

Mrs. Flagler has now been a widow for four years. Life acts up in this situation as strangely as it usually manages to do. Her husband to be she met eight years before she knew the one now in his grave. Twenty-three years ago, when both were young and presumably ripe for romance, they met at the commencement exercises in a university. Strange that they did not succumb to each other's charms at that appropriate time. Still, not to quarrel with what did not happen but to record what did, the ex-judge of today, who was then barely beginning the practice of law, went his way and married a southern girl, who bore him three children and then died. You know what happened to the girl. She served as the third wife of one of the founders of the Standard Oil company, who left her a widow with $70,000,000.

Last year this couple met again at a house party in Asheville, N. C., and the belated romance sprang up then. They say that the bridegroom to be is a striking figure, a southern gentleman with the chivalry for which that part of the country is distinguished, and a clear headedness that is rare indeed. He belongs to a number of the most exclusive clubs in the country, including one in New York.

Mrs. J. S. Huyler a Bride.

The other bride referred to, as you can perhaps guess, is Mrs. W. J. Cooke, widow of the late candy manufacturer, John S. Huyler. The ceremony took place on Monday, but no one knew a word about it until Tuesday night. Then no one could get any satisfaction from the family or servants of the bride in New York. The bridegroom's mother in Philadelphia gave out the only announcement. She mentioned among other things that her son was a widower of two years and is 33 years old.

The ceremony was in nowise elaborate. It took place in a church in New York in the presence of just two witnesses, one a friend of the bridegroom and the other of the bride. Although the news of the marriage is a flooring surprise to their friends, the bridegroom's family insists the couple have been planning it for some time. Mrs. Huyler was a widow for six years. The couple are now staying at her town house in New York, where she formerly lived with her first husband.

As for the injunction darkly hinted at in my first sentence. Of course the heroine of this incident is no other than Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel of Philadelphia. You have probably followed her exciting story in the cable reports from London. At any rate, you know that she wishes a divorce from her husband, who is dwelling in London.

If there is anything difficult to obtain in England, it is a divorce. You know how the queen stands on the subject. She will not even receive the Duchess of Marlborough, who was Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, because she is divorced.

At any rate, to return to Mrs. Drexel. This is the news: She was last week granted an injunction for a fortnight on her application to prevent her husband from serving her with papers in an action in the French courts to obtain money that British courts recently decided belonged to her. It is stated that Mr. Drexel has started an action in France to fight Mrs. Drexel's claims.

I ask you, with all of this excitement stirred up by the older members of society, what chance have the debutantes for a hearing? They are, nevertheless, getting their meed of attention on their future events. Their elders are still planning the winter for them.

Some of the smart matrons, for instance, have arranged to dispose of Sunday evenings in just the manner that I have always felt the powers ought to dispose of Constantinople. They feel that Sunday evenings, being the prize times of the week in which more in the way of romance and felicitous marriage depends than any other, ought not to belong to individuals but to the debutantes collectively. They have therefore arranged to give them over to a series of musicals at which everybody will be present, without extra toll on some and the privileges of possession on others.

Hair Removed

El Rado—a Sanitary, Colorless Liquid

El Rado removes hair on the face, neck, shoulders, or under the arms in a few moments.

While necessary for the wearing of sleeveless gowns and sheer blouses, women remove the hair from their underarms as much for comfort and cleanliness as to meet the dictates of fashion.

It also relieves excessive perspiration and enables a woman to discard with safety the cumbersome dress shield.

El Rado is easily applied with a piece of absorbent cotton or small sponge. The sanitary liquid first dissolves the hair—then it is washed off. El Rado is absolutely harmless, and does not increase or coarsen later hair growth—more agreeable and "womanly" than the use of the razor.

Dry Gains Give New Impetus to Temperance Work

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

TODAY is world's temperance Sunday. It is probable the day will be more widely observed than at any time in the world's history.

The fact that as a result of last Tuesday's election one-half of the states in the union have outlawed the saloon, either by constitutional or statutory prohibition, has given a new impetus to the temperance movement. The necessities imposed by the world war have caused drastic action to be taken against the use of liquor by nearly every European nation.

The states which are now dry are: Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, Colorado, Georgia, Kansas, Idaho, Iowa, Michigan, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Mississippi, and Maine. The states which elected dry legislatures and governors and are expected to become dry by statutory legislation this winter are Utah and Florida. It is understood that the territory of Alaska is also in the dry column. In many of the states not under prohibition there are large sections which are dry by local option votes, as in the case of Illinois, which has fifty-two dry counties.

Counting by extent of territory there are 2,637,490 square miles dry and 336,400 square miles wet.

Of the population those under wet rule have 56,323,390 and those under dry rule 45,649,870. These statistics are announced by the Anti-Saloon league.

In the observance of the world's temperance Sunday the churches will seek to educate the youth of the land in the moral and physical ruin which alcoholic drink entails and to encourage the practice of total abstinence.

Win my chum week in Methodist Episcopal churches begins today, continuing through next Sunday. The object of the week is a revival in religious interest among the young people of the churches, and it is under the supervision of the Epworth League society. Nightly meetings will be held by the young people of the more than 200 Methodist churches in Chicago and suburbs, but in some churches gatherings of a group of churches will be held.

One feature of the week will be meetings at which representatives of the Chicago Boys' clubs will be the speakers. At 6:30 o'clock this evening there will be three groups of boys, from twelve to fifteen boys in each group, which will take part in the following churches: Broadway church, Broadway and Buckingham place, W. C. Kinsey in charge; Gross Park church, School and Paulina streets, O. B. Ransopher in charge, and Bowen church, Greenwood and Byron streets, E. H. Ockert in charge. The boys will also hold a meeting at Ravenswood church tomorrow night and other meetings next Sunday.

Win my chum week is observed nationally, the general headquarters being in Chicago. The Rev. Dr. Wilbur F. Sheridan, 740 Rush street, general secretary, is in charge.

Bishop Adna W. Leonard of the San Francisco area of the Methodist Episcopal church and Bishop Nicholson of Chicago will be the speakers at the first Methodist social union banquet of the season at the Auditorium hotel on Nov. 21. Bishop Leonard is president of the Epworth league, the young people's organization of the church.

The Rev. John P. O'Mahoney

The Very Rev. J. P. O'Mahoney, C. S. V., is president of St. Viator's college, located at Bourbonnais, near Kankakee, Ill. On Tuesday, Nov. 20, a school of agriculture will be opened at the college, which will afford the first opportunity, it is said, for the young men of the Roman Catholic church to pursue the study of agriculture under church influences.

In a recent address before the farmers of Kankakee county President O'Mahoney declared it was inconsistent for farmers to educate their sons for a commercial and professional life, as is done at the ordinary college, and then expect them to be content to stay on the farms. A young man to be content to remain as a farmer, he said, must have his training in the direction of the farm and not away from it.

President O'Mahoney has associated with him in the special school of agriculture Prof. Andrew E. Anderson, B. S., University of Nebraska, dean; Charles A. Roach, B. S., Franklin college; Clarence J. Kennedy, M. S., Notre Dame university; Patrick F. Kirbey, M. A., Harvard university; Terence J. Rice, M. A., and Richard J. French, both of St. Viator's college.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, will address the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall this evening. His subject will be "The Individual's Duty in War." A. C. Bartlett of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co., a trustee of the club, will also take part in the program, and the Rev. Dr. A. J. McCartney of Kenwood Evangelical church will serve as chaplain.

Secretary Roosevelt, who is a graduate of Harvard and Columbia law schools, was elected to the New York state senate in 1910. He resigned to accept his present appointment from President Wilson. He has served on a number of important commissions and identified himself with various civic and social interests in New York.

The corner stone of Our Lady of Mercy Roman Catholic church, 4432 North Troy avenue, near Montrose avenue, will be laid today just preceding the holding of 11 o'clock mass. The pastor of the church, the Rev. Fr. H. P. Coughlin, will be in charge. He will be assisted by the Altar, Rosary, and Holy Name societies.

Father Coughlin completed five years of service as pastor of the parish last June. The church is the fourth building to be erected on the ground, the other buildings being the rectory, the convent of Our Lady of Mercy, and the building which until now has been used as both church and school. The new church will be faced with tapestry brick. The roof will be of tile. The auditorium will seat 900. Zachary T. Davis is the architect. The parish, with 100 families, was established in the midst of a prairie. There are now 450 families, with almost weekly accessions.

Efficiency day will be observed today by the Unity Evangelical Lutheran church, Balmoral and Magnolia avenues. The day marks the eleventh anniversary of the organization of the church. Last Sunday ground was broken for a new building to cost $45,000. C. H. Weller of Pittsburgh, Pa., an efficiency expert of the laymen's movement, will speak at two services in the morning, at 9:30 and 10:45, and in the evening at 7 and at 7:45 o'clock. Mrs. Dr. O. D. Baltzly of Omaha will also speak at the evening service. In the afternoon an every member birthday visitation will be made under the direction of Mr. Weller. The Rev. David A. Davy is pastor.

The choir of the Second Baptist church, Lincoln street and Jackson boulevard, will sing Gaul's "Holy City" this evening at 7:45 o'clock. W. M. Mason is director. There will be a chorus of seventy-five voices, a quartet, and Miss Lynn Roehl, soloist.

"Wonderlift" Corsets Are for Every Woman, Slender or Stout
—Third Floor—Center—

NOTE:—Physicians attending the "N. H. F. I." sessions at Hotel Sherman this week, will find that we fit corsets exactly as they do at the Institute.

For every woman must remember that she has the selfsame internal organs to support and that in so many cases a woman is ill because some one of the organs is not properly supported—your physician will tell you that there is no other condition so generally overlooked and so completely ignored as the various types of enteroptosis. Your illness may be due to a sagging of the abdominal contents pressing on the bladder, subjecting the pelvic nerves and blood vessels to undue irritation and thereby deranging the entire pelvic mechanism and functioning.

The remedy in that case is to be properly fitted to the right kind of corset to give abdominal support, and the corset should be the Nemo Standard Wonderlift and it should be fitted here because each of our corsetieres is thoroughly trained in the latest hygienic fitting methods, is a graduate as well of the "N. H. F. I." and fits dozens of Nemo corsets a week, for we are the largest distributors of Nemo corsets in Chicago—for this fitting service, so highly commended by many of the leading physicians of Chicago, no charge is made.

The Wonderlift corset is a fashionable corset made with patented features that support the abdominal walls and keep the kidneys, intestines, stomach and liver from sagging. It is well named the "Wonderlift." It helps women to help themselves—to conserve their health and in many cases regain it when lost. The Wonderlift is made in five models—for every type of figure.

No. 557—For the extremely slender figure with prominent hip bones.
No. 556—For the medium figure.
No. 555—For the tall, stout figure.
No. 554—For the short, stout figure.
No. 553—For the very short, stout figure.

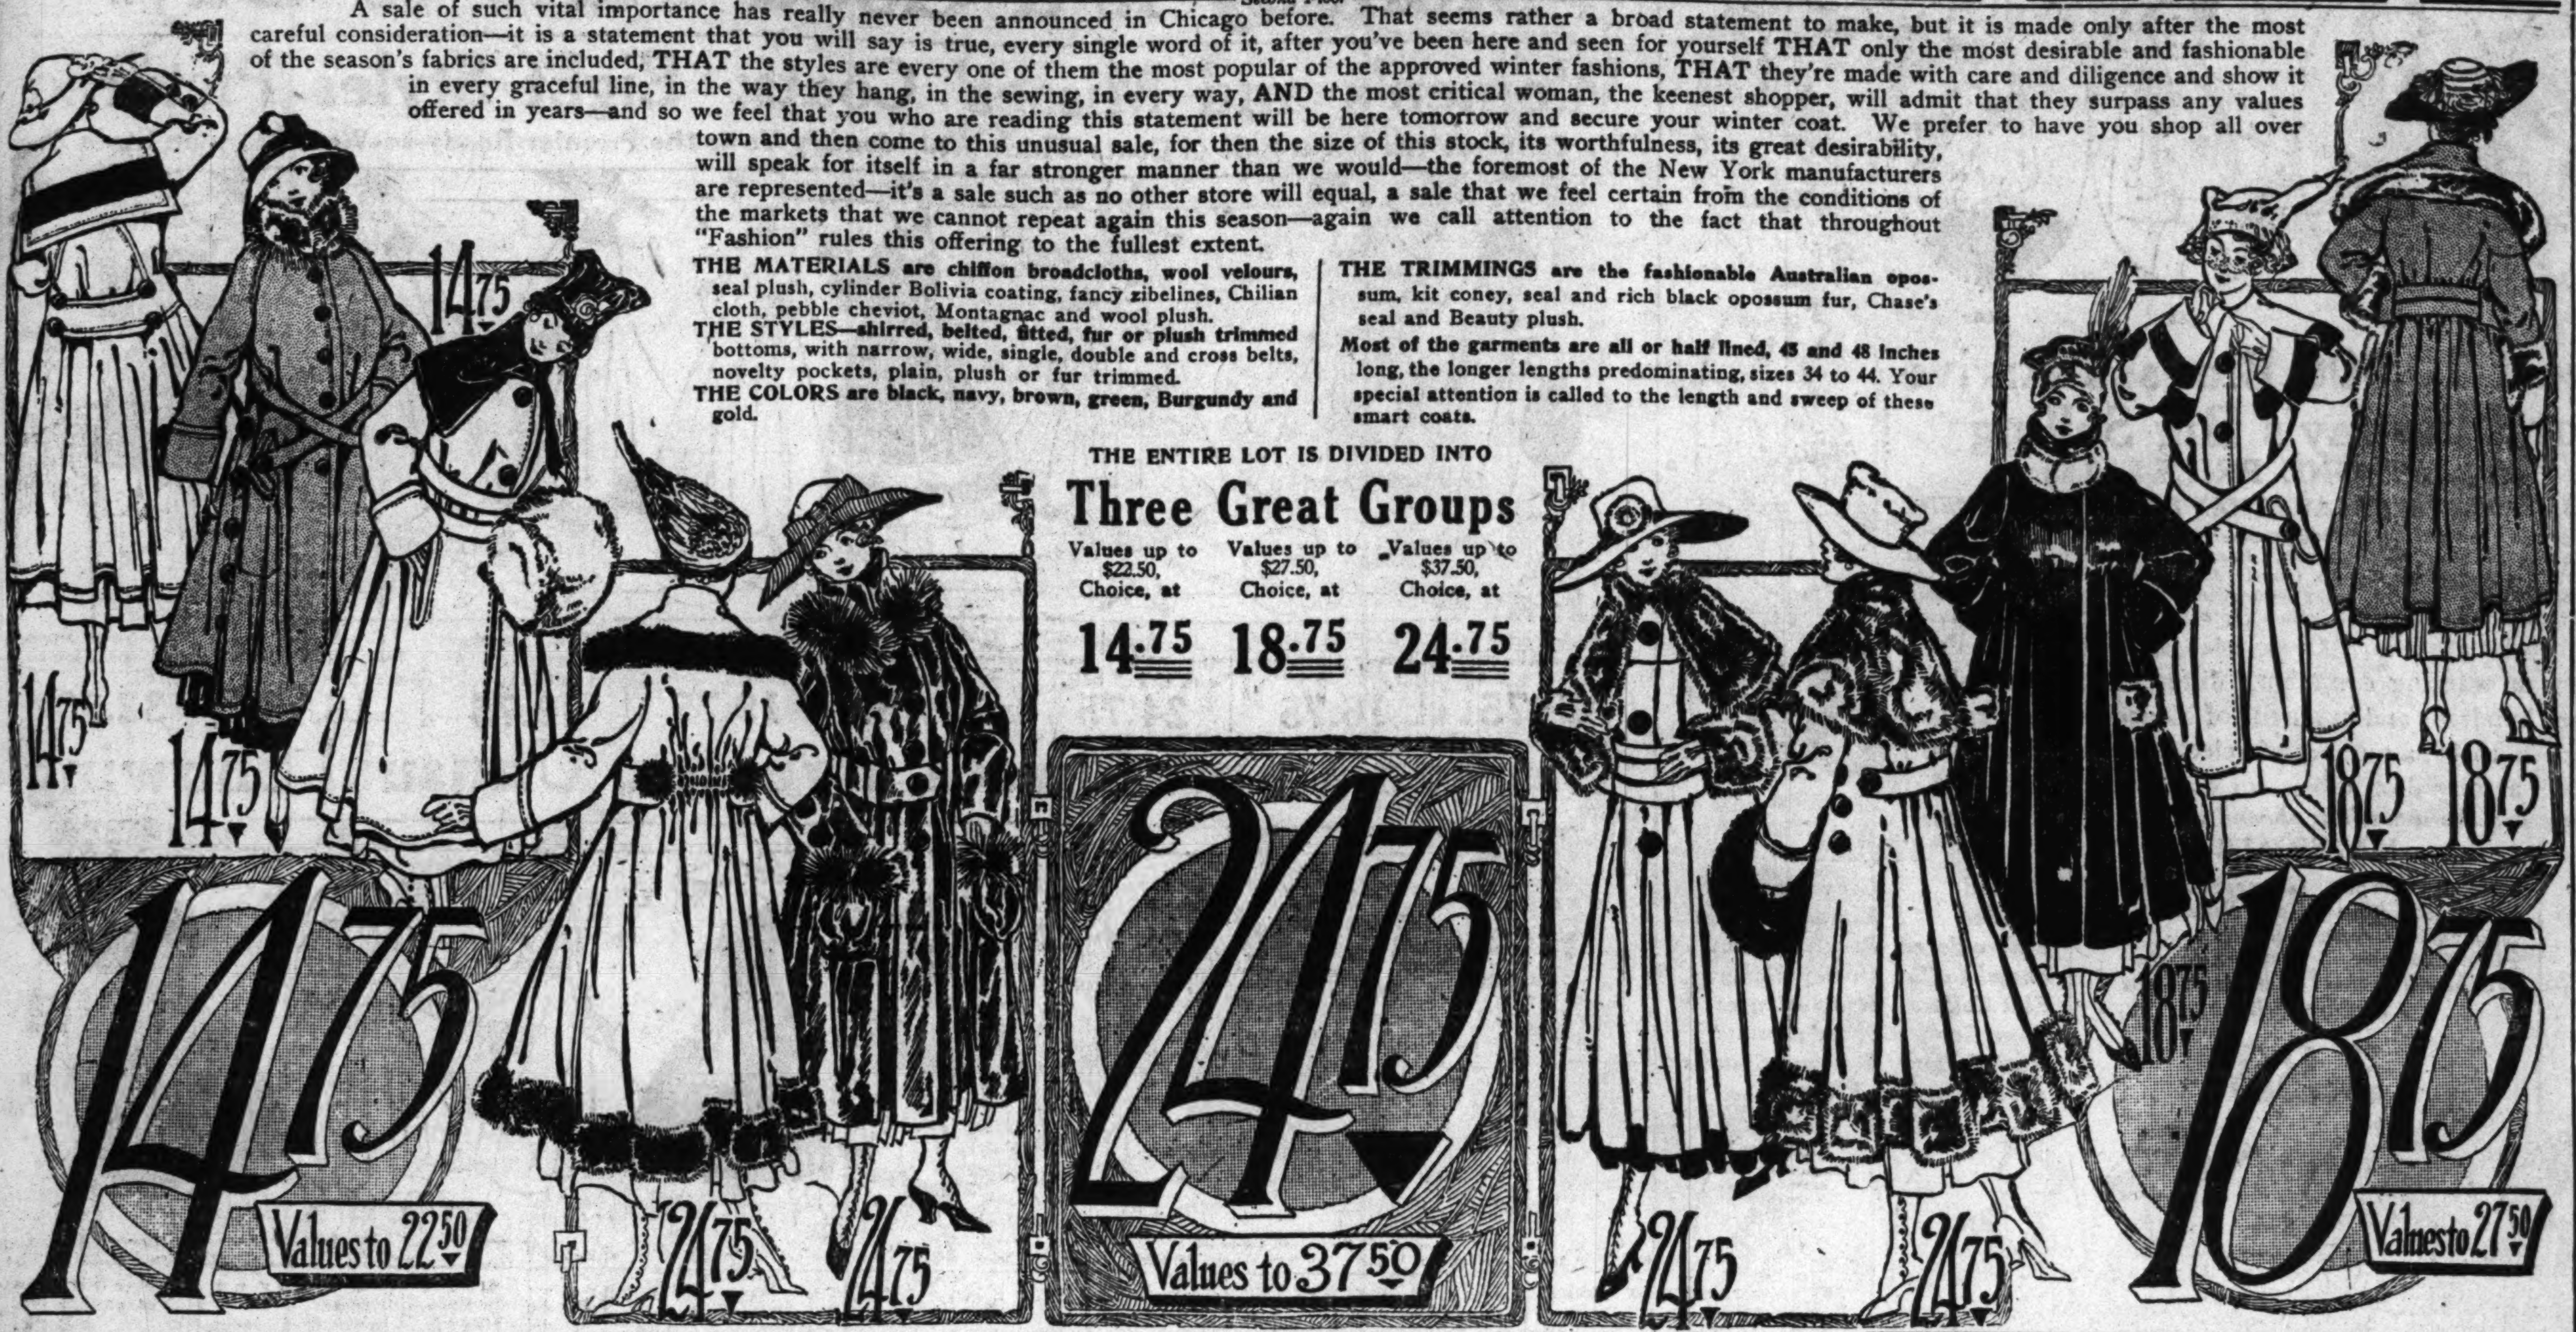
A Sale of Vital Importance to Every Woman Ready to Buy Her Winter Coat

Second Floor



A sale of such vital importance has really never been announced in Chicago before. That seems rather a broad statement to make, but it is made only after the most careful consideration—it is a statement that you will say is true, every single word of it, after you've been here and seen for yourself THAT only the most desirable and fashionable of the season's fabrics are included, THAT the styles are every one of them the most popular of the approved winter fashions, THAT they're made with care and diligence and show it in every graceful line, in the way they hang, in the sewing, in every way, AND the most critical woman, the keenest shopper, will admit that they surpass any values offered in years—and so we feel that you who are reading this statement will be here tomorrow and secure your winter coat. We prefer to have you shop all over town and then come to this unusual sale, for then the size of this stock, its worthfulness, its great desirability, will speak for itself in a far stronger manner than we would—the foremost of the New York manufacturers are represented—it's a sale such as no other store will equal, a sale that we feel certain from the conditions of the markets that we cannot repeat again this season—again we call attention to the fact that throughout "Fashion" rules this offering to the fullest extent.

THE MATERIALS are chiffon broadcloths, wool velours, seal plush, cylinder Bolivia coating, fancy zibelines, Chilian cloth, pebble cheviot, Montagnac and wool plush.

THE STYLES—shirred, belted, fitted, fur or plush trimmed bottoms, with narrow, wide, single, double and cross belts, novelty pockets, plain, plush or fur trimmed.

THE COLORS are black, navy, brown, green, Burgundy and gold.

THE TRIMMINGS are the fashionable Australian opossum, kit coney, seal and rich black opossum fur, Chase's seal and Beauty plush.

Most of the garments are all or half lined, 45 and 48 inches long, the longer lengths predominating, sizes 34 to 44. Your special attention is called to the length and sweep of these smart coats.

Last Auto Race for the Vanderbilt Cup to Be Run at Santa Monica on Thursday.

About this time last year William K. Vanderbilt Jr., when asked what he planned to do with the famous cup that bears his name, replied: "On one of my trips to Europe I am going to drop the cup in the Atlantic ocean with the words, 'Here goes nothing!' It will not be missed, for nobody wants it. The cup and the race for it have outlived their usefulness."

The huge silver flagon is not being used now as a drinking cup by the mermaids, however. At the present time it is in Santa Monica, Cal. On Thursday Resta, Aitken, De Palma, Rickenbacher, and other stars of the American speed constellation will match their skill and daring in a 300 mile race for its possession and $7,000 in prize money.

Thursday's race, however, will be the last classic for the cup on which have been inscribed the names of George Heath, Victor Hemery, Louis Wagner, George Robertson, Harry Grant, Ralph Mulford, Ralph De Palma, and Dario Resta. Santa Monica has saved the trophy from immersion in the Atlantic, but the millionaire donor and the patron saint of automobile racing in this country has decided to retire the once coveted prize for all time after this year.

The cup and the race, which had its inception in 1904, will pass to the realm of remembered things.

Before Dido went to her funeral pyre she attired herself as though she were to receive a potentate. When she bared her arm for the poisonous sting of an adder Cleopatra wore the richest gown in her regal wardrobe. So will it be with the last Vanderbilt cup race. The death of the classic will be a gorgeous spectacle. California has supplied a couch of wondrous beauty on which the race of all automobile races will be laid to rest. With barking exhausts and thundering motors the fastest cars in America will sound the Vanderbilt's requiem.

The Vanderbilt was America's first automobile road race. In the early days it served as a laboratory for the motor car manufacturers of this country, who in the white heat of competition discovered faults in their products and corrected them. Foreign cars and foreign drivers were attracted to the classic. Millionaire sportsmen of New York sought fame as speed merchants in their quest for the cup. The trophy and the race were an inspiration. Gotham's four hundred regarded the contest as one of the social events of the season.

But that day is past. The luster of the Vanderbilt has been dimmed by speedway competition. Interest in the race has gradually waned since the blue ribbon contest was transferred from Long Island, its cradle, in 1911.

Being a member of the Self-Haters' society (club motto: "Death to Looking Glasses"), I will quote from an article by J. C. Burton appearing in the November issue of Motor:

"The death of the Vanderbilt cannot be diagnosed as a sudden demise. Its heart beats have been weaker each year. Savannah, Milwaukee, Santa Monica, and San Francisco, cities that can boast of having staged the contest in recent years, could not furnish the enthusiasm, the color, the competition that featured the classic when it was the sporting event de luxe on the calendar of Father Knickerbocker. In the atmosphere of the nation's metropolis the race thrived. When removed from the city that gave it life the race gradually lost the glamour once attached to it. Like many another Broadway production, it did not 'go over as big' in the provinces as it did when staged in the attractive glare of the Great White Way.

"Beat back on the trail to yesterday ten years, when the Vanderbilt was the race of all automobile races if you would know its glory, now fading; if you would catch the fever of crowd chaos and crowd enthusiasm; if you would be a speck of personality on a scene that perhaps never will be duplicated in the history of sport.

"It is the night before the Vanderbilt. The race is to start at sunrise. In theaters and cafés aristocratic New York has gathered to speed along the lagging hours with dramatic and alcoholic spurs. The actors, who are entertaining the plutocrats and social leaders of the metropolis; the waiters, to whom the gossip of the race is almost as welcome as the tips they receive, are just as impatient as the crowds that they serve. They, too, are petulantly awaiting the coming of the dawn and the enthusiasm and thrills that will attend it. The race is for the masses' as well as the classes. The plebeian has no limousine or powerful touring car, but he will be on Long Island when Starter Fred J. Wagner sends the first car away.

"To 500,000 enthusiasts the autumn night is one of long and sleepless vigil. The carnival spirit is rampant on Broadway; the lights seem brighter and the nocturnal hours longer than ever before. Two hours before midnight the chaotic exodus from the city to Long Island has started. Each succeeding hour adds hundreds of automobiles to the stream of travel that is flowing to the course. The bridges and ferries across East river are stormed by the motorists. The lamps of the crawling cars make the highways of Long Island as bright as the Great White Way; the din of honking horns and screeching sirens is deafening. Trolley cars, bells clanging for the right of way, and passengers hanging precariously to steps and running boards, add ear splitting notes to the infernal noise that would inspire a Dante.

"Around the twenty mile course, lined and choked by thousands of automobiles, glow inviting campfires, built by the spectators to take off the chill of the early morning or to bring the water in tin coffee pots to a boil. It is a bivouac of a mighty motoring army whose reveille will be the challenging roar of the Vanderbilt cup contenders.

"Occasionally a racing car, perhaps painted yellow or red and easily identified by its bright color and lack of embellishments, snakes its way through the throng of automobiles. The bark of the exhaust, demanding passage, is commanding and nerve tingling. The mechanician holds a farm lantern aloft so that the driver may find his way in the darkness and confusion. At the drivers' meeting several hours before, each competitor was given individual instructions how to reach the starting line, an extraordinary precaution, but necessary because of the crowds and the danger of a driver not getting through.

"In the grandstand are massed Gotham's wealth and aristocracy. The occupants of the boxes of the crude, wooden structure sit in the golden circle of the Metropolitan opera house during New York's grand opera season. They have made the Vanderbilt the race of the four hundred by their presence. They cheer the mad driving of Nazzaro with the same enthusiasm as they applaud the tenor solo of Caruso.

"Now comes the dawn. The course is clear. Motors roar a challenge. The knights of speed and their steel mounts are veiled in a cloud of smoke. Starter Wagner begins to toll off the seconds as the sun peaks over the eastern horizon 'Ten, nine, eight, seven, six, five, four, three, two, Go!' A slap on the driver's back and the rattle of shifting gears and the Vanderbilt cup race is on. The vigil of the sleepness night for 500,000 is over.

"This was the atmosphere of the Vanderbilt that was, the Vanderbilt that took its life from the dawn, the Vanderbilt that absorbed all the energy and brilliancy of the rising sun."

The death of the Vanderbilt on Thursday will bring tears to the eyes and lumps to the throats of hundreds of automobile racing enthusiasts and to many drivers and officials. The race was the pet project of Vanderbilt himself. He labored night and day for its success and gave to the classic a name and a personality as famous and magnetic as that given to the financial world by his grandfather and father.

Then there is Fred J. Wagner, the veteran starter, who was in charge of the timing of the first race and sent the contenders away in every other battle for the cup. In the list of mourners are several millionaire sportsmen—Foxhall Keene, who sacrificed his whiskers to win the trophy; Frank Croker, son of the famous Tammany boss; A. G. Brokaw and Harry Payne Whitney—who either drove their own cars or backed entries in the early contests.

There is now a movement on foot to bring the Vanderbilt back to Long Island next season. It probably will be for naught. New York surrendered the classic when it could not obtain state militia to patrol the course and reduce the accidents that attended the running of the race, and there is little reason to believe that such protection will be furnished by the governor of the Empire state.

The Vanderbilt, most famous of all America's automobile races, is doomed to die on Thursday.

That the manufacture of automobiles has been revolutionized is now a generally known fact, and nowhere are the changed methods more in evidence than in the system of inspection which is employed by some of the industry's largest producers. The biggest benefit of the thorough inspection methods in vogue at the Studebaker factories is that they eliminate waste; or, to put it another way, they permit of greater manufacturing economies. In the earlier stages of automobile manufacturing, for instance, the scrap heaps at the various factories contained many parts in an advanced stage of construction. In other words, there was no inspection of these parts in the earlier stages which enabled a defective part to go from one department to another, while manufacturing costs mounted, only to have the finished part discarded in the final stage. By contrast with this inefficient method the system employed at the Studebaker plants, consisting of many inspections, insures accuracy and saves manufacturing costs by preventing parts that fail to measure up to specifications from passing a single operation.

Motorcycle Show at Coliseum.

Everything on two wheels, from the husky twin motorbike to the lightest bicycle, will be on exhibit at the second annual national motorcycle, bicycle, and accessory show to be held in the Coliseum this week.

That the motorcycle has made wonderful strides in the last year will be conceded by every visitor to this really immense show, which will contain displays from over 112 manufacturers. Some of the motorcycles are little less elaborate than automobiles. Their scope has likewise been widened, as will be shown by the unusual variety of commercial bodies on view.

The place of honor, however, will be held by the lightweight motorcycle, whose sensational advent last year, heralded as the "dollar a pound" cycle, marked a new trend in the field. These machines, averaging 100 to 150 pounds a car, are remarkably sturdy and powerful and will make as high as forty miles an hour. It is found that their simpler mechanism and reduced weight attract many who feel that the high powered, heavyweight machine is too much for them to handle.

Manufacturers have entered the show with enthusiasm and besides providing everything for the public to see and test have made complete preparations for the dealer. Get together meetings and factory conventions, with detailed tours, will be the order of the day for the numerous dealers assembling from all parts of the country. An even larger attendance than at last year's successful show is expected.

The show will be open from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. each day.

Will you please furnish me with details of the best automobile route from Lake Geneva to Fond du Lac, Wis.? What kind of roads would one encounter?

Charles Sumner,
Lake Geneva, Wis.

The best way is through Elkhorn, Lauderdale Lakes, Eagle, Dousman, Oconomowoc, Monterey, Ashippun, Woodland, Iron Ridge, Iron Mountain, Mayville, Theresa Loraine, and Byron to Fond du Lac, 94.7 miles. The roads are gravel for most of the distance, with the exception of three miles of dirt just south of Mayville.

Kindly route me from Shelbyville, Ill., to Alton, Ill., giving the distance, the names of the towns along the way, and the nature of the roads.

K. L. K., Shelbyville, Ill.

Go through Pana, Ohlman, Nokomis, Hillsboro, Litchfield, Hornsby, Gillespie, Bunker Hill, Woodburn, and Fosterburg to Alton, 106 miles. The road consists of good dirt, which is fast in dry weather, but naturally rather slippery in wet weather.

How many one obtain maps of the Lincoln highway, Dixie highway, and other main automobile routes of the United States?

Clinton Richfield, Chicago.

All or any of the maps may be had by addressing the National Highways association, Washington, D. C. However, for the Lincoln highway and Dixie highway maps, I would advise you to address the Lincoln Highway association, Detroit, Mich., and the Dixie Highway association, Chattanooga, Tenn.

From time to time I have heard of various highways and trails and must confess that I am much confused over them all and would like to know something about them. Of course, I do not expect you to take up much space in your valued and interesting column by listing all of the highways, but would like to know what central, middle western, and western routes run east and west and what ones run north and south.

Reader, Indianapolis, Ind.

I do not wonder that you are confused, for a new highway is platted every week or so. The best known east and west routes are the Lincoln highway, the Yellowstone trail, the Old Trails highway, the Midland trail, the Overland trail, the Northwest trail, and the Pike's Peak Transcontinental highway, all of them connecting the Atlantic seaboard with the Pacific coast. The north and south routes include the Atlantic highway, running from Maine to Florida; the Dixie highway, running from northern Michigan to southern Florida, with a branch touching at Chicago and other nearby points; the Meridian road, connecting Manitoba with Texas; the Jefferson highway, extending from Winnipeg to New Orleans; the Pacific highway, joining Vancouver with San Diego; the Jackson highway, running from Chicago to Nashville; the Great Lakes-Atlantic highway, running from Cleveland to Miami; the International pavedway, running from Detroit to Laredo, Tex.; the Mississippi highway, extending from Duluth to New Orleans; the Kansas City-Gulf road, connecting Duluth with Cameron, La., on the gulf coast; the Great Plains road between Portal, N. D., and Brownsville, Tex.; the Great Plateau highway, beginning at Glacier park, Montana, and ending at El Paso, Tex.; the Rocky Mountain highway, which also connects Glacier park and El Paso; the Sunshine highway, running from Northport, Wash., to Nogales, Ariz., and the Sound to Gulf highway, extending from Seattle, Wash., to Corpus Christi, Tex. Some of the above named routes are still in a rudimentary stage of development, but their promoters are on the right track and eventually will give us fine roads over the entire country.

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

OWEN MAGNETIC

"That's the Car to Buy"
—Say Owners

¶ The Owen Magnetic is the car that the high-grade motor car owner has been wanting.

¶ It is the simplified car, embodying in one magnetic unit all the mechanism which heretofore required extra parts and operation by cumbersome self-starting and lighting apparatus, clutch, clutch pedal, fly-wheel, gear shifting and braking.

¶ All this makes for efficiency—more mileage from gasoline and tires, longer life for the engine and the entire car.

¶ Furthermore, this means far easier and safer driving under all conditions.

¶ The Owen Magnetic floats along silently, smoothly, like coasting—as if pulled forward by a huge elastic band.

¶ Perfectly controlled, by just one small finger-lever on the steering wheel—all functions are accomplished by the Owen Magnetic transmission with a six-cylinder engine.

¶ Besides all this, every Owen Magnetic is a triumph of coach maker's design comparable only with the best foreign-built cars.

That is why, rain or shine, it helps put fair weather under your car.

Moreover, that simple, effective design takes the wear off the body of the tire, and gives it longer life.

Conducted by J. C. Burton

How to Prepare Your Automobile for the Winter.

By John G. De Long.

WITH the advent of fall weather and the prospect of a sharp drop in temperature at almost any time the wise motorist should lose no time in preparing his car for winter driving. A few precautions taken now may be the means of saving the car owner a lot of expense and at the same time increase the efficiency of his machine.

The time was when the motorist placed his car in dead storage soon after the first frost and left it there until spring. But improvements in the mechanism and the addition of scores of cold weather comforts have made the modern car something that may be safely used the year round. However, there are many things that should be looked after before the machine is ready for the winter campaign.

First of all the car should be given a thorough going over from motor to differential and all necessary adjustments or replacements made. In most cases it is well to drain all of the old oil out of the crank case and replace it with a slightly lighter grade than was used in the summer. The thing of the greatest importance, however, is to take precautions against freezing of the water in the radiator and water jacket, for if Jack Frost once gets in a good stiff punch the car will go down and out for a long and expensive stay in the repair shop, where welding will have to be done, even if it is not found necessary to put on a new cylinder block. And a new cylinder block usually means new pistons and other things that bring joy to the heart of the repair man and corresponding gloom to the heart of the motorist.

The addition of some good nonfreezing solution to the water in the radiator is of the utmost importance and should not be delayed too long. Then, too, the radiator must be protected with a cover which may be purchased at an expense of from $2.50 to $6, depending upon the make and size of the car. This cover not only tends to keep the water from becoming congealed but warms the motor up to its most efficient temperature. If one's car is equipped with a motometer it is comparatively easy to run the temperature up to 150 or 170 degrees, something that adds to the mileage derived from the gasoline. It is a well known fact that a warm motor runs much better than a cold one.

Radiator solutions differ somewhat, but all of them should contain a good percentage of alcohol. The use of salts should be avoided, for, while they will not evaporate like alcohol, they have a bad effect on the metal, and also eat the rubber hose connections. Wood, grain, or denatured alcohol may be used, and it may be added to the water alone or combined with a percentage of glycerin, which has a tendency to hold the alcohol and prevent it from evaporating so quickly. Too much glycerin should not be used, however, for it is likely to have a disintegrating effect on the rubber hose.

Of course, the use of an anti-freezing solution has some drawbacks, which fortunately are more than offset by its insurance against frost damage. There are many mild days during the winter when a car with a radiator cover on and with alcohol in the water will heat up too much. Then the water boils over and takes with it much of the nonfreezing solution, which then has to be strengthened.

It is a wise precaution to add a little alcohol and glycerin now and then, just to be on the safe side, for when the mercury hangs around the zero mark it will not take long to freeze the radiator and crack the water jacket. Many a man has left his car in a cold garage over night, safe in the thought that there is alcohol in the radiator, but in the morning he has found his car frozen up, and then, too late, remembers that the radiator had boiled over on the preceding mild day and that he had not provided himself with an emergency supply of alcohol with which to make up the loss of solution.

The following table may be used as a guide for preparing the nonfreezing dope:

Pct. water.	Pct. alcohol.	Freezes at
95	5	25 above
90	10	18 above
85	15	11 above
80	20	5 above
75	25	2 below
70	30	9 below
65	35	15 below
60	40	23 below

While grain alcohol, owing to its purity, is the best, it is most too expensive for the average motorist. The results obtained from denatured or wood alcohol are about as good and for that reason it is the most popular. For the average car and for temperature that runs not lower than 5 below, 70 per cent water, 15 per cent alcohol, and 15 per cent glycerin is recommended. The glycerin may be left out if desired, in which case 30 per cent alcohol should be used. The ordinary radiator holds about five gallons and most motorists allow one gallon of alcohol to four gallons of water. But the weather reports should be watched carefully and if extremely low temperature is predicted the motorist should consider safety first and add more alcohol to his solution.

Another important thing to be watched is the battery, which should be fully charged to get the best results. Go over the wiring system and see to it that all conecetions are in good condition. Test the battery with a hydrometer once each week and add enough distilled water to keep the plates covered. As most cars nowadays are equipped with starters, it is of the utmost importance to see that the starting mechanism is in good shape. The electric starter should not be too severely taxed in cold weather. The motor should always be primed through the pet cocks provided for the purpose. This may be done by having a small can of gasoline handy and squirting a little in on the top of each cylinder. The starting motor never should be run more than thirty seconds at a time. When primed, the starter should turn the motor over within ten or twelve seconds at the most.

NEXT Saturday the football teams of the University of Chicago and the University of Illinois will clash at Urbana in a game that will have an important bearing on the big nine championship for 1916, and for the guidance of hundreds of alumni of both schools and gridiron fans of Chicago who plan to motor to the scene of battle the accompanying map and route are published.

The shortest and most direct route to Urbana is via Chicago Heights, Steger, Sollitt Station, Momence, Kankakee, Clifton, Ashkum, Gilman, Onarga, Buckley, Loda, Paxton, Ludlow, and Rantoul, the distance being 149 miles. The Dixie highway is followed as far as Kankakee, 66.6 miles, and according to the Automobile Blue Book, travel that far is over macadam and gravel and for the balance of the way over good dirt and gravel with the exception of five miles of bad going through Paxton.

An optional route but seventeen miles longer is from Chicago to Dwight, via Forest Park, Lockport, Joliet, Minooka, and Morris, and from Dwight to Urbana by way of Forrest, Strawn, Sibley, Gibson City, Fisher, and Champaign. For seventy miles to Morris the roads are permanently improved, but the remainder of the way is over dirt highways, with several stretches that may cause trouble in wet weather.

If we have much rain during the week motorists are advised to drive south through Indiana to Danville, 147.6 miles, via Dyer, Kreitzburg, Brunswick, Hanover Center, Cook Station, Lowell, Schneider's Station, Lake Village, Conrad Station, Morocco, Ade, Kentland, Raub, Freeland, Dunnington, Ambia, Pence Station, Hedrick, and Johnsonville. The thirty-six mile drive from Danville to Urbana, via Catlin and Homer, is over fine gravel roads with the exception of some dirt stretches near Urbana.

Notes.

"A piston weighing six pounds and fourteen ounces in 1912 and a piston weighing nine ounces in 1916—that tells the story of the development of automobile motors in the last four years," says E. Ver Linden, general manager of the Olds Motor works. "Comparison of the six cylinder motor used in the Oldsmobile 'limiteds,' which were built in 1911 and 1912, and the eight cylinder motor now in use shows some startling contrasts," continues Mr. Ver Linden. "For instance, the cast iron pistons used in the 'limited' were seven inches long and five inches in diameter, while the present Lynite pistons are five inches long and two and seven-eighths inches in diameter. The circumference of the old iron pistons was sixteen inches, while the aluminum alloy pistons are only nine and one-eighth inches around. And the iron pistons were more than twelve times as heavy."

The international jury of awards of the Panama-Pacific exposition has conferred the gold medal and the diploma of the exposition upon the Locomobile Company of America for its exhibition of fine motor cars.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

For the third time in three years Rowe, Young & Cooley, local distributors of Westcott automobiles, have been forced to secure more space to take care of increased business, and are having erected a new service station that will permit of giving service to twenty or thirty machines at one time.

On Oct. 1 announcement was made by the Hudson factory, through its distributors, that an increase of $175 in price on all Hudson supersix models would go into effect Dec. 1. With that announcement came the factory promise that changes, if any, in the supersix models would be but minor ones and that buyers at this time could feel they were buying the standard, proven supersix. Now comes an invitation from the Hudson factory to come in and see next year's supersix, a sample of which arrived in Chicago last week. Next year's car and the popular current model, are therefore standing side by side on the sales floor of the Louis Geyler company to back up the factory promise that only a few minor refinements would be noted in the next year's model.

The Erwin Greer Automobile company, Ford distributor, has established a special class for Ford owners which meets every Tuesday evening at 1519 Wabash avenue. Questions are answered and the operation and maintenance of all parts of the car are demonstrated. There is no charge for this instruction.

The Chicago branch of the Willys-Overland company last week sold fifty Willys-Knight limousines to the La Salle hotel, the first hotel in the country to establish a taxi service for the exclusive use of its guests.

EXHAUST ECHOES

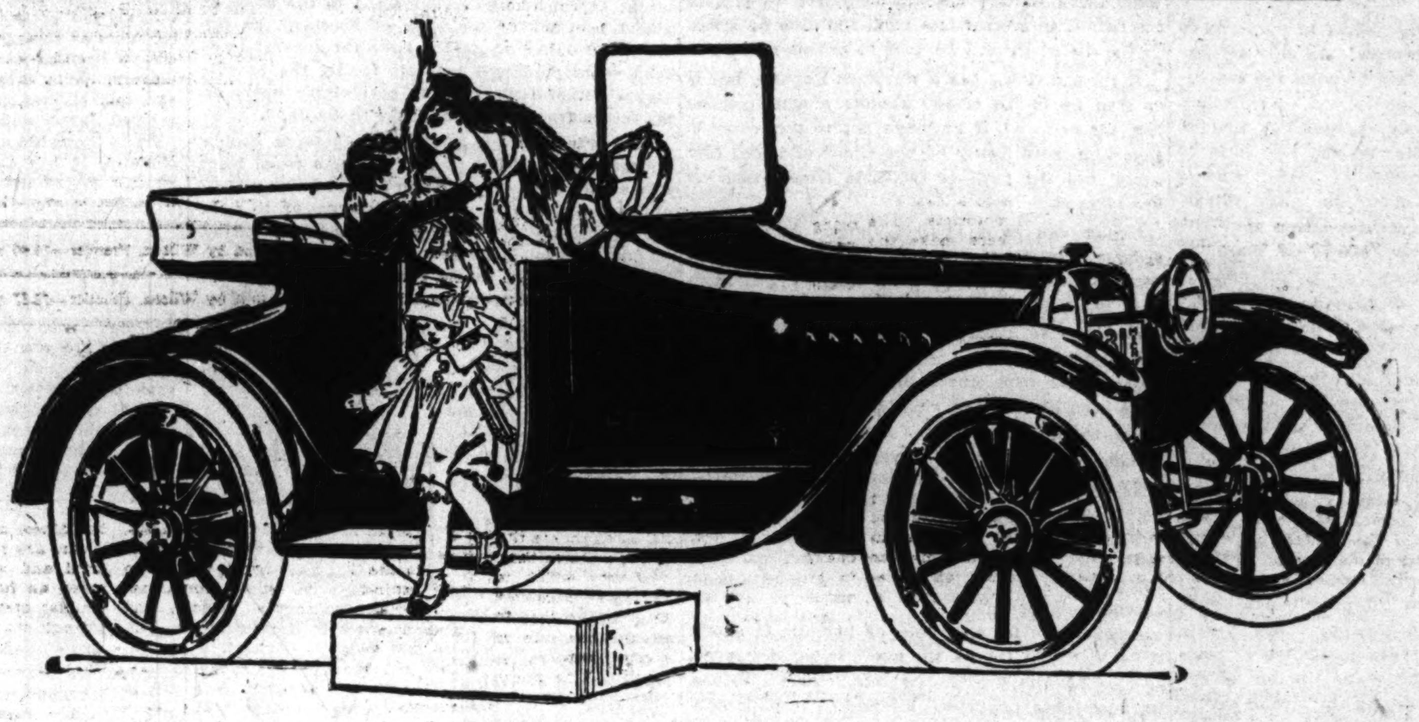
Ray J. Morgan, president of the King Motor company, 2429 South Michigan avenue, announces that a $50 advance will be made in the price of the King eight motor car on Wednesday. This brings the price of the seven passenger touring car and three passenger roadster to $1,400 each f. o. b. Detroit, and the sedan to $1,950 f. o. b. Detroit.

The decided tendency of the motor car buying public toward inclosed cars is further emphasized by the announcement of two new Jeffery sedans by the Nash Motors Company of Kenosha, Wis. Simplicity, comfort, and elegance are combined in the new models—four and six cylinder types—and the tops are removable for summer touring. Both models have ample accommodations for seven passengers. The lines of this new Jeffery top are in strict accordance with latest mandates of motor car fashion. One of the most noticeable features is the extra large size of the French plate windows. These drop five inches to give ventilation in warm weather, providing a good circulation of air without permitting a draft on the heads of the passengers. Divided front seats eliminate the necessity of fore doors and thus do away with the need for a panel between the front window and the rear door.

The Esco Manufacturing company of Detroit, manufacturer of the Esco motor lock, announces the appointment of W. D. Clarke as general sales manager in charge of a direct factory branch which will be opened this week at 1004 South Michigan boulevard. Mr. Clarke will arrive in Chicago tomorrow morning to commence active work here. It is the intention of the Esco company to carry a complete stock in the local branch and operate a full service station for the convenience of patrons in fitting the locks.

Manager Herman J. Staebler of the Chicago branch of the Reo Motor Car company last week found himself in the position of having no cars to sell. An unprecedented demand on the part of Chicago motorists for the new Reo V., especially the sedan model, combined with a shortage of freight cars, left the local branch without an extra car. As soon as it became apparent the railroads could not deliver the automobiles on time, Manager Staebler sent a man to the Lansing factory and five cars were driven cross country. They arrived here yesterday and more are on the way.

SAXON ROADSTER
A CAR COMPLETELY EQUIPPED WITH EVERY MODERN MOTOR CAR FEATURE



A Car Completely Equipped to the Last Detail for Less Than $500

It's here, on our showroom floor, spic and span, with shining, lustrous finish of ever-new freshness. By all means see this new series Saxon Roadster. You'll find it no ordinary car. We think it will win you on first sight—on its looks, on its costly car attractions, on the way it acts. There's plenty of "pepper" to its performance, plenty of speed, plenty of power, and plenty of snap to its "pick-up." There's more room now than ever before, the seat is larger, the body is bigger, and there's more leg room.

Note These Modern Features—No High-Priced Car Has Better

STARTING AND LIGHTING system built by Wagner. Two-unit type. Most efficient made. In Saxon Roadster now you simply press a button conveniently placed for your heel and your motor is humming away.

DEMOUNTABLE RIMS. They make tire-change, in event of emergency, a quick, easy operation.

30-INCH BY 3-INCH TIRES. These larger tires make Saxon Roadster a higher-standing car, give more road clearance, greater riding comfort, and longer tire life. Tire trouble will practically never fall to the lot of Saxon Roadster owners, for the added size of the tires gives Saxon Roadster the greatest tire surface in proportion to car weight of any car in the world.

HIGH SPEED SAXON MOTOR. This is a 4-cylinder, L-head, high-speed Continental motor, built to Saxon specifications and design by the Continental Motor Company—the world's most famous makers of automobile motors.

The 4 cylinders are cast en bloc; crank case integral; 2¾-inch bore x 4-inch stroke. It is possessed of unusual power, smoothness, quietness, flexibility, operative economy, and coolness under all conditions.

REICHENBACH CARBURETOR. This new carburetor is the greatest advance in gasoline carburetion yet recorded. It is of the atomizer type and has 5 distinct and definite advantages over any other carburetor built.

1. Because it breaks up the gasoline perfectly it adds a full 15% more mileage to each gallon.

2. Its super-efficiency permits the use of cheaper gasoline without impairing the performance of the motor in the slightest.

3. It develops 15% more power.

4. It makes starting in cold weather easy.

5. It makes for far smoother performance at low-speed and gives far faster "pick-up."

THREE SPEED TRANSMISSION. Among high-quality cars it is the only type of transmission used. Its advantages are three-fold. On hills it enables you to get far more speed on less power. It gives 25% swifter acceleration. And it protects the motor from over-heating and over-working because the proper speed can be maintained under all road conditions. A car which has not a three-speed transmission simply cannot compare with the Saxon Roadster in flexibility and efficiency.

TIMKEN AXLES. Timken axles are conceded to be the finest axles manufactured. Throughout the chassis are the famous HYATT QUIET bearings—another costly car attraction.

STREAMLINE BODY. Its streamline design is another piece of evidence which establishes the superiority of Saxon Roadster in the low-priced field.

HONEYCOMB RADIATOR. The honeycomb radiator assures you that your Saxon will always keep cool. You can pull for mile after mile through heavy sand, on low, without the water in your radiator coming to a boil.

ATWATER-KENT IGNITION SYSTEM. This ignition system is regarded as one of the best and most efficient systems on the market. The highest-priced cars can have no better.

EASY RIDING. Saxon Roadster is the easiest riding, most comfortable, low-priced roadster in the world. The long, resilient springs are made of the best quality vanadium steel. The spring suspension is of the cantilever design—the most approved type known. The seat is 40 inches wide, and there's plenty of leg room.

NEW STYLE TOP with Grecian rear bow enhances the attractiveness of this car's appearance.

ELECTRIC HORN, another fine car convenience; tire carrier at rear; speedometer; ventilating windshield; adjustable pedals; vanadium steel cantilever springs, and twenty more refinements.

Part for part—considering both the number and quality of Saxon Roadster features—we believe it is the biggest motor car value on the market. $495 f. o. b. Detroit.

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

A NATION'S CONCEPTION OF LIFE.

Deeper than the arguments men use in contention run the forces that move them. This is true in the collective as in the individual life. We pass through great political campaigns in a furor of debate over issues that are in themselves of far less moment that the issues which, though not formulated, control our decision.

The campaign which has just closed illustrates this curious law of man's nature exceptionally well. There were indeed grave practical differences of policy, but they were neither wide nor deep. The real struggle lay beneath the turmoil of our common arguments and rose only now and then to the surface. Mexican relations, tariff making, extent of preparedness, the spoils system versus civil service, executive efficiency offered us concrete issues for debate and practical considerations for future action of importance to our safety and prosperity. But in a very real sense they were merely symbols of a profound opposition which we did not formulate.

This opposition is in the nature of man and in the life of all advanced peoples. Roughly we may describe it as the opposition between the masculine and the feminine conceptions of existence. We have this instinctively expressed in the pet words and phrases of Mr. Wilson, who likes to talk of "the sweet purposes of peace," who is "passionate"—verbally—about so many things. We have it in the sentimental stress upon the mere material pains of war, and in the main appeal of the Wilsonian campaign to the anxious tenderness of women. "He kept us out of war" was directed at the instinct which cherishes, which hoards and clings to what is dear. The whole Wilsonian philosophy is one of avoidance of danger, though it offers itself in a splendor of remote aspiration. It points to shining peaks but does not risk climbing. It tempts us with a world of endless peace, of unmixed sweetness.

This is by no means a superficial question of sex. Men shrink and women dare. We know there is much of man in women and much of woman in men. But there is this great opposition between the conception of life as affirmative experience and that which represents a happy valley of perpetual sunshine, and it is the masculine or positive impulse which would make life an adventure, daring, expansive, seeking the strong savors of existence, the pains and perils of costly achievement, building or breaking to build again.

Nations in their lives swing from one conception to the other. Sometimes they swing too far. They have their epochs of expansion and their epochs of contraction, their day of strength and growth, their age of Elizabeth or Pericles, and their age of withdrawal, of anxious conservation, of peace at any cost.

The circumstances of our earlier national life were all virile. For two generations conditions have been reversed. We have had virtually unbroken peace, uninterrupted accumulation of wealth, swiftly increasing luxury. Never in the history of nations have such conditions resulted in anything but an effeminization of peoples. We, too, have grown soft and cautious, relaxed, and self-indulgent. Progress comes by striving and suffering, strength never grew on a scented pillow. These are platitudes but vital to us at this moment.

Our danger today is that we should miscall our weakness virtue. It is easy to shirk and call it unselfishness. We can make for our want of manly enterprise a pretentious mask of humanitarianism. But this will not change the fact of our condition. We are indeed at the parting of the ways. We must choose whether we are to be a nation of power, walking abroad in our strength, living to the full, or a nation that lives intensively, following the course of caution, always saving, not spending. The tremendous influence of women in America unquestionably is going to have a profound effect upon the course of the national destiny. But it is not necessary to conclude from this that our future is to be controlled by what we have called the feminine conception of life.

PREDICTING EMPIRES' FALL.

The English are so fond of picturing the German emperor as parceling out the states now at war with him, taking his share and giving his allies their portion, that it is somewhat amusing to find one of their own number doing the same thing. An anonymous writer in the Contemporary Review is at the old game of predicting the fall of Austria-Hungary. The fall of the dual monarchy has been promised as often as the death of its aged ruler has been announced.

The Contemporary Reviewer has it all settled. Hungary is already as good as a separate state, shorn, of course, of Transylvania and some other parts. He is not quite certain whether he will allow Austria proper to remain purely Austrian as it now is, or whether he will be generous and add a part of Silesia, Saxony, Baden, and some other south German states. He is rather inclined to the latter course, thus making a nation of about 40,000,000 German speaking people. If the Hapsburgs are good little children he may permit them to reign, but if not, they and the Hohenzollerns may be packed off bag and baggage to St. Helena or some other place equally remote where they cannot again interfere with Britain's benevolent protection of weak nations.

This is all old stuff. Austria-Hungary may suffer if it and its allies are completely defeated at the last, but the dual monarchy has often been tried in the fire of defeat and it has always emerged more or less victor nevertheless. In modern times it has never really won a war on the battlefield. It lost its Italian possessions, or some of them, and Bismarck took away others, besides depriving it of the German hegemony, and yet in spite of these setbacks it emerged to greater prosperity and more secure power than ever.

It has suffered severely in this war, probably half of its army being dead, wounded, or prisoners. The foe is on its soil, and it has had to bear the humiliation of having its military leaders succeeded by German commanders. It may never regain its lost territory and it may lose even more in the next year, but on the whole the awkward, disjointed double state has not yet shown real signs of disintegration. The disaffection in Hungary led by Apponyi and Karoli has flashed in the pan, the shrewd premier being more than their match.

The prediction of empires' fall is one of the easiest and least harmful of amusements. The English are adepts at it.

THE IMPENDING FATE OF BOOZE.

The success of the prohibition propaganda in this election—in the form of a nonpolitical and essentially sumptuary issue—indicates that the question of regulating individual habit is more alive now than ever.

Earlier successes might have been regarded as flashes of revolt against liquor, but it becomes apparent that a steady and strong impulse is at work. This is not a flash. It is a progress. It reveals a tendency that grows stronger with each year. Each year gives it its increment and the next increases it.

Therefore national prohibition is nearer a reality now than carelessly thinking men would have dreamed possible even two years ago. It is within rational conception that inside of a few years the United States congress will act in accordance with the wishes of advocates of national prohibition and that the country will accept an amendment to the constitution and will drink on the sly thereafter.

Sumptuary legislation always provokes indignation from the few who believe that character is sustained by the individual will and is not a matter of statute. The modern tendency is to surround the individual with a statutory wall of prohibition. This wall is designed to promote the individual's welfare and his comforts, to protect his habits, to protect him from the time he arises in the morning until he goes to bed at night.

If the individual has a wayward impulse, law is to step up to his elbow, whisper a sane counsel into his ear, and, if he listen not to this counsel, take him more firmly by the elbow and lead him away into the path of rectitude from which he has strayed.

Liquor can be a terrible thing. Any one of ordinary experience and perception has seen what damage it has done in lives which might have been more pleasantly and profitably lived if no such thing as alcohol ever had been distilled by the human race.

The same experienced and perceptive persons have seen alcohol and character mixed to an entirely satisfactory result. Alcohol is something which, when it finds its way into an appetent body ungoverned by character and resolution, means tragedy. It is something which, when it finds its way into a body governed by a considerate and sane intellect, merely heightens the colors of life and makes existence a more serene, acceptable experience.

Alcohol has its chambers of horrors; it shows the lives it has ruined, the hopes it has destroyed. It also has its fireside, its comfortable illusions, its sustaining qualities. To regard it philosophically is to offer rat poison to persons convinced that it is the invention of the devil intended for the damnation of mankind. But however far ahead we get emotionally by being downright on the subject we make very little real advance in intelligent thought when we consider a consistent practice of the human race as an abnormal and hideous practice.

Just at present there is a manifest determination in the United States to regard stimulation by alcohol as a deadly practice. That determination undoubtedly has been caused by the abuse of alcohol. The American saloon is the most useful supporter of the prohibitionists. It robs the demon rum of every saving grace it has. It is built as a complete concession to intemperance. It is designed as an enemy of temperance. It is constructed to make heavy drinking attractive, if not necessary, and to make the rational use of alcoholic drinks impossible.

When alcohol presents itself with the quick lunch aspect it has outlawed itself. The American saloon has outlawed alcohol in this country. It has made temperance—the rational employment of mild stimulant to which the body might accommodate itself and with which geniality might satisfy itself—an impossible thing.

The American saloon is a device of drunkenness. And it is the American saloon which is bringing the prohibition impulse to the scope of a national movement.

OUR CONSULS HARD HIT.

[From the Memphis Commercial-Appeal.]

We are not the only people who are hard hit by the high cost of living. Our ambassadors and consuls in Europe are facing conditions even worse than those that affect us. In the belligerent countries and those that border on them the prices of foodstuffs and clothing have gone so high that it has become a grave question with those of our representatives who are not millionaires to live in anything like the dignity their positions demand. With some of the consuls—and they are usually men of moderate private means—the question has reached such a vital point that the necessities of living have come to be the luxuries.

The government at Washington has taken up the matter and will probably add something to the consular salaries to tide our people over the crisis of high prices that they are facing. Certainly something should be done for them. Our highest paid consul in Austria gets only $6,000; in France and England there are two who are paid $12,000 each; in Germany the two highest priced men get $8,000 each.

When we consider that they are in foreign countries, with big rents to pay and the responsibility of always adequately representing this government, we will realize how far short of their needs the usual salaries fall in these strenuous times of big costs and many demands.

This is a phase of the war that few people had considered, but the American representative in a foreign country feels the prick of the steel very sharply. The department of state is right to look after its men in these conditions which they could not foresee when they went to their posts.

PLAYING SAFE.

"But why did you get into this fight when both men were strangers to you?" asked the judge.

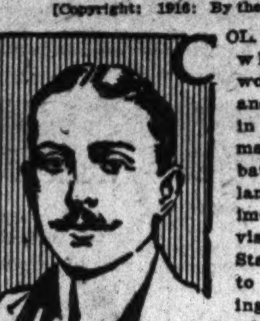
"I was playing safe," replied the prisoner. "I didn't want to get hurt."

"But how could you get hurt if you had merely acted as a witness to the fight?" asked the judge.

"The bystander is the fellow who always gets the worst of it," announced the prisoner.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Co.]



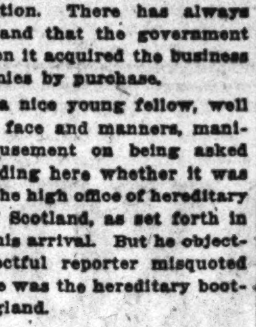
COL. LORD ROTHES, who has just been wounded in the face and the leg at the front in France while commanding the cyclist battalion of the Highland light infantry regiment, paid a prolonged visit to the United States a few years ago to obtain data regarding the question as to whether the telegraph service, as administered by the state in the United Kingdom, was superior in efficiency and gave greater satisfaction to the public than that furnished in the United States by private enterprise.

There is a great difference of opinion on this subject in Great Britain, where it forms a continual and somewhat heated subject of discussion. Therefore a man with a knowledge founded on experience and personal investigation is naturally listened to with attention. There has always been a feeling in England that the government made a bad bargain when it acquired the business of the telegraph companies by purchase.

Lord Rothes, who is a nice young fellow, well set up, with a pleasant face and manners, manifested considerable amusement on being asked by the reporters on landing here whether it was really true that he held the high office of hereditary bootjack to the king of Scotland, as set forth in my letter on the day of his arrival. But he objected when some disrespectful reporter misquoted me by asking whether he was the hereditary bootblack of the king of England.

The earl was, however, compelled to admit that he had certain hereditary prerogatives which might be construed as equivalent to the office of grand bootjack of the king of Scotland, as the earls and dukes of Rothes have for several hundred years possessed in their family the hereditary right of removing the sovereign's boots on his return from any royal chase in Scotland.

This was, and has not ceased to be, a highly honorable office. For in early times a royal hunt was as great a pageant as in nowadays the monarch's procession to open parliament, or to hold some great military review. The ancient hunting etiquette did not come to an end until the monarch had been escorted to his private apartments and had been duly helped with his ablutions, change of clothing, etc.



In those troublous times the fact that the monarch admitted one of his nobles to approach him while he was in such a defenseless condition showed he had the utmost confidence in his loyalty.

The present Earl of Rothes was so delighted with his visit to the United States and was so impressed with the advantages offered for safe and lucrative investments of capital, as compared with analogous opportunities in England, that instead of sailing for home he remained on this side of the Atlantic and sent for Lady Rothes, insisting that she should join him here in order that she might obtain a personal idea of what he had seen and of the conclusions he had arrived at.

She therefore sailed to join him on the White Star steamer Titanic and was on board that ill fated ship when it was sunk, being one of the survivors.

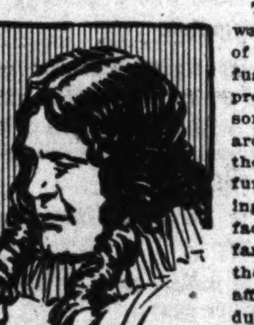
The earldom of Rothes is one of those Scottish peerages which descend through the female as well as through the male line, and out of nineteen of its holders, ten at least have been women. The thirteenth Earl of Rothes had six daughters, the eldest of whom, Lady Henrietta Leslie, fell in love at the age of 16 with a Devonshire peasant, George Gwyther by name, who was employed on the estates of the earl. He could neither read nor write at the time.

The most severe blow to the wealth of the family occurred in the reign of Charles II., or perhaps it would be more correct to say in that of James II. Down to the time of Charles II. the family was immensely rich.

But the seventh earl had the misfortune to be on terms of intimate friendship with Charles II., who overwhelmed him with honors, bestowing upon him the dukedom of Rothes and the lord high commissionership of Scotland, an office resembling that of viceroy. It was while in possession of these dignities that the duke died at Edinburgh, which is at a considerable distance from the family mansion, Leslie house.

King Charles insisted that as the duke had died as his representative he hsould be accorded all the funeral honors of a full fledged sovereign and that his body should be conveyed in royal state at the expense of the crown from the metropolis of Scotland to Leslie house.

This involved, of course, an immense retinue of attendants, their suitable entertainment at the various stopping places and, at their journey's end, their mourning outfit, etc. Indeed, the funeral ceremonies lasted for an incredible time, and when they came to a close Charles II. himself was dead and James II. reigned in his stead.



This monarch had always detested the Duke of Rothes and flatly refused to honor the royal promise of his predecessor, the "merrie monarch," declining to pay the huge bills for the funeral expenses, adding that in view of the fact that the Rothes family were so rich they could much better afford to pay for the duke's interment than he, King James, could himself.

The Rothes family declined to enter into legal proceedings with the crown about the matter and assumed the expense themselves, mortgaging their property to the hilt to do so. Altogether it is said that the expenses of the funeral amounted to $15,000,000, a big enough sum now, but an altogether fabulous one in those days, and a grievous burden, although the family owned vast estates in Scotland, extending almost from one end of the kingdom to the other.

These charges, placed on the property so long ago, were not entirely cleared off from what remained of the lands until the marriage of the present earl to Lucy, daughter and heiress of the exceedingly wealthy Thomas Dyer Edwards of Brinknash Park, Gloucestershire. Then possession was resumed of Leslie house in Fifeshire, which had been in alien hands for more than two centuries.

CONSUMPTION.

TUBERCULOSIS is always pandemic, or, to put it another way, tuberculosis, a contagious disease, is always present in all parts of the world, to which we might add—and always has been. So far as can be judged from medical history it has always been regarded as a scourge.

The term phthisis, often used now as one name for the disease, was used by Hippocrates—about the earliest medical writer. All of the writers who described consumption a thousand or more years ago regarded the disease as contagious, but it was not until 1865 that its contagiousness was scientifically proven.

The German, Koch, completed the work of the Frenchman, Villenin, by finding the source of contagion to be a bacillus, by growing it in culture media, and by causing consumption by injecting it. Until this bacillus was discovered in 1882 the disease was gradually on the increase.

A few years after 1882 the disease commenced a gradual slow decline. The decline in the United States, according to the latest census office report (1914), has been to 146 8-10, as compared with 202 in 1900.

The tubercle bacillus infects all animals. Other disease producing bacilli infect a few species of animals, but are harmless as regards others. The tuberculosis bacillus again demonstrated its universality by attacking warm blooded and cold blooded, highly and lowly developed, furred and feathered.

While it attacks men of all races in all climates, it has an especial liking for warmly housed and well clad men. When it comes to animals lower than man it shows a like tendency to be especially bad among the warmly housed and a disposition to leave untouched the wild and the free.

Our first wonder is that the disease did not wipe out the race in the earlier centuries, when men were so ignorant of the laws of sanitation. The reason was that the comfortable housing of the present civilization is more provocative of consumption than was the poor sanitation of the past civilizations. Other diseases have rolled over men like billows. Plague, cholera, and yellow fever have swept across the world like a prairie fire, only to lie down and almost disappear for a term of years.

History is full of instances in which a certain part of the world would be alternately paralyzed by and free from malaria. The histories of Greece and Rome tell of periods of darkness when malaria was rife and periods of grandeur when there was no malaria. This has not been the case with consumption. There have never been violent epidemics of consumption. The disease has never laid waste any part of the world. On the other hand, it has never let up in any part of the world. Gradually, relentlessly, it has rolled on, slowly increasing its ravages, never very contagious, never attracting much attention, until nations began to keep books. When the books called vital statistics were chronicled and studied it was found that consumption was first among the causes of death.

Fortunately about the time the information became available the bacillus was discovered. Soon after the campaign to control the disease was launched. It is a winning fight. In 1914, according to the census office report on consumption, for the first time in the history of our vital statistics, consumption was not the leading cause of death. In that year heart disease depleted it.

The clinical history of tuberculosis in the individual is somewhat like the history of the disease. It starts unobtrusively. Its presence is not suspected for a while. It slowly, gradually, makes headway. When stock is taken it is often found that the disease has become well established.

One of the first symptoms of consumption is fever. The temperature goes up in the afternoon to a degree higher than normal. In the forenoon it is about half a degree less than normal. A diagnosis cannot be made on this temperature curve alone. It is not in a proper sense a basis for a diagnosis of consumption. It is merely a basis for a suspicion of consumption, especially when associated with other symptoms.

The fever of consumption is due to absorption of toxins or poisons secreted by the tubercle bacillus. These toxins also cause a feeling of lassitude, tire, and give-down. It is usually this feeling of give-down which causes the party to suspect fever and take his temperature. About this time, or maybe a little earlier, another symptom—cough—develops. The cough is due to irritation from the toxin. It is a dry, hacking, irritating cough and no sputum is produced. How often has the rising suspicion of the consumptive been allayed by the thought that this cannot be consumption, since the cough is a dry hack and no sputum is raised! The combination of a dry hack and a temperature curve, as described above, is not enough basis for a diagnosis of consumption, but it is basis enough for strong suspicion. If the party has not taken stock before he is not justified in waiting longer.

If to the other symptoms there is added the production of sputum which is at first glairy mucus but gradually becomes whitish to grayish, there is additional ground for suspicion. Not infrequently there is languor, moderate rundown condition, or obstinate inexplainable dyspepsia. No one of these symptoms, nor all of them combined, establish a diagnosis of consumption. They are merely a basis for suspicion, especially when associated with the symptoms noted above.

In one case out of twenty-five (4 per cent of all cases) slight hemorrhage is an early symptom of consumption. In one-sixth of the cases where early hemorrhage is present the spitting of blood is the only symptom of consumption present. It is the most reliable sign of consumption given up to the present point in this article. If the party can be certain that he has no bleeding from the nose or gums or if the patient is a woman and she can, in addition, rule out vicarious menstruation, a history of spitting of blood is almost enough for a diagnosis of consumption.

The combination of temperature curve, cough, languor, rundown condition, a little sputum, and hemorrhage is enough for a diagnosis. In any event, hemorrhage is basis for suspicion of consumption.

The above is an outline of one course of start in consumption. Even more frequently the disease starts in the following manner. The party catches what seems to be an ordinary cold with a cough. This cold hangs on or one cold seems to succeed another in rapid succession. With these colds cough is always prominent. Colds, with coughs, which show a tendency to hang on form a basis for strong suspicion, though not for diagnosis unless there are some supporting signs.

Of the two methods of onset of consumption the latter is the more frequent. However, it is probable that before the cold that caused a suspicion of consumption there was a history of gradual running down, malaise in the afternoon and hacking cough, but these signs of consumption had been overlooked.

Tubercle bacilli in the sputum are a positive sign of consumption. Their presence means not only that consumption is present but also that the disease has advanced far enough to cause some destruction of tissue. Therefore, the presence of tubercle bacilli in the sputum is looked upon as a sign of moderately advanced consumption. They may not be present in consumption if the disease has not progressed far enough to cause discharge from a breaking down tubercular area into an air sac or bronchial tube.

These are the symptoms present in the very early stages of consumption running an ordinary course. Every one of them, except tubercle bacilli in the sputum, can be found in other diseases and even in mild disorders. If a person is guided by them he is liable to think he has consumption at times when he has not. He is liable to be uneasy when there is no justification for it. Much can be said on that side of the question. On the other hand, if these symptoms cause a person to be suspicious of consumption and he has a thorough physical examination and tuberculin test and learns that he has consumption, he has the satisfaction of knowing that his disease can be cured without a great expenditure of money or time.

Consumption diagnosed before tubercle bacilli appear in the sputum can usually be arrested within six months. Consumption which is not diagnosed until tubercle bacilli are found in the sputum is either incurable or can only be arrested by treatment lasting for a year or for several years. The teaching is that one should be alert and suspicious but that his suspicions should be controlled by poise and common sense. About one-tenth of the cases of pulmonary tuberculosis do not sneak on a person so gradually as the above would indicate. The cases of so-called galloping consumption make up about one-tenth of the total cases. Galloping consumption may start out like a pneumonia or it may begin more like a case of typhoid or malaria.

MOUTH CANKERS.

P. B. J. writes: "I suffer quite a great deal with ulcers or cankers in the mouth and have so far been unable to secure any relief. Have consulted my regular family physician, but he does not give the desired relief, only gives me calomel and touches the spot with caustic.

"Am a farmer, 43 years old, very active and energetic, have fine appetite, but am very cautious as to what I eat. Diet consists of bacon and eggs, oatmeal and milk, hot biscuits for breakfast, rice, potatoes, corn, baked beans, corn bread for dinner, all vegetables in season, except tomatoes; they seem to make matters worse. For supper usually what's left, with the additon of cottage cheese or schmiercasé, of which I am very fond. Bowels very regular and try to be very cleanly with my teeth. Do not use tobacco or alcohol in any form. Have used all forms of remedies, such as listerine, Pond's extract, boric acid, turpentine, caustic, peroxide, etc., etc., to no avail. Suffer occasionally from heartburn, especially after eating starchy foods, such as sweet potatoes, cheese, macaroni, and the like. Eat as much fruit as I can afford.

"My mother, now 75 years old, has suffered some in this way, but not to equal mine. Do you find this trouble frequently? If so, what's the relief? I find it painful and at times can hardly eat anything."

REPLY.

Cankers get well of themselves. However, one can save himself some pain by touching them with aromatic sulphuric acid, tincture of iodine or carbolic acid. But you are interested in preventing them. To do that you must regulate your diet. I expect you will have to work that out for yourself. Frequently the fault is that too much starch and sugar are eaten. I think that may be your trouble. You are not getting enough meat and you are getting too much starch. I note that you eat oatmeal, hot biscuits, rice, potatoes, corn, baked beans, cornbread, sweet potatoes, macaroni, and perhaps other starches. Are you constipated? If so, why not eat bran for a cereal?

INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

L. A. M. writes: "I would like to ask for information regarding infantile paralysis. (1) What is infantile paralysis? (2) Could an injury by falling on the head bring on the disease? (3) How many days before symptoms show it is this disease? (4) Is there any remedy or cure for this disease? (5) Is it necessary to take a patient to hospital, and do symptoms show in serum? (6) Is it necessary to give opiates before system is purged? (7) What is the object of taking patients to the hospital when the doctors don't know what to do for them? (8) Why can't they be taken care of at their home, where they receive constant care by mother and good nurse? (9) Can disease be spread by nurse going out on the street or traveling across city in an automobile?"

REPLY.

1. An inflammation of the front part of the spinal cord due to the coccus of infantile paralysis.
2. No.
3. The incubation period is two to fourteen days, usually eight days.
4. From 60 to 92 per cent of the cases get well.
5. Many cities and possibly some states require that all cases be taken to the hospital.
6. In a given case the pain might be great enough to call for opiates. That is a matter for the judgment of the attending physician.
7. To protect the community.
8. It is dangerous to the community and decreases the patient's chance of recovery.
9. By going out on the streets, yes. By crossing city in automobile, no.

THE POPULAR VOTE IN PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is it not possible under the present electoral system for a presidential candidate to receive the majority of the popular vote and yet to lose the presidency? Did this not happen at one of the presidential elections? How are these electors chosen? If a voter were to vote for only some of the electors, say three or four of the Republican electors, how would this vote be construed? W. P. M.

While the popular vote in the country indicates the leaning of the people toward a national candidate, yet the electoral college might be so made up as to give the receiver of the minority vote the presidency. This occurred in 1888, when Cleveland on the Democratic ticket received 5,540,050 votes from the people, while Harrison, his opponent, received but 5,444,337 popular votes. In the electoral college Cleveland received 168 votes against Harrison's 233. The electors are nominated at the state conventions of each party in the spring of the presidential election year. It is for these men that the voter casts his ballot. You may vote for any number of electors on one ticket that you wish.

HE IS A CITIZEN.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—[To the Friend of the People.]—A man, now living in this country, was born in Germany, but was brought here at the age of 5 years by his parents. His father was naturalized here as soon as possible after his arrival. Does this man have the rights of a citizen of this country or must he, like his father, take out naturalization papers? MRS. L. E. S.

A child born without the United States of alien parents shall be deemed a citizen of the United States by virtue of the naturalization of or resumption of American citizenship by the parent; provided that such naturalization or resumption takes place during the minority of such child; and, provided further, that the citizenship of such minor child shall begin at the time such minor child begins to reside permanently in the United States.

PAVING POTOMAC AVENUE.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—[To the Friend of the People.]—When will Potomac avenue west of Crawford avenue be paved? What material will be used and what concern has been awarded the contract? A. A. S.

The contract for paving Potomac avenue from Crawford avenue to Karlov avenue with asphalt was awarded to the American Asphalt Paving company Oct. 10. The contractor will be able to complete the work this year if the weather permits.

WIRE FENCE ON PROPERTY.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there a law against having a wire fence around the lawn in front of one's house? If a boy who has been warned away from the lawn insists on playing on it and, in trying to stand on a post holding the wire, is hurt, is the owner held responsible for boy's injuries? W. T. B.

Not unless it is barbed wire.

BRING SUIT AT ONCE.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A party who lived in my building sold out his store, owing me one month's rent. He promised to pay three days later. Ten months have passed without payment. How long a time before I can demand my money? L. S.

You can sue for your money immediately.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CHANGING A NAME.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you inform me what steps are necessary to have one's name changed? Before what judge would I have to appear? What would be the approximate cost? S. W.

1. No legal steps are necessary, unless you personally prefer to have the matter appear on the court records. You can simply notify your friends of the change and commence using the new name. It will be legal for all purposes. In order to avoid confusion it would be well for you to sign legal documents, etc., "John Smith, formerly William Jones."

2. The judge to whom the matter is assigned is in the Circuit or Superior court clerk's office.

3. Ten dollars court costs, plus advertising and attorney's fees—not less than $30 in all. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WILL NOT BE LEGAL.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is it legal for first cousins to marry in Illinois? If not, kindly state nearest place at which such a license could be secured. Would it then be legal for couple to reside in Illinois? E. D. K.

1. No.
2. New Jersey.
3. Not if they reside in Illinois and intend to return here to live.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

COMMON LAW MARRIAGES.

Streator, Ill., Nov. 7.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Where two people have lived together for four years, two in Illinois and two in Iowa, and were not married, is it necessary for either to obtain a divorce in either state before being legally married to another person? Is there a common law marriage law in Illinois? In Iowa? J. R. J.

1. Yes, in Iowa. No, in Illinois, unless they so lived together before 1905.
2. In force in Iowa. Not in force in Illinois since 1905.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A DRAFTING ACT.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there a law in force that could compel me, an American citizen, to go to war if war were declared? J. H.

No. But a drafting act can be passed by congress. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

THE ADAMSON LAW.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Does the Adamson law as passed provide for time and a half for overtime after eight hours' work?
JOS. D. MARSHALL.

The Adamson law does not provide for time and a half for any work done after eight hours. All overtime is paid at a rate not less than the pro rata rate for the standard eight hour work day.

TWELFTH STREET AS A BOULEVARD.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is there to be a boulevard on Twelfth street where they are to widen it? S. J. WILLIAMS.

Twelfth street, when widened, will not be a boulevard, in the sense of being under the jurisdiction of the west park commissioners. Special assessment proceedings are under way, however, to pave the street with granite blocks on eight inches of Portland cement concrete from Ashland avenue to Canal street. This assessment has been spread and will be filed in court within three weeks, and if confirmed during the ensuing winter the work will be done in the summer of 1917. M. J. FAHERTY,

CITY MARKET HOUSES.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—That there is a combination among the wholesalers, jobbers, and the retailers is demonstrated by the printed market bulletins advertising "bargain" days in food supplies. These show a wonderful unanimity in prices. These dealers, knowing that the universal cry is "high prices" and that the consumer is anticipating an advance, coolly and blandly say: "Eggs are 48 cents today, madam, and salt pork has advanced to 25 cents a pound. Very sorry, but we can't help it. It's the other fellow who is to blame."

Chicago with her 2,000,000 population should be able to break this food and coal combine before the snow flies, or there will be starvation and bread lines, perhaps worse conditions, throughout this city during the winter.

Is it not possible for the city government, backed by her wide awake, energetic business women, to establish municipal market houses, one or two in each ward, to buy at wholesale direct from the farmers and other producers and sell at cost to her citizens, the purchasers to make their own deliveries? Market houses are not an experiment in many of our large eastern cities; today they are an absolute necessity in Chicago and we believe should be conducted by the city and to sell at cost to her people, for at least a specified time and until the food monopoly is throttled.

ADDISON C. THOMAS.

NEGRO WOMEN DISCOURAGED.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It is very discouraging to 10,000,000 American citizens when such influential women as Miss Jane Addams and Miss Mary McDowell work for a party which is dominated by men of the Tillman-Vardaman type, a party whose policy is to disfranchise and oppress one-tenth of its citizens for no other reason than race hatred.

We who live in the same city with these two noble women had hoped that they would speak one word, at least, in our defense during this campaign.

We feel that the humiliation and oppression to which we have had to submit during the last four years are as worthy of some notice as the eight hour law for a few hundred men of another race.

We also feel that the peonage practiced in the south is of as much importance as the child labor law.

MRS. K. J. BILLS.

MY BROTHER'S KEEPER.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 8.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—When I took up THE TRIBUNE I saw by the headlines that six Americans had been killed through the torpedoing of a vessel. With a second glance to see the name of the vessel and the point at which it was attacked, I turned to the markets, football news, etc., and thought nothing further of it. During the day I talked to as many as fifty people on different subjects and never mentioned, nor did any of them, the fact that American citizens had been murdered by a foreign power.

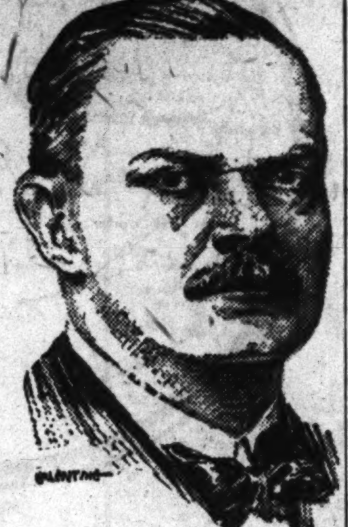
On reading the evening paper I again noticed a reference to it and again turned the pages without giving it a second thought; and then the force of your "yellow race" editorials dawned upon me, and I said to myself, "What, in God's name, is the matter with me and with the American public that the murder by a foreign nation of our fellow Americans is taken as a matter of course and scarcely given a second thought?"

I was compelled to acknowledge the application of your editorials to myself and to the American public, that this administration has robbed the American people of their national spirit until we care nothing for our national honor or for the lives of our American brethren and, in excusing ourselves, we say, with Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

H. VAN CLEVE.

SIN

by Edward Goldbeck



SAINT AUGUSTINE, who lived from 354 to 430 A. D., tells us in his Confessions that near his father's vineyard there was a pear tree full of pears and that one day, as a boy, he went with other youngsters to shake the tree and steal the pears which fell down. After he has made a clean breast of this crime he cries out with the unmistakable accent of anguish: "Such, O Lord, was the miserable heart which in your pity you have gracefully drawn out of the deepest abyss!"

Nathaniel Mather who lived about 1700, wrote in his diary: "When very young I went astray from God, and my mind was altogether taken with vanities and follies, such as the remembrance of them does greatly abase my soul within me. Of the manifold sins which then I was guilty of, none so sticks upon me as that being very young I was whittling on the Sabbath day, and for fear of being seen I did it behind the door. A great reproach of God! A specimen of that atheism that I brought into the world with me!" It is pathetic how the stern Puritan shyly tries to plead extenuating circumstances in the very midst of his self-indictment by repeating twice that he was so very, very young!

THIRTEEN hundred years separate these two outbursts of sincere repentance. Saint Augustine lived in northern Africa, Nathaniel Mather in New England. In spite of the immense distance in time and space the feeling of these two men was almost identical and we could exchange their words without violating the historical and psychological truth. There is the same high strung sensitiveness, the same uncompromising conception of responsibility, the same conviction that the littlest wrong is no less a wrong because it is little. We modern people think: "What a morbid exaggeration! A few miserable apples! Whittling on Sunday!" But Saint Augustine, whose influence has dominated centuries, was no fool. He certainly was able to see the difference between the theft of a few apples and parricide, he understood that one might look at sin from a worldly point of view and establish a scale of sinning with regard to the damage thereby inflicted on society.

But both men, Augustine and Mather, knew that there is nothing great and nothing small before God, that disobedience is disobedience, that wrong is wrong, and that the moment you begin to interpret God's laws and to haggle with him, you are undermining your conscience and endangering your spiritual welfare. Their confessions bear the stamp of the medieval mind. This mind is closely circumscribed and heavily chained, but its advantage is that everybody knows what he ought to do. There is no doubt about the moral significance of any act; they are all gauged and labeled. God's law stands as firm as the stars and when people affirm that they did not know as yet that in the celestial spheres there is no more stability than on our planet. The simplicity of the medieval creed seems very enviable to the restless modern mind, which is continually at work revaluing the old valuations.

TODAY confessions like those I have mentioned are impossible. Were they ever made they would sound untrue. Clever and hyperclever authors have proved and are proving again and again that man is "not guilty." The mental makeup of man, they say, consists of two elements: Heredity and environment. As I have created neither myself nor the environment into which I was born and in which I am living, I am not responsible. There is no conscience in the orthodox sense of the word. Conscience, that small inner voice, cannot be divine, because then it would speak the same language, give the same advice in all countries, in all ages, to all persons and under all circumstances. Conscience is:

1. Geographical—it is not the same in one country as in another.
2. Historical—it is not the same in one age as in another.
3. Personal—it is not the same in one person as in another.
4. Changeable—it alters with its owner's mind.

I have taken these theses from the book "Not Guilty," by the English Socialist, Robert Blatchford, which was sent to me by a friend some weeks ago. It is an interesting book and typical of our semi-rationalistic, semi-sentimental tendencies. The few sentences which I quoted show the difference between Saint Augustine and Mr. Blatchford, between the medieval and the modern mind. Mr. Blatchford is sure that he can explain everything. I do not think he can. I do not think anybody could.

BETWEEN these two theories—responsibility and irresponsibility—we have to choose, and if I am not mistaken the American has chosen already and chosen wrongly. For a man who comes from the other side nothing is more astonishing than to see how profoundly and unshakably indifferent Uncle Sam is to all metaphysics. Puritanism is dead in this nation. There is no worrying about our destiny, no painful sounding of deep moral problems, no doubt about the bases of virtue and happiness, no tragical conflict between individual aspirations and the rules of society. The landscape of the American mind is as flat as a pancake.

Youth especially seems perfectly detached from all such speculations, and I remember with a sad shake of my trembling head how at 17 we recited Schiller's "Don Carlos," glowing with noble enthusiasm, how indignant I was that we did not all rise when we sang Luther's "Ein' feste Burg" in the aula of our colleg and how we compelled the old "director" and the teachers to stand up when the wonderful hymn was sung the next time, how there was no more magical word than "Deutschland" for me, so that twenty-five years afterwards when I came to this country my cousin's first question was: "Are you still as proud of the fatherland as when you were a boy?" We had ideals then. . . .

But I am rambling. The question which interested me was the social value of the medieval conception of responsibility as shown in the two confessions. We may smile at their self-searching exaggerations or we may remember to what cruelties they sometimes led and may abhorringly repudiate them, but we cannot deny that this feeling of responsibility must have given a man's character consistency, uprightness, reliability; in short, all the virtues of the sterner sort. The morality of these men was founded on granite, and I am at a loss while trying to discover what ours is based on.

Mr. Blatchford proposes the following two sentences as the foundation of a new morality: "Selfishness is bad and unselfishness is good" and "Any act is immoral and wrong which needlessly injures a fellow creature." We simply ask: "Why?" and there is no answer but that God taught us so or that conscience teaches us so. If we go away from this doctrine, there is not the slightest reason why I should not be selfish. Selfishness may be the only attitude which gives me happiness, which allows for my self-development. If people tell me that I should sacrifice myself to society, I may answer that I do not believe in society, that to my mind society is nothing but organized robbery, that the only law I see at work in it is that which leads to the survival of the fittest, i. e., of the most brutal and unscrupulous, that I do not believe in progress.

So much for the first sentence and with regard to the second it may be safely said that everybody who tramples down a competitor will be convinced that he has to do it. He is not injuring him "needlessly"; he sees the need very clearly, although the man who is crushed may not see it. Here is the weak spot of all so-called scientific attempts to build up a new morality. Up to this point they have been demonstrating methodically with compelling proof, or at least with convincing dialectics, and all of a sudden they appeal to our faith, to sentiment, just the way the preacher does.

THE trouble is that the doctrine of "not guilty," while it tries to lift society to a higher level, is destructive and will only contribute to lower our morals. If you tell people that they are not responsible, they will be shrewd enough to infer that they cannot be punished, and the teachers of the new morality emphasize that themselves. If you cannot punish wrongdoers, society and state will be at the mercy of ruffians very soon. The prophets deny that, but I think that not very many of us will share their optimism. They say that criminals ought to be treated like sick people—while in medieval times sick people were often treated like criminals—but this would lead to a chaos of inverted notions. Civilization would perish through mental anarchy.

Perhaps Mr. Blatchford would say now: "Well, be frank, my dear critic, do you believe that man is responsible?" and I would have to answer: "No!" Every action of ours is the last link of an endless chain; it reaches backward and forward into eternity; it is the necessary and inevitable effect of unknown causes. But I deny that we ought to draw the last consequences of every thesis which seems logically unassailable. I maintain that it is impossible and that the attempt would spell ruin. We may admit that man is "not guilty," and in spite of it we must hold him responsible.

Looking at the matter theoretically I side with Mr. Blatchford; looking at it practically I am, as Beaconsfield said, "on the side of the angels." In private life the solution of the problem can be found without an insurmountable difficulty. Let us judge ourselves with the severity of the Puritans and let us think of the others as "not guilty" because heredity and environment made them what they are. But in public life we cannot abandon the idea that everybody is responsible, as long as we care to uphold and to develop the civilization which we have built up and which with all its defects is immensely valuable.

EVERY attempt to weaken the feeling of personal responsibility seems pernicious to me. I think that a man and a nation both can be saved only by the strongest possible development of this feeling. I think that in this very moment there is no more momentous task in this country than that. If I were the president I would announce a holiday of atonement after the election campaign and admonish people to ponder over the sentence that this nation can never become a better nation if we do not all of us strive for that feeling of responsibility which pervaded the soul of Saint Augustine and Nathaniel Mather. How many words would not have been spoken, how many deeds would not have been done if we were still guided by the small inner voice to which so very few of us listen!

This nation is threatened by the unrestrained selfishness of the individual which sets its ego on the throne and adores it. To tell such a nation in a moment of danger and distress that we are not guilty, whatever we may do, is the crime of a well meaning idealist, and those crimes are the most dangerous ones because the personal integrity of the perpetrators makes the people think that they cannot be but right. Political development, national progress is impossible without ethical development and progress. The nation's destiny lies with every single man. Tell him that he is the master of his fate, the captain of his soul, that he is shaping the future of the nation, that his children and children's children will bless him or curse him according to his merits, that he is responsible for everything he says or does to God or however he may call the unknown power which created and permeates the universe. This is salutary teaching, but the humanitarian theories which I sketched lead back to confusion and barbarism.

THE prophets of the new doctrine—there are many of them—will probably say: "We must confess the truth without heeding the consequences, and you, too, ought to do it. If we do not believe any longer in revelation and in a rigid, immutable divine law, then we have to say so." I would answer that I am very much in doubt about that alleged duty of ours. We all know that no human being is the exclusive proprietor of truth and that the mysteries of creation have not been cleared up by any scientific doctrine as yet. Darwin himself never made this claim. So I do not see why I should not be silent about these problems if I think that to talk recklessly about them would bring damage to my nation. You remember the idealist Werle in Ibsen's "Wild Duck," who held that the truth—his truth, of course—ought to be said at any moment, under any circumstances and at any cost whatsoever, without reticence, without shame, without mitigation, and how he wrecked the lives of those who were nearest to him?

I do not think that "sin" is an obsolete notion which ought to be eliminated from our lives. I am afraid we shall not become morally better nor intellectually deeper by such a process. We may become stolid and stupidly quiet, but that will not be the peace which Saint Augustine means when he says: "Our heart cannot be quieted until it resteth in thee." The explanation that not hurt noble natures, but in the coarser ones it may do we are beings made up by heredity and environment will away with all moral scruples.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Blithely I started out to see the publishers, to look over their fall samples of authors and to choose a few in which I thought the Tabloidites would be most interested. All of them have a full line of their top notch best sellers, but they are all off hunting or resting up from their summer vacations or buried in the woods of New England, taking their pens in their hands or simply living in the middle west or on the Pacific coast.

I suppose every one thinks, as I did, that because New York is the center of publishing in this limitless land of ours it is the center of the literary output. I've had it impressed upon me by the Ancient Mariner's glittering eye method that the albatross of failure hangs leadily upon the neck of any one who tries to write anywhere except on the island of Manhattan. I thought there was a literary social season when those who, by some ghastly trick of fate, were forced to live outside the city rushed back for a winter of reveling feasts of reason and flows of soul.

But they don't all come to New York even. After they have "made good," the publishers say, often the authors come only once a year for a week or two of consultation. They cite for you Booth Tarkington, Harry Leon Wilson, Henry Kitchell Webster, Margaret Deland, and numberless others. Dorothy Canfield Fisher has gone to Paris with her children to be near her husband, who is doing ambulance service at the French front. Edith Wharton is also in Paris. I heard something about Conigsby Dawson that surprised me. He is a member of a Canadian regiment, you know, and he has been written about so much as a Canadian that I was amazed to hear that he is the son of a Canadian pastor in Newark, N. J.

New England is growing more and more populated with authors who have become successful enough to buy a country place, where they live during the entire year. "You'd be surprised at the number of our best sellers which come from the middle west," one of the publishers said—"Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin. Some of our most popular books are written right in your own part of the country."

There are in New York countless charming young magazine writers and authors of one or two or three books, but all of the older and more established ones leave the rush of the city as soon as they can. I asked at the Authors' league whether they had a club or not, and they said that thus far they have nothing but business offices, and if they do build a club, as they hope to some day, it will be out in the country.

So much for the open season for authors in New York. Perhaps with the election over they'll venture into town. If they do I'll try to find 'em and get them to stop in for a Tabloid chat next Sunday.

"TRAGEDIES" (John Lane), by Arthur Symons, includes a Cornish tragedy in three acts in verse called "The Harvesters" and two one-act plays, "The Death of Agrippina" and "Cleopatra in Judea." Arthur Symons, the cognoscenti say, "stands at the head of all British poets of his generation."

One of the first books I saw here was the new illustrated volume of "The Spoon River Anthology." There are illustrations by Oliver Herferd and decorative tail and head pieces and a sort of biblical text type used for the headings of the epitaphs. And the other simple typed edition will be out of print. I told them at the Macmillan company I thought it was a crime against book humanity. They said the illustrations cost a lot of money. Just stop in and look at it the next time you pass a book shop and see if you don't agree with me. Mr. Masters chuckled over the illustrations when he saw them last week, they said, and liked the new edition. I'm going to find out the minute I get home whether he really likes it or was just being polite.

Madeline Z. Doty, author of "Society's Misfits," has come home from a three months' visit in Europe, where she went to study the changes in the social conditions of the belligerent countries which have taken place since her earlier visit shortly after the war began. She says that personal liberty has absolutely disappeared. Although she had the best credentials she says that she was shadowed from one end of Germany to the other, and that she had to sew her notes in her coat sleeves in order to keep them from being confiscated, so great is the official fear of having a document leave the country. Everywhere in Germany, she says, there was a wild cry for peace which was echoed, though less emphatically, in Paris and London, through which she passed on her return. She begins a series of articles on conditions in Germany in today's TRIBUNE.

I am still hearing most amazing reports of the Song and Light festival which was held in Central park, New York, some weeks ago. "There were lanterns of marvelous designs and colors, great splashes of color——" Every one seemed to talk about the lanterns, to wonder where they came from, who made them. They were designed after the manner of his new system of design by Claude Bragdon, who was for the evening master of lights. You may remember some of his things at the architectural exhibit at the Art institute last winter. He is an architect and an author. "Projective Ornament" (Knopf) and his new book, "Four Dimensional Vistas," are the exposition of his fascinating new theory of design.

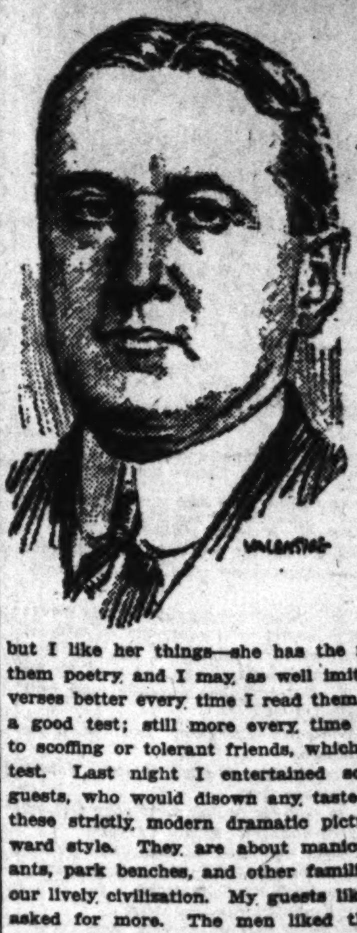
"Fellow Captains" (Holt) is a little book by Sarah Cleghorn and Dorothy Canfield Fisher, which came into being in a strange manner, so they told me at the Holt office. Sarah Cleghorn was tired and ill a while ago. She didn't want to take up Christian Science or Mental Science. There seemed to be something in the Emmanuel Movement which she wanted, but it didn't satisfy her. Yet she felt that the only remedy for her condition must come from her own mind and heart. So she set about making a philosophy for herself. In a few months she was literally another woman. She wrote down her experiences and some of the beautiful bits of philosophy which she had been saying over to herself and offered it for publication. It didn't seem just the sort of thing which the world in general would accept and the manuscript was returned to her. She and Dorothy Canfield Fisher, who are the best of friends, went to spend a part of the summer in a quiet little village in New England. There a sort of symposium about Sarah Claghorn's philosophy was held each day. That symposium, with the name transcribed exactly, Sarah, Dorothy, Anna, and others, comprise a part of the book. Mrs. Fisher's most popular short story makes up another part of the book and her notebook of helpful quotations another part. All of that is published in the slender volume, "Fellow Captains."

FREE VERSE

by Robert Herrick



THE other day an old friend showed me some press notices of her first volume of verse. (That vanity of the first volume when one pays 10 cents apiece for clippings of a few lines of bungling newspaper praise or blame of one's cherished offspring!) My friend's verse is of the strictly modern kind that challenges criticism as being "free." I don't know how "free" it is nor how much of it will abide the test of time as true poetry, but I like her things—she has the modesty not to call them poetry and I may as well imitate her. I like her verses better every time I read them to myself, which is a good test; still more every time I read them aloud to scoffing or tolerant friends, which is an even greater test. Last night I entertained some prosaic dinner guests, who would disown any taste for "poetry," with these strictly modern dramatic pictures in straightforward style. They are about manicurists, bath attendants, park benches, and other familiar paraphernalia of our lively civilization. My guests liked what I read and asked for more. The men liked them especially, and they were sleepy after a day of hard exercise and, I trust, a good dinner. That is a severe test of anything "literary,"—to try it on an ordinary male when he is well fed and digesting. If verse can stand that test it must have substance and power (in the vernacular, punch and pep).

To return to my friend's reviews: There were a large number of them for a first volume of any sort of verse, and to my surprise almost all of them showed that somebody had really read the book, not merely copied those fluent phrases so obligingly furnished by the publisher's literary editor and sent around with the review copies of a new book. Not only did these "reviews" reveal to my practiced eye that the "critics" had read my friend's verses diligently, but also that they had been so stirred emotionally that they must express deep disgust or enthusiastic approval for the verses. The reasons for their emotions did not matter to me; the critics did not seem clear about that! But their vigorous, not to say violent, expressions of like or dislike proved that my friend's "free verse" had gotten under their skins, as it had under the skins of my dinner guests.

THOSE who disapproved liked neither the subjects nor the style—some disliking the subjects because of the style and some the style because of the subjects, and some both together. It doesn't matter. Some thought the subjects vulgar, low, "unpoetic"—"garbage," as one lively old lady said of the same poems. Some who spoke with smug authority were especially severe about the form—the "freeness" of the verse. Their denunciations reminded me of the moral fervor with which Jeffrey tried to slay Keats' immortal volume. Such staid and reputable journals as "The Springfield Republican" and "The New York Post" emptied the vials of a severe virtue on the head of my friend.

I wondered how any printed words could arouse so much violent emotion in these days when men and women are agonizing over sudden death and lifelong misery, and the daily toll of human "casualties" mounts by the tens of thousands on the battlefields of Europe. The effect of war on strictly neutrals would seem to be to make them bloodier minded in their words about peaceful matters. This was what I should call gory criticism, meat ax criticism, extermination criticism.

"Good!" I said, handing the clippings back to my friend. "It does not make any difference to anybody what they say; the fact they want to say it so badly is what counts. You got well under their skins?" And then I pondered many things.

"IF this is poetry, etc.!" What difference does it make whether you or I think it is or is not poetry? It may flatter our own little souls to set up all sorts of principles and standards about what is or is not poetry, and we may take satisfaction with a fine pride in refusing to give the meed of our praise to anything printed in capitalized lines that does not conform to our exactly ideals of form. The "highbrows" have quarreled, almost bled, for generations in this acrimonious dispute as to what is poetry. But commoner folk go on reading what appeals to them, what illumines life for them, thrills them or comforts them, blissfully ignorant of whether it conforms to any high standard of what poetry should be, Matthew Arnold's or another. They have loved the psalms, the Song of Songs, Homer, and Burns, which highbrows acknowledge to be good poetry; also Tom Hood, Moore, and Kipling, about which the highbrows are less sure. They like our own masters, and last night my audience liked immensely my friend's crisp dramatizations of the surface tragedies of the gritty life we all lead.

These guests of mine, good golfers and good husbands, business men, who would be ashamed to be found awake after dinner with a volume of "poetry" in their hands, listened and asked for more! A large and ever larger public of the same sort is doing the same thing, evincing an awakened appetite for verse, free and bound. Poetry, at least what goes as such on the publishers' catalogues, is beginning to have a commercial rating once more. It is a merchantable product, not a subsidized charity of the cultivated rich. Therefore it should win consideration from the philistine minded, and it should cause the critics to ponder as I am pondering the phenomenon.

Why has the great public begun to read and to buy verses? Why do directly minded persons, otherwise known as lowbrows, find a satisfaction in modern "free verse" that they have long failed to find in more formal, academically approved poetry?

TO tell the whole truth, the new poets are often to blame for the furious abuse they frequently receive at the hands of the authorized critics. They are too self-conscious, too argumentative, like their brothers of the cubist and futurist brush. Good wine never needs a bush, and compelling art in any form never needs a theorizing, intellectual defense. The propaganda so many times becomes more voluminous and vociferous than the product championed. Let the critics take care of the propaganda—the critics of the next generation when the product is already becoming out of fashion and conventionalized! Let the poets write—futurist, imagist, free or classic. Let them trim their lamps and forget themselves and their theories. A defense never yet established a form of expression. It is the satisfaction of a human need that does that.

"Free verse" has been produced before the present conscious tribe of writers was born and will continue to be produced long after their distinctions and defenses are forgotten. When I was teaching composition to college students I found that many of my students liked to write verses, of the conventional rhymed and clipped variety, and I encouraged them to do it, not that they were poets or produced even readable verse, but because I realized that a certain sort of valuable satisfaction resulted from this form of expression. There were others who liked to write what their hearts were swelling with of emotion and ideals who could not easily find rhymes and had no ear for ordinary rhythms. I encouraged them to write what they could in unpolished and irregular lines, and they wrote abundantly what today we should call "free verse." Often it was naïve, often trivial and trite, sometimes beautiful in feeling and phrasing, always more vital than the conventional "verses."

For what really counts most in verse as in prose is the stuff of which it is composed—the emotion, the picture, the truth, as it may be, not the set rhyme nor regular rhythm, and the great uninformed public has always known it. What one seeks in verse as in any other art product is a vivification of the consciousness of life. The verse that in any way illumines life will always find its end in some reader's heart, whether it is formal or informal, whether new or old, lyric or narrative. Everybody acknowledges the charm of song, but there are subtler harmonies than jingles or regular chants; there are undiscovered rhythms and harmonies. Otherwise poetry would be indeed a lost art.

THE great significance to me in the renaissance of poetry, which we are so often told is now going on, at least in the bold appearance of "free verse," is the liberating of the unliterary person. The new creed should be—everybody his own poet! The creating of poetry is no longer a reserved priestly function of the few; each one and all of us are poets, did we but know it—having our illuminated perceptions and exalted moments of insight into the beauty and the mystery of living, our own urge of joy and delight in expression. It is an added hold on life to realize that we may attempt to render these high lights of our experience ourselves, not be content solely with listening to the harmonies of others which are not always just our own. Free verse, I take it then, has enormously enfranchised the great proletariat of unconscious poets, is making for a better understanding of the joy of poetry and of living.

Naturally this does not appeal to the snobbish, the cult, the caste instinct which is strong in critics as in any other ruling class. It is pitifully human to like to exclude others from what we think to be our very own, whether it be a society or a domain of art—and it is pitifully foolish. The critics should spend less effort and time in trying to keep unworthy aspirants out of the new pastures on Parnassus and more in exploiting the beauties that may be discovered there.

It goes without saying that not all can be as fine, as excellent, as fully endowed by nature for beautiful expression as a few. It is as everywhere else in life—many are called, but few are chosen. But because I am not by the grace of nature a Chopin is no reason why I should not endeavor to make little melodies for myself and others. And my efforts to express that which is in my own heart will make me all the keener to understand and appreciate those other greater melodies more eternally created by more gifted souls.

So I recommend to the gory school of critics the reflection that to be an "anti" is always to be on the losing side!

FRIENDS' CATALOGUE OUT.

THE FRIENDS OF AMERICAN ART is considering a purchase of some of the paintings in the present oil exhibit at the institute. The society's new catalogue has just been published. It is the fifth year book of the Friends of American Art, and it marks a period in the history of the society.

It offers to the public in condensed form the result of the work which has been accomplished by the society in the course of its five years of life. Before its organization the Art institute possessed few paintings by American artists and practically no sculpture of American origin. There are reproductions of the purchases made, together with a statement of such honors and prizes as have been won by them, and also a bibliography and short account of the artists.

In the last year the society has purchased thirteen paintings. Six of the artists whose work was chosen to hang on the walls of the Friends of American Art rooms are now represented in the present oil exhibition. They are Randall Davey, James R. Hopkins, Wilson Irvine, Leon Kroll, Edward H. Potthast, and Everett L. Warner.

"A Mountain Courtship" by James B. Hopkins. In Exhibition of American Oil Paintings.

Randall Davey's "Man and Monkey" is a different type of painting from his "Flowers," which the institute owns.

Davey is an eastern artist and has traveled over most of the world in the course of his life. James B. Hopkins, whose "Kentucky Mountaineer" belongs to the Friends' collection, won honorable mention a few days ago with his "Mountain Courtship." Wilson Irvine, whose "Autumn" Chicagoans have seen hanging for over a year now at the institute, has three paintings in the temporary collection. They are "Joyous June," "A New England Village," and "The Hickory Grove." Leon Kroll's "North River Front" is not so radically different from his "Building New York," "The Gay Bridge," and "Building the Ship," which are hanging in the new annex. Edward Potthast, whose "Holiday" we have in the Friends' exhibit, has a really delightful seashore painting in the temporary collection, and Everett L. Warner, whose "Snowfall in the Woods," most of us know well, has the "Winding Stream."

In addition to the unusually alluring exhibitions at the Art institute, Chicago has another attraction to offer in the opening of the Arts club last week. This club, which is made up of 300 members, all of them active Chicagoans in the world of fine arts, has its rooms on the fifth floor of the Thurber building, which is popularly known as the Fine Arts annex.

Its first exhibit is made up of paintings by John Singer Sargent and Henry Golden Dearth. Much of the work of Singer has been contributed from the Boston exhibit, while the Friends of American Art have loaned their "Fountain" and their "Portrait of Mrs. Charles Gifford Dyer" from the collection of the Art institute.

Henry Golden Dirth, whose work as a landscape painter won him such a fine reputation a few years ago, has a number of extremely bizarre and decorative pieces on exhibit. Some of them are paintings of still life, others conventionalized portraits, and still others Japanese motifs and hints of marines. They charm by their color and by their sheer oddity. They show off to excellent advantage, too, against the soft grays and blues and cream tones of the decorations of the new club rooms. They are to be on exhibit all through November.

ILLUSION

IN the slate colored sky of a gray day nearing evening the wild geese fly, calling, in astonishment, apprehension or alarm. The place over which they pass is one devoted to the ordinary ways of life with all its conventions and small duties. The geese came out of the wild.

The person hearing this call from overhead and going out doors in hope of seeing a wedge of far away flying forms, follows the call of illusion. He lives in unavoidable reality and modifies it by illusion. He is not what he knows he is but something which he hopes to be.

The call of the wild goose from overhead stirs every rebellious emotion which would attack the realities of life. The wild goose is illusion. It is the unattainable. It sounds from the fairy lands of fancy. It awakes the suggestions of things different from the commonplace.

Things are as they are, but ought to be different. The call of the wild goose overhead is the call of what is different. Conventions and habits disappear. Lakes and rice bordered shores come into the imagination. The partridge whir out of the thickets and the wolf howls about the place at night. Bear leave their track in the sand and deer jump out of the clover by the trail.

An instinct for something different from the routine of an orderly life abides and when the wild goose calls from overhead illusion of a simpler, better life awakes and takes possession of the imagination. The wild goose is illusion. It is something which suggests an idea valued but unattainable.

THE NOVEMBER SKY SHOWING POSITION OF STARS AT 8 O'CLOCK TONIGHT (ARROW POINTS TO ALDEBARAN)
DRAWING by S F MAXWELL

ALDEBARAN AND NOVEMBER SKIES.

EARLY evening now finds the summer stars on the western rim and the first of the winter stars, Aldebaran, rising in the east. There are six distinctly winter stars of great brilliance, so brilliant that they make the clear winter sky a spectacle surpassing that of summer. They are Aldebaran, Betelgeuse, and Rigel in the huge striding constellation of Orion, Pollux of the Twins, Procyon, the Lesser Dog star, and the unequaled Sirius, the Greater Dog star.

As Vega, the summer wonder, is down in the west, Aldebaran is up in hte east. Aldebaran is in the constellation of Taurus, the Bull. In the same constellation are the Pleiades and the Hyades. The Pleiades can be located by any one who will look into the eastern heavens for a swarm of hazy stars, a gossamer grouping which is conspicuous enough to claim the attention.

The rosy star almost directly under the Pleiades is Aldebaran. Its coloring is pronounced. It is a brighter ruby than Antares, the far southern star which derives its name from the fact that to the sight it is like the red planet Mars.

There are thirteen brighter stars than Aldebaran in the sky, but only seven brighter among the stars which can be seen in our latitude. It is going away from our system at the rate of about thirty miles a second, and already it is so distant that light from it requires thirty-two years to reach the earth. We should get nearly fifty times as much light from it as we get from our sun if we were as close to it as we are to our sun.

Aldebaran makes its appearance in the east in early autumn and thereafter shines for eight months in the evening sky. At this time of year two other stars dominate regions about and below this first of the winter stars, Capella above and Fomalhaut far in the south.

These three stars at this time seem to have the sphere of influence in their parts of the heavens, they so command the regions in which they are found.

Aside from the moon the great planet Jupiter is the most conspicuous object in the sky, but its moonlike quality will prevent the casually observant from mistaking it for one of the stars. When a brilliant planet is in the sky its presence might confuse the person seekng for a brilliant star unless the person were familiar with the planets and knew how conspicuous these relatively insignificant but strikingly beautiful objects throw the really significant but less striking points of the sky into the background.

Not far from Jupiter, in the constellation of Cetus and in a peculiarly starless area, is the most spectacular of all variables, Mira. It is now a part of the eastern sky, but identification of it is reserved for other than the casual observer. After being entirely invisible for eleven months it increases in radiance until it is a third magnitude star. In a few weeks its brilliancy declines, and it again becomes an inconspicuous object. The cause is two swarms of meteors, one of which surrounds the star like a ring, while the other moves about in an eccentric elliptical orbit, and every eleven months the second swarm crashes through the first.

Other interesting variables are Algol and Lambda Tauri, which are of the bright and dark star eclipsing type, and Delta Aphei and Beta Lyrae, of the type where two bright stars periodically obscure each other.

"What is the Manicure club? What do you do there?"

"We sit up all night trying to better each other's hands."

"How do you figure it that a man who wins at cards nearly always loses on the horses?"

"Well, you can't shuffle horses."

"Only 'Gets-It' for Me After This!"

It "Gets" Every Corn Every Time. Painless. Nothing More Simple.

When You See These Pretty Girls in Your Druggist's Window It's a Good Time To End Your Corns.

'GETS-IT' every time!" That's what they all say the very first time they use "GETS-IT." It's because "GETS-IT" is so simple and easy to use—put it on in a few seconds—because there is no work or corn-fooling to do, no pain that shoots up to your heart. It gets your corns off your mind. All the time it's working—and then, that little old corn peels right off, leaving the clean, corn-free skin underneath—and your corn is gone! No wonder millions prefer "GETS-IT." Try it tonight.

New Ford Carburetor Attachment gives wonderful results

Makes the Ford carburetor an instrument of $25 efficiency and automatically results in highest efficiency in starting and at all speeds.

Tested and approved by the American Automobile Association

Ford starts easier

How many times when your Ford has stood all night, have you nearly worked an arm off and worn your temper to a frazzle, trying to get an explosion. Put on our attachment, and the car will start easier than it ever started before.

"As soon as I had the Myle-Mayker attached I turned the needle valve down nearly one-half turn and the engine started on first turn of crank without using choker. This is the first time I have seen her do this except in very hot weather."
W. A. VAUGHAN,
Timberville, Va.

Ends the "Big Noise"

How many times when you have started your Ford, have you been embarrassed because of the roar and clatter that would make a concrete mixer jealous. Wouldn't it be dandy to let your motor idle, and have the motor just "put," "put," "put"—evenly and quietly. That's just what our attachment will do for your car.

"I installed the Myle-Mayker on my car, and drove it on a trip of 166 miles on 6 gallons of gasoline. The engine runs much more quietly than without it."
G. R. MOON,
Martinsville, Ohio.

Crawls on high gear

And when you're caught in crowded traffic, how often you've wished to goodness you could stay in high and crawl along as the other cars do, instead of shift, shift, shift. You can throttle down to less than 4 miles an hour without a jump, jerk or hop, if you get our attachment.

"We find that with your Myle-Mayker we can throttle it down as low as four miles per hour on 'high.' It is also the quickest attachment that I ever had seen, taking only five minutes to attach same on car."
LEWIS L. LIBBY, Gen. Mgr.,
Libby's Supply House Co.,
Windsor Locks, Conn.

Cooler motor—less carbon

In addition to "easier starting," "quieter running," "crawling on 'high'," when you consider that our attachment practically ends carbon, makes the engine run cooler at all speeds, and thus ends the chief cause of repair bills, then and on top of all this, when we tell you that

"First—it picked up from 18 miles to the gallon to 26 miles. That means eight miles better to the gallon. Second—it has more power. Third—it cranks so easily that my 12-year-old boy can crank it, and on one long run made on the hottest day this season I used only about a pint of water."
H. A. GOODWIN,
Glendale, Cal.

We guarantee a gasoline saving of 4 to 10 miles per gallon—$1.50 to $5 per month.

—you certainly would jump at the chance to pay the small price of $5 for this attachment, especially when it is sold on the basis of 30 days trial, money back unless satisfied.

Gentlemen:—Kindly send me, prepaid, one Myle-Mayker. I enclose $5. I send this $5 with the distinct understanding that you guarantee the device to make the Ford engine easier starting, smoother, cooler, quieter running, freer from carbon and to save 15% to 50% on gasoline cost—also guarantee it to do the work for the life of the car. If not satisfied, I am at liberty to return the device at the end of thirty days, and you will refund my $5 without question.

When Your Battery Goes On A "Bat" LAKE WATER
VESTA

WHEN your battery goes on a "bat"—gives out and leaves you flat at the most critical moment—when you need it most—when Old King Winter has just marked up 6° below zero on his weather report and the oil is so stiff in your crankcase you can "barely turn her over,"

—that's the time you wonder if you really ever had the right battery.

What will you do then? Will you turn your battery in for one of the same kind or will you exchange it for a battery that will last you "twice as long as any other make?"

VESTA DOUBLE LIFE STORAGE BATTERY

If you are keen for real battery satisfaction that's the time you will investigate the Vesta—a battery that costs no more than ordinary batteries—yet lasts twice as long as any of them.

The reason for this additional battery satisfaction lies in the Vesta Indestructible Isolator construction—an exclusive patented battery improvement found only in Vesta Batteries—and the achievement of 18 years experience in building automobile starting, lighting and ignition batteries.

Vesta Service Stations, found nearly everywhere, will show you this construction and your own eyes will convince you. They will make an allowance on your old battery.

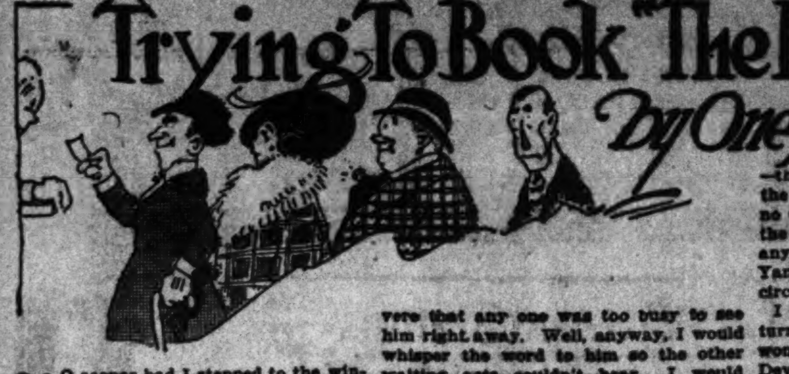
Trying To Book "The Last Half"

By Oney Fred Sweet



NO sooner had I stepped to the window that looked out onto the business-like waiting room before Devere, of Devere and Devon, touched me on the arm and wanted to know if I had anything for him for "the last half." Mr. Devere's eyes wore around them a tired expression, but his freshly shaved and powdered cheeks hinted that he had come direct from the barber shop, and his tie had been carefully arranged beneath his soft cloth collar. Though outwardly Mr. Devere looked like a parade float representing "absolute independence," I detected just the slightest quivering about his sensitive mouth as he shifted his cane to the crook of his left arm and began scratching the name of his act and address in the ledger on the counter window.

"The last half?" I echoed when Mr. Devere straightened back and again began to peer at me.

"He means can we get him an engagement for the last half of the week," explained Louie, the veteran vaudeville booking agency clerk. "You see, in this game there are split weeks—three days in one house, four in another."

"Out of a job and looking for one," I says.

"Our act is 'resting,'" corrected Mr. Devere.

"No actor is ever out of a job," further explained Louie at my side, "When he's not engaged he's always 'resting.' Just stick by the window today. You won't have an idle minute. It'll be a slow day if at least 300 acts don't call."

I turned back to Mr. Devere and asked him the nature of his act. Never would I make such a mistake again. Mr. Devere's eyes flamed and his lips became hard set. He glanced about among the other crowding acts with a "can-you-beat-that" smile of pity and a dumbfounded nod of his head.

"Do you mean to say, young man, that you have never heard of Devere and Devon, comedy acrobats—that you have never 'caught our act'?"

I made haste with the best apology I could think of off hand, but Mr. Devere cut me short. He informed me that his act had played on all the "big time" in the east; that his act was different from all others, and that he had a "following" that never let them off with less than nine curtains. And I had never heard of him? Had I been asleep somewhere the last four years?

"My act opens like this," continued Mr. Devere, beginning to gesture. "We open with full stage. I come on as a farmer—it always gets a laugh—then——"

Louie was giving me a kick in the shins. "They're all like that—sure to explain their act from start to finish with complete details at the least possible opportunity. You wouldn't understand half his terms. Tell him you'll take his name in to Mr. Doyle."

When Mr. Devere saw that I was about to get busy with the ledger he drew from his pocket a cigaret case and immediately assumed an attitude of bored self-assurance as he lit a cigaret. Frank Doyle, representative for the Marcus Loew and the Jones, Linick & Schaefer agencies, was seated in a closed office well removed from the window that looked out on the "bull pen." He was in busy consultation with Mr. Jones, but I told him that Mr. Devere of Devere and Devon was outside and that he had the last half of the week "open." Mr. Doyle told me was too busy to see anybody for the time present.

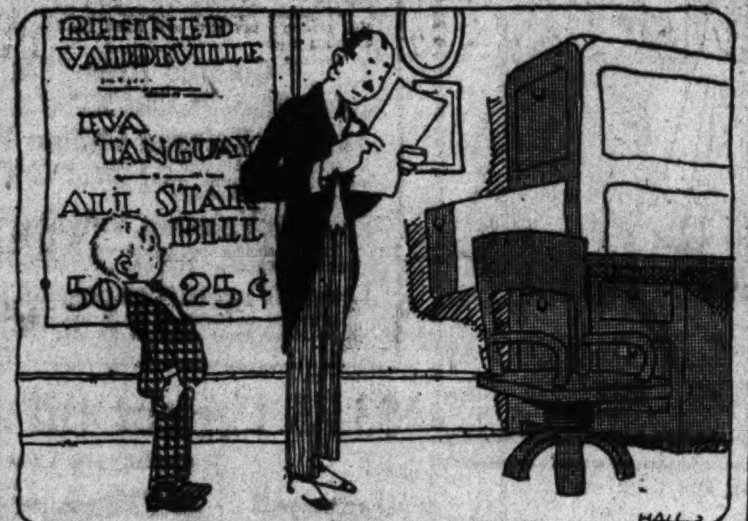
I hated to go back and tell Mr. Devere that any one was too busy to see him right away. Well, anyway, I would whisper the word to him so the other waiting acts couldn't hear. I would spare him that much. The Lyric Three, the Leonard Sisters, Lyman the mind reader—none of them should know that Mr. Devere wasn't given immediate entrée. But no sooner had I whispered my information than Mr. Devere let forth a surprised and indignant "What!" that was so loud it drifted clear out into the eleventh floor halls.

"Too busy to see me, eh?" bellowed Mr. Devere with a sarcastic smile. "Did you give him my name right? See here, you go back and tell Mr. Doyle that we've booked far bigger time than he's got to offer. Too busy to see me, huh. Go back and tell him I want to see him."

I stalled for a while, but Mr. Devere kept peering at me, so I shuffled back to Mr. Doyle's office.

"I'm sure you ought to see him, Mr. Doyle," I says. "He says he has got a great act."

"Didn't you tell him I was busy?" scowled Mr. Doyle. "Great act? Every performer has a 'great act'—the greatest act. If he didn't think so he wouldn't have the nerve to keep boosting it and he'd never be able to put it over with an audience. It takes some ability to be in vaudeville, but it takes a whole lot of nerve. Every performer out there in the waiting room has got a great act. That's the way they've got to feel about it to get by. Other acts may have better scenery or a better spot on the bill or been advertised heavier, but no one else has a better act."



"BUFFALO HAS MARKED THEM 'FAIR.'"

In the meantime Mr. Jones had turned to a filing case and brought forth a huge stack of memoranda. Among the 12,000 listed acts he finally came to Devere & Devon.

"Here they are," said Mr. Jones. "The reports show they were going good two years ago because of a song hit they introduced. The song got old and they've never been able to get hold of a new hit. Comedy stuff mostly stolen. Hard workers, but scenery shabby. Buffalo has marked them 'fair.'"

"You've got 'em all card indexed like that?" I asked in surprise.

"Certainly," said Mr. Jones, "unless they've never had a tryout. If these reports show they've pleased audiences we're interested. If they haven't pleased audiences what difference does it make how many canes they carry up to the window out there? We take into consideration that acts change, of course, but we've always got a good line on them. But no matter how good Devere and Devon are we haven't anything for them for the last half of this week."

So I went back and told Mr. Devere that I was certain there was nothing doing for him with Mr. Doyle for the "last half."

Whereupon Mr. Devere made me a confession.

"I'll tell you," he says confidentially. "As a matter of fact, our time's 'all open.' We're new here in the west. Take my name into Mr. Mathews and see what he can do for me on the 'Pan' time. Tell him we've got a new set of photos."

Mr. Mathews, representing the Pantages circuit, had an office just beyond Mr. Doyle's. I went in and showed him the ledger showing the freshly written name of Devere & Devon. "It's a big comedy-acrobatic act," I says. "First he comes out as a farmer and then——"

"I'm sorry," interrupted Mr. Mathews, "but you know our circuit is partly in Canada. We play Winnipeg, Calgary, and on to Vancouver. That's one thing our Canadian audiences won't stand for—the Yankee farmer. Devere & Devon, the name sounds all right for Canada—no German hint to it—and I judge from the nature of his act he don't bring in any purely United States gags, but the Yankee farmer stuff spoils it for our circuit anyhow."

I started for the door, and then I turned back toward Mr. Mathews. "I wonder what's going to become of Devere and Devon," I says.

"Devere and Devon will always be in the vaudeville game," answered Mr. Mathews. "I don't know Mr. Devere, but I know he is absolutely sure he has a great act, and whether he has or not I would never tell him otherwise. I know how long and how hard he has worked over it, lived with it, believed in it. Would you tell a mother that you didn't like the looks of her baby? Yet if Mr. Devere's act didn't look good to me I wouldn't book it, no matter what sort of an appeal he made.

"When I send out an act it's out for six months, and that act has got to be good before it starts. Sometimes we are fooled, and an act we've paid big money for may 'flop'; no doubt there's many a big act that's blushing unseen for lack of the right opportunity, but in the long run the audiences decide. I won't say the audiences always decide on merit. Between merit and novelty an audience goes wild over novelty every time. For instance, take the team of Bounce and Bump——"

"But Devere and Devon," I says. "Do you suppose they're broke?"

"My boy," philosophized the old timer, "Devere and Devon are performers. They are capable of acting 'off' as well as 'on.' Mr. Devere was clean shaven, was he not? He carried a cane? He radiated independence? His is only one of a thousand acts 'resting' in Chicago all the time. He may have come up here without having eaten breakfast and with the understanding that he no longer had credit at his hotel, but he isn't going to let us know. Some of the best acting an actor ever does is in the booking offices."

Mr. Devere was tapping with his gloved hand on the window counter when I returned. He had fully usurped the place of "front" in the waiting room, and sketch teams, singles, acrobats, dancers, and mind readers were resignedly waiting until he should have been attended to.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Devere," I says, "but——"

"They don't want to see me?" gasped Mr. Devere, as if the news I had brought was simply astounding.

"You might come back later," I says.

"Come back later, huh," sneered Mr. Devere, buttoning his short, tight fitting overcoat. "See here, I've got a regular act. I've played all the big time. I'm willing to pay the expense if you want to wire to Buffalo and Detroit. They'll tell you we took nine curtains. My act opens like this"—Mr. Devere had unbuttoned his overcoat again—"the act opens like this. Full stage, see. I come out first as a farmer——."

But it was the veteran window clerk, Louie, who interrupted.

"There's 199 more acts waiting for a hearing today," said Louie. "If Mr. Doyle and Mr. Mathews can neither one of 'em see Devere and Devon, and they've told you so, can't you let that settle it?"

And with myself pushed to one side, Louie began to make swift progress. Inside of ten minutes he had dealt with the Lyric Three, the Leonard Sisters, Lyman the mind reader, Novelli Brothers, "working with a palace set in full stage for nine minutes"; the Florida Five, "big girl act"; Hadja, "working in one, olio"; Moss and Fern, "full stage, carrying own settings, hanging piece"; and Desvol & Co., "using full stage, garden."

Acts, acts, acts—balancing acts, dramatic sketches, operatic songsters. Few booked—most of them registering "all open." Few admitted past the locked door with its sign, "Don't come in unless you are asked"—the majority hearing the phrase, "Haven't heard anything for you."

I hope Devere and Devon were booked for "the last half" somewhere—maybe Hammond or Waukegan. I half fancy I can see them working now. The curtain has gone up on "a full stage." The stage has been given a pink lighting effect and the orchestra is playing an entrance for Mr. Devere, who "comes on first as a farmer." He "gets a laugh," and at the finish the act gets "nine curtains." And Devere and Devon come out and smile and bow.

And down in the audience some one wistfully envies Devere and Devon for the pink tinted, music strewn pathway down which they must surely be tripping through life.

"DEVERE AND DEVON WILL ALWAYS BE IN THE VAUDEVILLE GAME," ANSWERED MR. MATTHEWS.

THE SECOND GUESSERS.

On yonder eve I lost a bet,
'Twas nothing in my gay young life;
I don't think I got overhet,
I'm sure I did not beat my wife.
I'm told I was most calm indeed
When I paid out that luscious dough—
But, O, it made my buzzum bleed
To hear him say:
"I told you so!"

I pay a bet to don or dame
And never sob or squawk or sigh;
No quivers quiv by diaphragm,
No tears bedew my honest eye.
I try to be a strong, brave man
When others with my shekels go,
But, gosh, it sure does get my Nan
When they remark:
"I told you so!"

This world of ours is full of guys
Who know it all, yes, nothing less;
No wonder they're so bloomin' wise,
For they have had the second guess.
And these are those I long to smite,
And ride upon a booted toe,
And chase into the gloomy night,
Where they can croak:
"I told you so!"

I TOLD YOU SO!

PALACE.

Emma Carus and Larry Comer:

"You have grown thinner since last season, haven't you?"

"Yes, about eighty pounds."

"Does it seem to make any difference?"

"Well, I should remark! The American people are beginning to gaze with pleasure on anything that has been reduced."

"Really, how many times have you been married?"

"Fifty-five, not counting my last husband."

"What is your idea in marrying so many times?"

"Some time I may get a good one."

"Well, why is it that love cannot go on forever?"

"The chief reason is that people insist on getting married."

McVICKERS.

Archie Nicholson—I'll never forget the time I first got married. It was on Friday, the 13th, 1913. No wonder I call Fridays and the number thirteen unlucky.

The first meal she cooked was a pie, but the flour was so tough I could hardly cut it. I had to blame it on the flour, 'cause she's a big, strong woman, and

I believe in safety first. But still, Rose is so gentle! Yes, her name is Rose; but, believe me, that's the first rose I ever saw without a scent. She ain't got no money.

Still, she wanted a piano right away, so I had to buy one for her. I paid $300.65 for it—$3 down and a dollar when they catch me in. And more yet besides, I didn't even get trading stamps with it.

But, believe me, my wife she certainly can sing. Last night she sang "William Tell." But I stood out on the street, by the door, so the neighbors could see I wasn't hurting her.

PALACE.

Elsa Ryan:

"What are husbands?"

"Husbands are the little things that run around flats."

McVICKER'S.

George Armstrong: I often heard about how good a Philadelphia lawyer is, but I don't think they have anything on me.

Last month Bill Johnson brought me up on a charge of breaking into his hen house. I fought the case all my own self. I told the judge I didn't break into it at all. I said: "I found one of the windows of the hen house open and I merely inserted my right arm and removed a few trifling hens from their perch." Now, of course, anybody knows my arm is not myself, and I told the judge just what I thought about it, and I fail to see how any one can punish the individual for an offense committed only by one of his limbs.

"That argument," said the judge to me, "is indeed very well put up. Following it logically I sentence the man's arm to one year imprisonment. He can accompany it or not, just as he chooses."

With a smile I unscrewed my cork arm, left it with the judge, and walked out.

Bert Savoy and Jay Brennan:

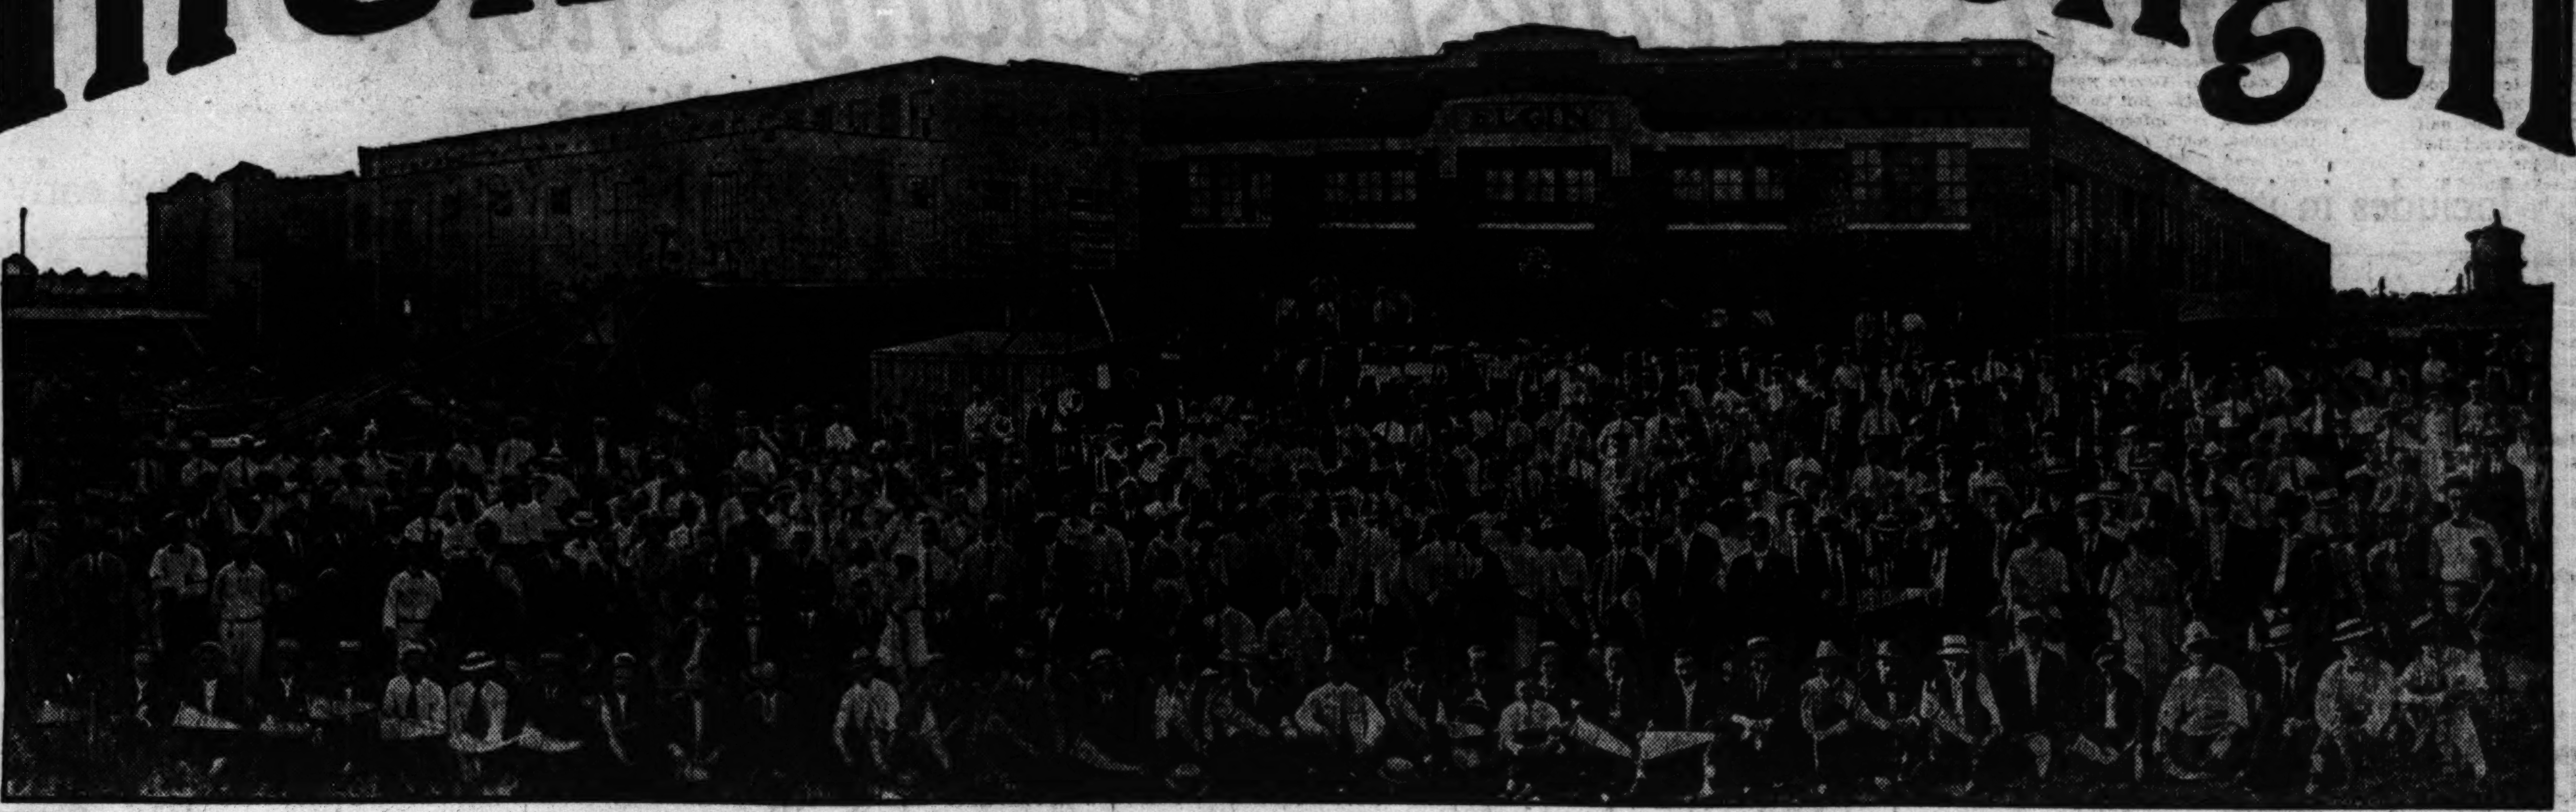
"What's your name?"

"What is my name? What is my name? My name's Nesbit."

"Evelyn Nesbit?"

"No, Evelyn Wasbit."

In Union there is Strength



PART OF MIGHTY THRONG OF ELGIN STOCKHOLDERS—ALL "BOOSTERS" FOR ELGIN CARS

Those shown represent only about one-ninth of the total number of stockholders of the Elgin Motor Car Corporation—Chicago's thriving young industrial giant—fastest growing motor car company in the world.

MIRACLE MEN OF THE MOTOR CAR INDUSTRY

—the fastest money-making business the world has ever known!

$1,000 Grows to $32,400 in 2 1-2 Years

In Detroit 2½ years ago a new Motor Car Company commenced operations. In eight months it had paid cash dividends amounting to 40%. During the first 2 years cash and stock dividends amounting to 1,440% were paid. The stock mounted in price from par to $1,800 per share in 2½ years. If you had bought $1,000 worth of that stock at par at the beginning it would now be worth about $18,000, and you would have drawn about $14,400 in dividends besides.

Sales Executive Breaks World's Automobile Selling Record

This Company had enough money to build cars and men who knew how to build them. The greatest problem that bothered all concerned was whether the small, strange type of car that had been decided upon could be sold. Dealers doubted it. The public laughed at the car and made funny jokes about it. One of the original stockholders of that Company, a thoroughly seasoned automobile man, was placed in charge of the Sales Department—the one real hard job the Company had.

At the end of sixty days Detroit newspapers were telling how this man, handicapped by the unknown car of peculiar type, had broken all world's records by selling more of those cars than any man had ever sold before in an equal length of time for a new Company, and the record still stands today as the greatest accomplishment in the history of automobile selling.

A less wonderful sales campaign would not have enabled the Company to make its unprecedented dividend record.

This Man Established a New World's Record for Selling Automobiles.

Master Car Builder Called "Miracle Man of Automobile Industry"

In Cleveland, about the same time, a small, struggling motor car company called upon a noted production man to take charge of the manufacture of its cars. The stockholders were thinking more about getting the Company upon a safe manufacturing and financial basis than about dividends, for dividends then seemed very remote.

This Company's problem was the perfecting of its car and the placing of its factory upon an efficient and economical operating basis. It had selected a type of car which practically sold itself.

Within 2 years from the time this Master Car Builder became Production Manager the Company paid cash dividends amounting to 117%. Later dividends were so big and so frequent that the Company's stock became worth $1,185 per share. Motor circles were not surprised at this accomplishment. This man had already placed another world-famous company upon a manufacturing basis which brought it into the giant dividend class. Motor car manufacturers classed him as "The miracle man of the automobile industry." The Company's profits were so enormous that stock originally costing $1,000 became worth $16,850 within a year and 10 months after operations were started.

"Miracle Man" of Motor Car Production.

Purchasing Agent Known as Buying Wizard

In Detroit in 1910 several automobile men, with limited capital, associated themselves together to manufacture motor trucks, in a small building containing about 1,200 feet of floor space.

That Company today is the most prosperous truck manufacturing company in the world, and one of the largest, its factory covering acres of floor space. Last year it paid dividends amounting to 120%. The stock is worth almost ten times par.

In other words, if you had bought $1,000 worth of that company's stock at par in the beginning, you would have received dividends last year amounting to $1,200, and you could today sell your stock for about $10,000. This, in addition to dividends of many hundred per cent received prior to last year.

One of the prime factors in that business, or in any other manufacturing business, is the Purchasing Agent. No automobile manufacturing company can be successful in a big way unless its parts and material are purchased on an advantageous basis as to prices, terms and conditions.

The man who accomplished that important task at the beginning, even then an expert, has since become known throughout the industry as a wizard in securing quality, low prices and favorable terms for his company.

Purchasing Wizard of the Motor Car Industry

Master Organizer Forms World's Fastest Growing Automobile Company

These Miracle Men of the Motor Industry, fresh from their triumphs with the companies mentioned, have been brought together by a Master Organizer into the Elgin Motor Car Corporation of Chicago, which is now admitted to be "The fastest-growing Automobile Company in the world."

This man, who founded and financed the new Company and is now driving it ahead at such wonderful speed, had already founded, financed and served as Vice-President and General Manager of a company that is today one of the most prosperous truck manufacturing concerns in America.

Under his broad, constructive planning and vigorous execution, this last named man, the Vice-President and General Manager of the Elgin Motor Car Corporation, and its moving spirit, there has been established in Chicago a modern motor car factory that is now building and selling cars and seems destined to excel even the wonderful dividend records already established by himself and his co-workers from Detroit and Cleveland. Motor car men everywhere are predicting that these expert automobile executives, who have already written the most brilliant dividend chapters in the history of Motordom, will again astonish the industrial world with their accomplishments.

Master Organizer, Who Has Given Chicago the Greatest Operating Executives in Motordom

7,753 Persons Buy Elgin Stock

The Elgin Company never advertised its stock in any newspaper until a few weeks ago, yet more than 4,300 of Chicago's representative business and professional men, including many bankers, eagerly bought stock in that company, which owns its splendid new factory building and is strongly financed. More than 3,400 persons from other localities, representing almost every state in the Union, learning of this wonderful opportunity, have also become a part of the army of stockholders that is now "boosting" the Elgin Company and its cars.

With the object of getting as many stockholders as possible in various localities who will continually "boost" and help sell its cars, the Elgin Corporation has decided that 500 shares shall be the maximum amount any individual may purchase, and no subscription will be accepted for less than five shares. The limited amount remaining unsold will not last long. It will then be withdrawn here and offered for sale in other localities, in order to widen the Company's sphere of influence and help secure additional stockholder-"boosters" elsewhere, who we believe will, co-operating with our wonderful operating staff, eventually make the Elgin Corporation realize the ambitions of its founder by becoming the greatest motor car manufacturing institution in the world.

In every city block of such automobile centers as Detroit, Cleveland and Indianapolis are found persons who sorrowfully tell of opportunities they once had to "get in on the ground floor" of new automobile companies, but who were too skeptical, or who procrastinated until it was too late, and saw their more fortunate friends and neighbors started on the road to wealth by a small investment, while they are still bemoaning their "bad luck."

Ask us for full information about the Company, its Officers, Executives and what has made it "The Fastest-Growing Automobile Company in the World." We will also tell you more about these wonderful men and how they are now bringing the Elgin Corporation into the big dividend class at a rate that threatens to establish new world's records.

Fill out and mail the Reservation Form. It will place you under no obligation whatever, and may result in bringing you bigger dividends, and more frequent dividends, than the average business man ever dreams of realizing upon his investments. The company reserves the right to withdraw this offer at any time without notice and further reserves the right to reject or reduce the amount of any application.

PRIVATE SECRETARY.

An alert young man of 29, with university training, desires a connection with corporation official or large business man, who wants to be relieved of details with a feeling that they will be well taken care of. I have had varied stenographic and correspondence experience and for the last three years have been engaged in the general court reporting field, but find the opportunities for betterment extremely limited. Hence a change at this time while there is plenty of enthusiasm, optimism, and "pep."

I can make good if given an opportunity to show my worth and I feel that somewhere there is a busy executive who is in urgent need of a live, aggressive, clean cut young man of my qualifications. I have a knowledge of sales and advertising work, having been assistant advertising manager for a large packing house. I am accustomed to meeting "big men" as during my service as court reporter have come in contact with the largest railroad and business officials of the country, in connection with federal investigations.

I am out for big game because I know I have the required ammunition, not necessarily in the matter of immediate compensation, although I confess an apprentice's wage will not be considered, but more particularly am I concerned in making an affiliation where industry, faithfulness, and ambition to forge ahead will be duly appreciated and manifested in some substantial form.

Can accept engagement on short notice and furnish high class references testifying to my integrity, initiative, and reliability. Address D 66, Tribune.

The more you have earned the more consideration you will get; no one considered who has not earned $500 or more a month. Position demands ability to sell. Every man from the executive down singly and collectively must know industry, the heads of industry, and how to talk to and sell such men. Must know power plants, technically and practically; must know the operators and how to sell them. A clean cut, impressive, powerful character alone will fill the bill. To such a man we offer a rare opportunity to establish himself with the leading concern in its field, where you will be given the fullest co-operation at the widest scope for your talents; salary and commission. Address P C 487, Tribune.

SALESMEN—

$5,000 per year is what we offer if you will join our organization in our sales department.

You are schooled to be a salesman first—then this education is put into actual practice under one of our assistant managers. We correct your weaknesses and make it possible for you to call yourself a finished salesman, not a mere order taker.

Remember, the most universally successful salesmen are the real estate men. They are bigger earners than any other salesmen and invariably save their earnings in real estate, which is the only commodity which will not melt.

You can start by attending our salesman's night school, which is held on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9 p. m.

No tuition.

Our Platform

OFTEN A CANDIDATE for land cannot decide where he wants it. The more he confers with others the more undecided he becomes until he gets as many notions as there are state delegations. Then comes mental deadlock, postponement, and loss of opportunity. The candidate for land cannot conform to everybody's opinions. He has to decide for himself, and if he satisfies his wife and children that is the strongest kind of support. He can run independently, get elected, and establish his home in a White House on his own land, where he can be truly progressive.

EVERY ARGUMENT is on the side of staying near home, and the Swigart Tract in Michigan's Fruit Belt is the nearest spot that offers any considerable selection of good cheap land.

A MAN CAN DO AS WELL in the Swigart Tract as he can any place east, west, north, or south. The soil responds quickly to intelligent cultivation, the climate is protected from extremes by Lake Michigan, and the transportation facilities help greatly when it comes to shipping products. Distribution is made easier by having on the edge of the Tract the local markets of Ludington and Manistee, which, by the way, are "some" towns with their combined populataion of 30,000.

THERE IS NO GREATER FACTOR in the high cost of living than distribution; and competition of lake against rail transportation makes low rates that enable producers to ship to the markets in Chicago, Milwaukee, Grand Rapids, and Detroit, and get that much bigger share of the consumer's dollar. The freight rates are low anyway because of the nearness to these big markets—from 4 to 9 hours' ride. Just compare this condition with the "Big Dragon" of marketing expenses that localities in the far south or west are up against.

THE SOIL, THE CROPS, the natural advantages; briefly—rich, warm, sandy loam, level land; pure water everywhere, in creeks, inland lakes, driven wells, and plentiful rainfall; remarkable yields of potatoes and all vegetables, clover, vetch, rye; as good crops of hay, wheat, and oats as in any neighboring states; and apples, peaches, pears, cherries, plums, grapes, and berries of finest flavor. No district offers better opportunities for the fruit grower, the general farmer, the dairyman, the stockman, the poultryman, the truck grower, and the specialty farmer.

OUR PLATFORM—Uniformly liberal to all; your choice from a thousand 40 acre pieces [many of them recently added to the Tract]; prices, $15 to $25 per acre, and a very large selection at $17 to $20 per acre; terms as low as $25 to $50 down and $7 to $10 per month on 40 acres, or 5% off for all cash. Titles perfect. You deal with the owner direct. If you should die after the land is partly paid for the land will be deeded at once to your family free from any further payments. References, First National Bank of Chicago.

IN YOUR CAMPAIGN for a home, a farm, a business, consider the Swigart Platform. If its generous selection and its liberal terms appeal to you, then you cannot do better than take the short trip that will enable you to thoroughly investigate any and all of the statements you have heard from me or others in regard to this Tract. In the meantime I want you to send me your address so that I can mail you literature describing the lands and conditions in detail, and you will then go on the trip well posted. Call if you can and also get a large map of the Tract and see samples of this year's alfalfa, rye, wheat, and vetch that I have on display. For a small investment you may also wish to investigate residence and business lots in two new growing towns on main line railroad, summer resort lots on the Welliston chain of lakes, and ten acre tracts just right for fruit, truck, and poultry located near town.

OUR LANDS are only a short trip from Chicago. Come on our next special excursion leaving our Chicago offices at 11:20 a. m., Tuesday, Nov. 14th. Round trip rate $12.50, including railroad fare, meals, and lodging. We return to Chicago at 7:20 a. m. the following Friday. Automobiles and guides free. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

A TREMENDOUS OPPORTUNITY—

To make a quick sale we offer 12,000 acres of hardwood timber land [70,000,000 ft. of merchantable timber] in Northeastern Arkansas, at a price which the lumber alone will more than pay.

A SAFE Investment

A Rebuilt Cadillac Is the Safest Investment It Is Possible to Make.

Rebuilt Cadillacs are superior to any new car at the same price. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in the new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them. We have a variety of body styles to choose from at the present time.

NOTE NEW PRICES

1916 Victoria coupe	$1,750
1916 7 pass. Touring	1,550
1915 Salon Touring	1,250
1915 7 pass. Touring	1,250
1914 Touring	800
1913 Limousine	1,250
1913 Touring	700
1912 Touring	500

A few Cadillacs which have not been rebuilt but are in good condition will be sold at substantial reductions.

We also have a very select list of miscellaneous makes at attractive prices.

ALASKA A LAND OF CHARITY AND 'TALL' STORIES

Citizens Put Destitute Man in Jail to Protect Him from Cold.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

[Copyright: 1916: By Frank G. Carpenter.]

FAIRBANKS, Alaska.—[Special.]—"The winter is coming and Monte Terrill will have to go to jail that the public may be able to take care of him."

This remark gives in a nutshell one of the strange conditions in the heart of Alaska. This country has no accommodations for vagrants and no laws for the needy poor. It has one pioneer home, but that is at Sitka, on Baranof island, about 2,000 miles from where Monte lives.

Monte Terrill is a character. His whole life has been a fight against misfortune, and now, although blind and lame, he is not willing to give up the battle.

Both Feet Out Off.

Years ago when he first came to the Klondike he was one of the most ambitious, determined, and industrious of the sourdoughs. He underwent all sorts of hardships and one day when out trapping sank through some rotten ice he attempted to cross and was wet to the waist.

The thermometer was 25 degrees below zero and his feet were frozen to such an extent that one had to be amputated to the ankle and the other taken off half way to the knee. He had a pair of artificial feet made, and with them again took up the battle of life. He got about so well on his wooden pins that but few knew of his troubles, and he succeeded in obtaining a job with a gang working on the Copper River railroad.

At that time he was quartered with a number of other men in a bunkhouse. He did not want his state known for fear he would lose his position. But one night when in his bunk, having taken off his false feet and laid them beside him, the string attached to one of them hung down and tickled the man in the bunk below. The man gave the string a jerk and the wooden foot came down and kicked him in the face. The man was a mean fellow and he reported Monte's condition to the boss, and as a result he was fired.

Cuts Wood for Living.

After that, Monte went about doing odd jobs. He worked at anything he could get, drifting from camp to camp. Finally, he settled in a cabin on the River Cheena, not far from Fairbanks, where he cut wood for the steamers. For several years he earned his living in that way.

Then his eyesight failed, and it was pitiful to see how he tried to keep the people from knowing his misfortune. When he heard a man coming he would straighten up and start to walk about boldly, often running into a tree or a fence. He was offered assistance, but would not take it.

Last year he was known to be suffering for lack of food and was arrested on a charge of vagrancy and was sentenced to jail for the winter. This was in order that the citizens might have a legal right to take care of him. Even then, he complained, saying he wanted to go back to his cabin, and that he knew he could in some way earn enough to care for himself.

The above story was told me by Mr. L. T. Erwin, who is now chief of police and United States marshal at Fairbanks.

Criminals Kept in Cages.

I went with Marshal Erwin through the jail in Fairbanks. The criminals are kept in cages of iron so arranged that they can be seen on all sides. There were nine in the cells at the time of my visit.

I asked the marshal as to the crime of this part of Alaska. He replied:

"The territory is supposed to be full of bad men, but that is a mistake. The order here is much better than in the southern states, where I was reared. I have lived in this district for eleven years, and during that time only one man has been killed with a pistol.

"The murders that have been committed have been with guns, clubs, or knives. During my term of three years as marshal there have been only two murders in my whole district."

"Have you the typical bad man who now and then comes in and shoots up the town?"

"No. I have been in Alaska eighteen years and have never heard of such a case. Our people are lawabiding, and in that respect they stand as high as any people of the world. Burglary is almost unknown. I lived in Fairbanks eight years before I locked my door.

Alaskans Charitable People.

"The people are charitable. They often spend $500 or more to send a sick man to Seattle, and they always give a little money to keep the man until he gets on his feet. As an instance of the generosity of Fairbanks take the San Francisco earthquake. The news of it was telegraphed here one Saturday. There was a meeting that night at Eagle hall and by noon the next day $20,000 had been collected and started on its way to the sufferers.

"A month later there was a fire in Fairbanks and almost the whole town was burned. The people outside remembered what we had done for San Francisco and offers of help poured in. They were all refused, the mayor sending this message: 'We thank you all, but we can carry our own skillet and don't need any help.'"

It is surprising that there is not more crime in Fairbanks. The city is in the heart of the wilds, and it is surrounded by mining camps that have produced about $8,000,000 worth of gold dust and nuggets. At times the banks have been loaded with gold, and every camp has its bags of gold which are washed out at every cleanup.

Steamers Carry Millions.

Millions of dollars' worth of gold is annually carried out on the steamers that go down the Tanana and up the Yukon to White Horse. The present method of transporting this treasure is an old fashioned iron safe which has handles on each side. The safe is left out in the open under the deck, the handles being chained to the mast.

In the past the gold was kept in a strong room, and now and then thefts were attempted.

About ten years ago a man planned to rob a steamer of one of the big gold shipments and came from the outside to do it. He got a job as night watchman on the steamer and learned just how the gold was handled. One night he broke into the strong room and took out two boxes, each of which contained $60,000 in gold dust. He pried open one of the boxes and removed $40,000 worth of the gold, and in its place put about the same amount of buckshot which he had procured at the stores of Fairbanks for the purpose.

Drunken Men Steal Chest.

After closing and fastening the box he carried it back and laid it down on the deck beside the other box which he had taken out. It was lighter than the box which had nothing but gold, but he expected to put the two boxes back into the strong room. Before he was able to do so, however, two drunken men came aboard. They stumbled over the gold chests and realized what they were.

They concluded to steal one, and picked up the lightest one in which was the shot and dropped it over the side of the vessel. Later on they got it out and buried it in the woods. All this happened that night and while they were half drunk. After burying the gold they went to sleep. The next morning one of them grew frightened at what he had done and told the agent of the steamship company about it, offering to show him where the gold was.

In the meantime the loss had been discovered by the men on the steamer. They came ashore and went with the agent to the woods and found the box. They opened it, and, lo! it was two-thirds full of shot. It was then remembered that Miller had been buying shot and he was arrested. He denied having stolen the gold, but was convicted and sent to the penitentiary.

Fairbanks has long since become a settled community, but many of the customs of early mining days are still in effect. One is the habit of nicknames. There are few "misters," and every one calls his fellow by his first name or a nickname.

One man is known as "Short and Dirty," another "Skookum Bill," and "Sour Dough Bill," and "the Malamute Kid." The latter is noted for his fine malamute dogs.

Uses Snake for Cane.

Another extravagant story is a zoological one. The people here say that Alaska is as free of snakes as was Ireland after the advent of St. Patrick. They say that the only snake that ever came into the territory was one brought from the outside in a bale of timothy hay. This occurred about two years ago.

As the story goes, the snake arrived on the edge of the winter and crawled out of the bale when the thermometer was about 40 degrees below zero. It immediately froze solid, and as it lay there was found by an Indian chief. It was a long snake, and the head had bent over so that it looked like a cane. The chief used it as a cane all that winter, and he is said to be using it still. He buries it in the prehistoric ice under the moss as the spring comes on, and when the thermometer falls brings it out as a prop to keep him from falling.

THE HUMAN PULMOTOR

After a Ten Months Old Baby Girl Had Been Suffocated by Gas and Given Up for Dead, This New York Ambulance Surgeon Breathed Into Her Lungs for Ten Minutes and Restored Her to Consciousness.

©UNDERWOOD&UNDERWOOD

Ambulance Surgeon O'Connor, one of the youngest doctors on the staff at Bellevue hospital, New York, jumped into the rôle of life saver in a unique way a few days ago. Ten months old Winifred Linderman had been overcome by gas. Neighbors had failed to revive her and she was given up for dead. When the ambulance arrived Dr. O'Connor, finding she was too tiny for him to use the pulmotor upon, pressed his own lips to hers and, breathing regularly and strongly, forced her lungs to expand and contract with his. After about ten minutes, with Dr. O'Connor at the point of exhaustion, the child stirred and began to breathe a little. This is believed to be the longest human pulmotor test ever attempted.

MUNDELEIN ASKS MONEY FOR POPE

Last Sunday in November Set Aside for Peter's Pence Collection.

An appeal for financial help for Pope Benedict XV. to enable him to go on with the various works of the Catholic church throughout the world was officially issued to the clergy and laity of the archdiocese of Chicago by Archbishop George William Mundelein yesterday. In a letter to be read to the Catholic people in all churches under the rule of Archbishop Mundelein, the last Sunday of this month is designated as the day for the special Peter's Pence collection this year, on which in every church gifts for the pope will be received.

"The holy father is in want and he appeals to us for help," the archbishop says in his official communication. "It is to the Catholics of this country that the Holy See looks and calls upon to take up now some of the burdens hitherto borne by other nations.

Not for Himself.

"Perhaps because of our own needs we were not asked to, nor did we do much for our holy father in the past. But now, when he is in need, not for himself, but for the government of the church, for the scattered, far away missions, for the poor, the destitute, the widowed and the fatherless, who have stretched out their arms to him for succor, and who have not pleaded in vain, when he has no one else to appeal to, now it is different. It is a direct appeal to our loyalty, it is a challenge to our generosity, it is a test of our love for our church and its head.

"By far the largest portion of the funds to meet expenses has in the past come from the Catholic nations of Europe, who counted it a filial privilege, like children away from home, to contribute to the father's support and comfort. The most generous was the smallest of them all, the little kingdom of the Belgians. Next came Austria and France, for both countries seemed to vie with each other in liberally contributing to the support of Christ's vicar on earth.

Tells of Belgium's Plight.

"But within the last two years all this is changed; war with all its horrors has spread over the face of Europe and brought misfortune to these lands. Poor little orphaned Belgium, the once prosperous, progressive country, has been trampled under the feet of an invading army, and its towns and villages destroyed by the engines of war. Once it was a land of plenty; today it can hardly give bread to its women, work to its men, milk to its babies.

"Every one who on Sunday, Nov. 26, makes a donation in the churches will be recorded in a formal report to be made for each and every Catholic parish."

U. S. PROMULGATES RULES ON GRAI NSTANDARDS ACT.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Following public hearings, held in a number of cities, the secretary of agriculture today prescribed and promulgated rules and regulations governing the administration of the United States grain standards act, to become effective Dec. 1, 1916.

The regulations define terms, provide for the licensing of inspectors, appeals from inspectors' decisions, the reference and disposition of disputes as to grade, and the taking of samples in appeals and disputes.

The regulations also provide for the assessment of departmental fees and charges, the making of reports on shipments of uninspected grain, the holding of hearings governing misgrading and misrepresentations as to grade, and other procedure under the act.

Hog market at Chicago yesterday had a dull opening at steady to 5c higher prices. The demand from packers developed unexpected aggressiveness as the day progressed, however, and many late sales were at a full 10@15c gain over Friday's best figures. Final prices showed hogs to have made a sharp recovery from the low point of the week, standing 30@35c higher than a week ago. Pigs were up 25c. The average price of the 201,000 hogs this week, however, was only $9.85, or 10c lower than last week's, and the lowest made here since the first week of last October.

Record prices were made in the cattle market at Chicago this week, in spite of the fact that receipts were liberal for this time of the year. Final quotations made the cheaper grades of steers 35c to 50c higher than a week ago, while the higher priced lots were up 25@40c. The top for the week was $12.05, highest ever paid here for open market cattle, while the bulk ranged from $7.90 to $10.75. Cows and heifers closed 15@35c higher than a week ago, while calves made an advance of 50@75c. Receipts totaled 66,400 and compared with arrivals of 51,500 a year ago.

SHEEP.

With fresh receipts of 3,000 head, the sheep and lamb market closed in a strong position at the highest prices ever known here at this time of the year for all classes, while better values than ever known at any time of the year were quoted for certain grades. Additional sales of native lambs were made at the new record mark of $11.90 and the market for natives and rangers closed 75c to $1.00 higher than a week ago. Sheep were up 25c and yearlings showed a gain of 50c for the week. Receipts for the week were about 98,000 head, or 13,000 smaller than last week's and 16,000 larger than a year ago.

GRAIN FUTURES HIGHER; EXPORT SALES ARE LARGE

Markets Strong at Finish, with Corn Going to New High Levels—Trade Active.

Wheat futures closed strong yesterday, a late rally carrying prices up close to best levels of the day. Net advances of ⅜@1½c were made, July showing most strength. The market covered an irregular course during the session, displaying considerable nervousness, and was under much pressure at times from longs, who were disposed to take profits in sight rather than stand for possible unfavorable developments over Sunday. It was noted, however, that there was good commission demand for wheat on the dips, and further accumulations by houses with seaboard connections.

Reports of big export business were responsible for the late display of strength. Seaboard advices claimed that Friday's export sales of wheat came close to 2,000,000 bu, while at least 1,000,000 bu were taken yesterday. Cash wheat here was firm under light receipts and local shipping sales were 20,000 bu.

Argentine News Again Factor.

Argentine news was again due for much attention from the trade, and it continued to be of a bullish character. One private cable stated that heavy frost had done great damage to growing wheat and estimated the exportable surplus from that country as 23,000,000 bu, or about one-fourth of normal. Canadian advices indicated that the British government was more anxious as regards getting the crop of that country, and that no concentrated holdings would be permitted to advance prices. Liverpool spot wheat was unchanged, with te cargo market firm under light export offerings.

World's wheat shipments this week will again be under weekly foreign requirements. Northwest receipts for the week totaled 3,894 cars, against 10,826 a year ago, while Winnipeg had 4,818 cars, against 9,744 last year. Primary receipts yesterday were 1,633,000 bu, compared with 2,840,000 bu a year ago.

New High Mark for Corn.

Corn sold at new high levels, with the market strongest at the finish. Resting spots were 2@2½c higher than previous closing figures. Trade was quiet early and the market suffered from pressure by one of the leading longs, but active buying appeared in the final hour and prices were quick to respond. This buying was encouraged largely by reports of big export sales of corn at the seaboard. Rough weather is promised for much of the belt and is likely to interfere with the movement of corn to market. Receipts here today were lighter at 90 cars and cash corn was steady to 2c higher. Local shipping sales were 40,000 bu.

Increased offerings were reported from some sections of the belt and there was some hedging pressure in the market yesterday. Liverpool spot corn had a further advance of 1@1½d and Argentine news was unfavorable. Primary receipts were 841,000 bu, against 694,000 bu a year ago.

Oats Also Display Firmness.

Oats rallied with other grains and closed ½@⅝c higher. Longs were selling oats freely during the forenoon and prices were depressed in spite of good buying by houses with export connections. Numerous shorts were forced in on the late advance. The seaboard reported 700,000 bu oats sold for export. Argentine news was bullish and foreign requirements are large. Cash oats here were steady to ½c lower, with shipping sales 80,000 bu. Local receipts of oats this week were 2,960,000 bu, while 2,829,000 bu were shipped. Primary receipts yesterday were 957,000 bu, against 1,591,000 bu a year ago.

Hog product closed lower, although making substantial rally from low points. Profit taking sales by scattered holders brought prices down to a materially lower level at the outset, but there was a better feeling later, and buying of an investment character, as well as support from packing interests appeared. A further gain of 1s was made in spot lard at Liverpool. Hog prices at the yards were higher. Receipts of hogs at western centers totaled 897,400 head for the week, compared with 689,000 head last week and 532,000 a year ago. Local meat shipments this week were 1,692,000 lbs, against 18,277,400 lbs a year ago, while lard shipments were 4,243,000 lbs, against 8,264,500 lbs last year.

Rye Prices Advance.

Rye was 12c higher, with No. 2 selling at $1.49@1.50. Receipts were 12 cars. Barley ruled 1c higher. Malting was quoted $1.05@1.25 and sold $1.04@1.24; feed and mixing quotable 85c@$1.01, with sales at 90c@$1.01; screenings were quoted 50@85c and skimmings 65@70c, former selling at 68@78c. Receipts, 60 cars.

Timothy seed was quiet. Year, $5.40 bid, $5.60 asked; March, $5.75 bid and $6.00 asked; cash lots sold $3.65@4.70. Clover seed ruled quiet, with cash lots quoted $12.00@17.00.

Duluth flax closed 2¼@3½c higher. Cash on track, $2.93; December, $2.91½, and May, $2.96. Receipts, 130 cars. Minneapolis was 2½c higher, with cash on track $2.87½@2.91½; receipts were 66 cars. Winnipeg closed 2¼@4c higher. December, $2.68½, and May, $2.77. Receipts, 36 cars.

Cubas were quoted at 5¼c cost and freight, equal to 6.52c for centrifugal and 5.65c for molasses. Refined sugar was steadily held at 7.50@7.60c for fine granulated, but trading was light and there were only moderate withdrawals on old contract. COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Trade was unusually active in the coffee market for a Saturday, sales for the day aggregating 91,500 bags. The trend of prices was slightly downward, although considering the volume of business the undertone was well maintained. Opening 2 to 4 points lower, futures kept within a narrow range all the forenoon, with final prices 1 to 4 points lower. Heavy selling by trade interests was met by a good demand for Wall street and cotton exchange houses, which sustained the market. December sold at 8.25c; March from 8.40c to 8.38c, and May from 8.50c to 8.48c. IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Money was in moderate supply and discount rates were easy today. The stock market passed a dull session and the members are hoping that a petition now being signed will result in making Saturdays a holiday generally. The chief business was in oil and diamond shares and Peruvian issues at rising prices. The investment section was stagnant and American securities were idly steady. Bar silver, 34 1-16d per ounce. Money, 5 per cent; discount rates, short bills, 5½@5⅝ per cent; three months, 5½@5⅝ per cent.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Prices were steady on the bourse today. Rents, 61f 10c. Exchange on London, 27f 81½c. Five per cent loans, 87f 65c.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The cotton market was irregular on Saturday, with the chief feature a sharp advance in new crop positions which carried October up to 18.09c or 29 points above Friday's close. Old crop positions were somewhat easier for the day, the entire market closing steady with prices 3 points lower to 30 net higher.

The market opened firm and unchanged to 27 net higher. The buying of new crops was attributed to Liverpool and spot houses, the latter being sellers of July against it. Old crop positions, notwithstanding the heavy liquidation of Friday, and the evidence that the embargo talk on grain, which was largely responsible for it, was not a government matter, but referred to the action of several roads in checking shipments of grain to the east, failed to get any good support and were generally lower after the opening except when a former bull leader came into the market and bid January up to 1945 towards midday.

Once the support was withdrawn, however, and the market eased off under Wall street and New Orleans selling, attended by bearish reports as to sentiment in the latter market until July reached 19.29c, which was lowest of the day, as new buying seemed to develop around 19.30c for that contract. NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 11.—A steady feeling prevailed in the cotton market today, with prices at a small rise as the result of bullish accounts for the spot department. Trading was light and much of the demand appeared to come from recent short sellers. In the early trading prices were 6 to 13 points up; late in the session they were 12 to 13 up. The close was at a net gain of 5 to 8 points. Futures:

HEAD OF ILLINOIS MINERS MAKES COUNTER CHARGES

Farrington Calls Accusations Against Him "Damnable" and Brands Two of Foes "Money Takers."

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 11.—Denial of every charge made against him was entered today by President Frank Farrington at the convention of Illinois miners called to try him.

"I say this is the most damnable indignity ever forced upon an official of the United Mine Workers of Illinois," the president said. "It is also the greatest outrage ever imposed against Illinois miners."

Farrington made a counter charge that Joseph Summers and T. J. McDonald of Christopher had accepted money from Frank O. Lowden to win support of miners. Farrington had not reached the charge that he received money from Frank L. Smith when adjournment was taken at noon.

John Walker, delegate from Westville, and president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, branded false an article printed in the Decatur Labor World in which he was accused of being unfair to the miners.

PEACE RUMORS REVIVED.

New York, Nov. 11.—Revival of peace rumors, echoes of the recent campaign, and reports of overproduction in certain lines of industry, notably the automobile trade, probably accounted in varying degree for the irregular and at times unsettled tone of today's market.

Speculative issues, including Central Leather, Industrial Alcohol, and less seasoned industrials and equipments, were pressed for sale by the professional element with Mexicans, the latter yielding on advices suggesting fresh disturbances across the southern border. Leather made an extreme decline of 5⅝ points, with 5 for Alcohol, 10 for Bethlehem Steel on a few transactions, 2 to 3 for motors and allied shares, and 1 to 2 for higher grade specialties, marines, and sugars.

U. S. Steel Again Active.

United States Steel was again the most active stock, making an extreme loss of 1½ points, regaining less than half. Rails were consistently heavy, investment issues as represented by Union Pacific and Reading losing more than a point, with Lehigh Valley, Rock Island, and less important shares.

Coppers were the mainstay of the market, particularly Utah, which rose 3½ points to 119¾, a new record, Chino and Ray coppers also selling at new top prices. Metals were at their best in the later dealings and served to effect partial rallies elsewhere.

Petrograd Exchange Weak.

General news of the day included recurrent weakness in exchange on Petrograd, accompanied by unconfirmed reports of a hitch in the negotiations attending the latest Russian commercial credit.

The bank statement was noteworthy for the enormous expansion of almost $98,000,000 shown in the actual loan account, this being reflected in large part by increased deposits. A decrease of more than $25,000,000 in reserves again brings the total excess slightly under $100,000,000. Bonds were irregular on limited dealings.

United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

Annuities Better than Charity.

The subject of annuities has been generally neglected in the United States up to the present time, but it is well worth careful study by both individuals and the state authorities. That nobody should become a public charge unnecessarily, and that as few people as possible become charges upon their relatives is evidently a matter of primary importance, but practically no concerted effort has ever been put forth along this line. There is a vast amount of organized work done every year to pay the steadily increasing bill for maintaining people who cannot support themselves, but little to check the cause of the trouble.

A considerable proportion of the number of families partly supported by charity are in that unfortunate situation because of aged dependents who must be cared for. If all these aged persons had small incomes which could be added to the family purse, in many cases there would be no need of any outside help. Nine-tenths of the aged inmates of poorhouses and various institutions of private charity could live with relatives or friends in comparatively independence if they had a small but certain revenue.

Most of these people could have bought annuities for themselves and would have done so had they been able to foresee the future. A littlep ublic effort years ago to provide annuities on good terms and to interest these people in the subject might have saved a substantial amount from the enormous charity bills of today. Work on this line today will result in a big saving a few years from now.

United Profit Sharing.

L. H. A., Peoria, Ill.: The United Profit Sharing company has been a disappointment to its promoters. Legislation and agitation against trading stamps have injured it. This department advised investors two years ago that the stock at the high prices prevailing was a risky speculation. The company received only $1 a share for its stock. People who bought shares at from $4 to $18.25 paid most of their money, not to the company, but to persons who had obtained the stock at various prices from $1 up and sold out at a profit. Now the company is about to pay a dividend of 75 cents a share and reduce the par value to 25 cents.

Brief Answers.

P. M.: The 5 per cent convertible bonds of the St. Paul railway, secured under the general mortgage of 1914, are a junior issue, but in view of the moderate bonded debt of the road are a conservative investment. They are selling on a 4.65 income basis. As the common stock has sold above par most of the time in the last twenty years, the conversion privilege may have value in the future.

M. S.: Carwen Steel Tool company is a consolidation formed only a few months ago. It has issued no detailed reports. Earnings in the eight months ended Aug. 31 last are said to have been at the rate of 23 per cent a year.

NEW YORK BANKS GAIN DEPOSITS, EXPAND CREDIT

Surplus Reserve Falls Off, but Balancing of Accounts Removes Significance.

The New York bank statement showed large changes with an increase of over $91,000,000 in deposits. The gain thus exhibited was reflected in expansion of $97,000,000 in credit.

The surplus reserve fell away $25,000,000, bringing that item down to $98,868,250. There was such a balancing of various accounts that the figures did not have unusual significance. The statement follows:

The Motor Car Industry.

In answer to a request for his views as to whether the peak of production in motor cars has been reached, A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker corporation, said:

"The saturation point is far off. In fact, it is doubtful if such a point will ever be reached in motor cars any more than in typewriters, sewing machines, or other articles of utility. The United States market alone will absorb for the next five years a volume in excess of 1,000,000 cars annually. Furthermore, counting five years as the average life of an automobile replacement, sales will absorb between 600,000 and 800,000 cars annually.

"In addition, American automobile manufacturers dominate the export market of the world, which should supply a demand for 300,000 cars annually.

Field Not Yet Exhausted.

"The motor car is as necessary and practicable a utility as the telephone. There are 6,500,000 farmers in the United States who can afford to own automobiles, and there are over 4,000,000 wage earners in the cities of the country similarly in a position to own a motor car. Contrasted with these figures, there are only 3,000,000 automobiles in use at the present time."

John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland company, commenting on the same question, said:

"I consider the motor car situation extremely good for this season of the year."

Rock Island Plan Is Ready.

The reorganization plan of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway as drawn up by the joint committee representing the stockholders and debenture holders will be made public tomorrow. The plan differs little from the terms announced during the summer. The assessment on the stock, it is understood, will be $40 a share, which will provide approximately $30,000,000 cash. In return for assessments paid 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock will be issued, dollar for dollar. Holders of the $20,000,000 5 per cent debentures will receive dollar for dollar 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock, according to local interests in the property. The two kinds of preferred stock will all have an equal claim on assets and earnings up to 7 and 6 per cent per annum respectively.

The Peabody committee, which is suing for a foreclosure of the Rock Island refunding mortgage, has not yet formally declared its attitude toward the reorganization plan, but it is expected that the plan will prove satisfactory to the committee.

Bank Share Quotations.

Local bank stocks have become so closely held for investment that there is little trading in them. The public has become so accustomed to enormous earnings, as displayed by many industrial corporations, that the earning capacity of our banking institutions in the last year has appeared extremely moderate. There has been an absence of speculation in this class of security and consequently trading has been on a moderate scale.

Reported sales are as follows: Continental and Commercial National, 257½ to 259; Standard Trust and Savings, 158; National City, 153; Central Trust Company of Illinois, 190.

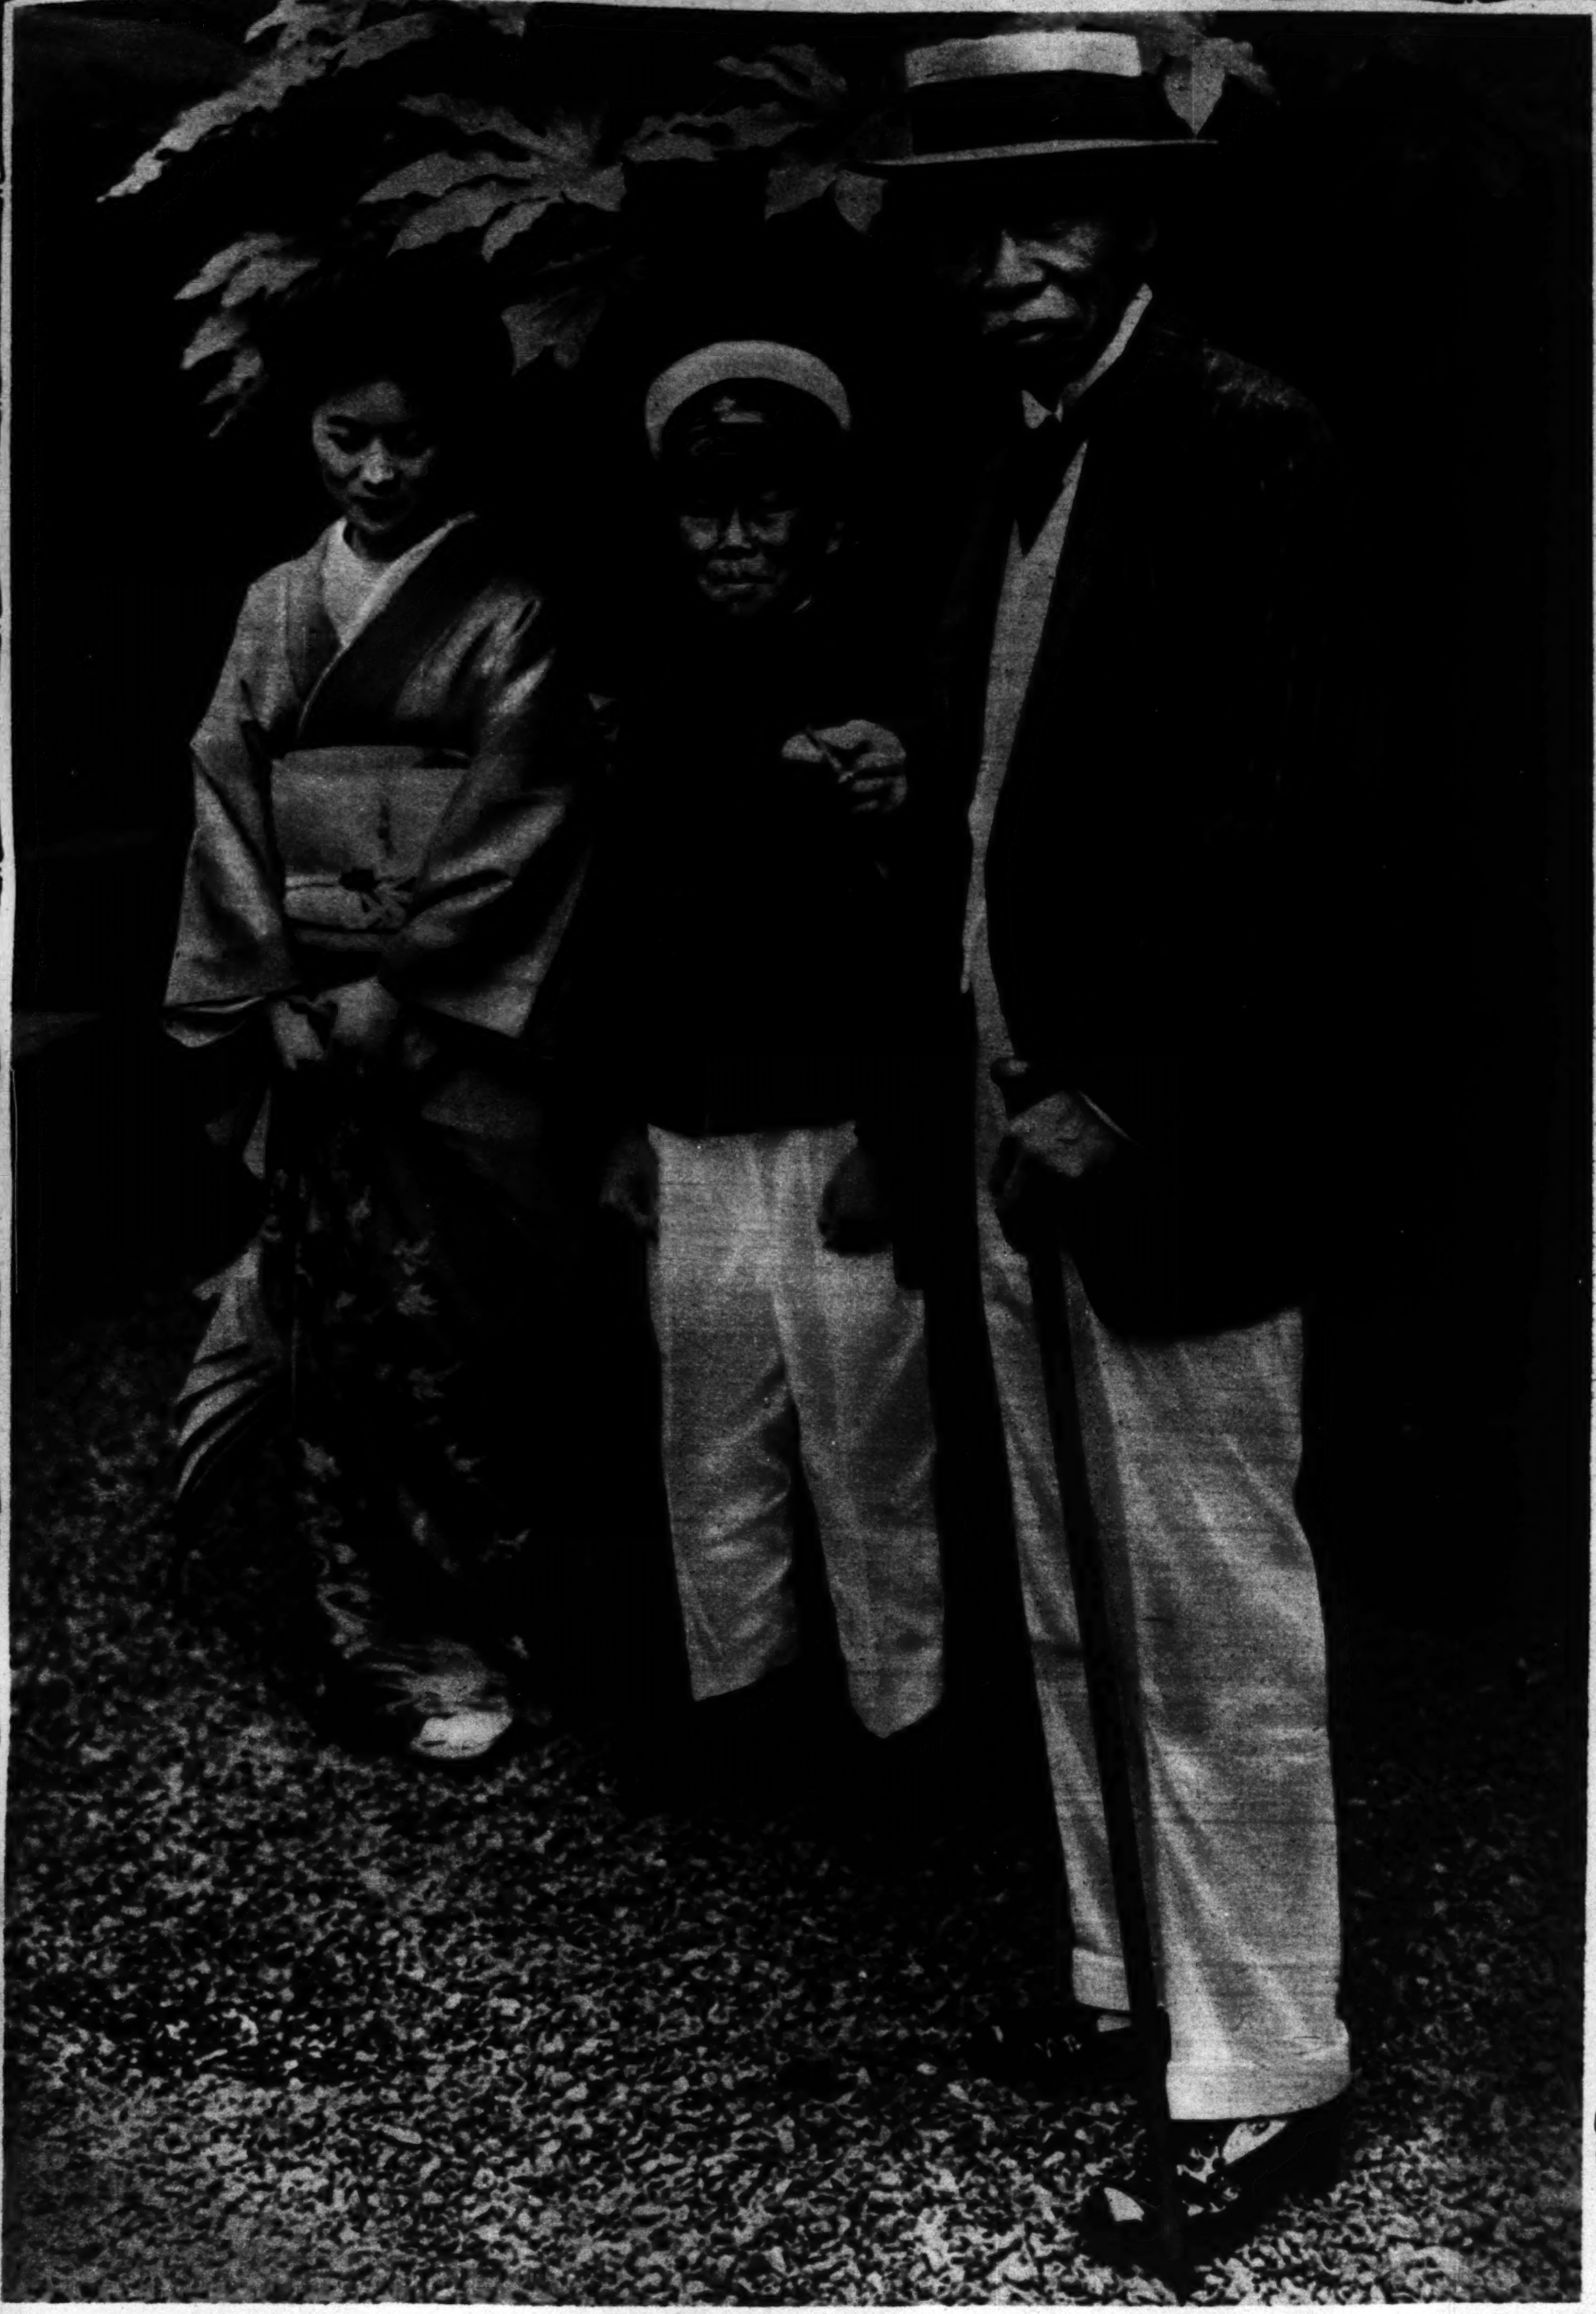
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER
NOVEMBER 12, 1916.



HE'S PUTTING IT OVER 300,000,000 CHINKS—Baron Hayashi, who is shown with his daughter and son on the day he left Tokio for Peking, has recently been appointed minister to China. Before the Russo-Japanese war he was minister to Corea and more recently ambassador to Italy. He is not related to the late Viscount Tadusi Hayashi, Japanese ambassador to the court of St. James, who signed the Anglo-Japanese treaty of alliance. Baron Hayashi's arrival in Peking brought forth much gloomy comment from the Chinese press, many editorials of which stated that the baron's appointment foreboded a revival of Japanese tactics of aggression in China.

Close-ups of Bohemians

Herewith are presented some photographs taken of participants in the "September Morn" ball, the annual dress (or undress) affair of the artists and authors' set of New York's Quatier Latin, Greenwich Village, Washington Square. They are of the opinion that they are the only real bohemians in America.

Don't say woolens can't be washed in hot water

Many a young mother hesitates over the first washing of baby's clothes—actually dreads to risk the precious little garments to soap and water.

Will the soft, fluffy woolens shrink and grow harsh?

Will they come out of the wash with their fluffy softness all gone?

Don't hesitate for a moment.

Thousands of women have found that there is one absolutely safe way to wash these little treasures.

Get a package of Lux at your grocer's, or in department stores, and wash them the Lux way.

Shake these pure soap flakes into hot water, whisk them into a lather—such a rich, bubbly lather you never saw!

Everything comes out like new! Baby's woolen blankets are fluffy and white as a snowdrift; the wee little shirts stay soft and fleecy; and the stockings—they are just as roomy and comfortable as the day they were bought! Shrinking? Not a thread.

Lux won't injure anything that pure water alone won't injure.

No matter what soap you use now—see for yourself what a remarkable difference Lux makes. Until you do, you will never believe it possible to get such wonderfully soft, comfortable woolens. At grocery and department stores. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.
